CHINESE ARGUE WHILE 2 AMERICANS FACE DEATH

Negotiations for Release of Captives Delayed by Bickerings — Bandits Warn That Four Prisoners Will Be Killed Unless Demands Are Met in 48 Hours.

SEVEN PRISONERS ALREADY SLAIN

Chinese Troops, Unpaid for 18 Months, Said to Be Selling Ammunition to Brigands — Diplomats to Make New Representations.

By the Associated Press.

PEKING, May 19.—Fifteen foreigners, six of them Americans, some of them ill, all of them weary, bruised and foot-sore, poorly fed and worse clad, tonight are looking death in the face in the Paotzuku hills of Shantung province as they approach the end of their second week as captives of the bandits who raided the Shanghai-Peking express near Suchow, on May 6.

"If the foreign and Chinese Governments are unable to satisfy the brigands by Tuesday that their terms for the release of the prisoners will be met, and the robbers' chieftain makes good his threat, two of the Americans and two Britishers have but little more than forty-eight hours to live.

They will be shot as a warning that the marauders mean to force compliance with their demand unquoted their chief's ultimatum sent out Saturday.

"Pleading for Lives."

"We are pleading for our lives," and unless Peking, Washington and London realize that the bandits are ready to sacrifice their own lives and those of all their captives in their fight for reinstatement in the Chinese Government, immune from punishment," we are surely doomed," is the statement made by Leon Friedman, one of the Americans, speaking for all.

Friedman's message, sent to his brother in Shanghai, has stirred the foreign communities of China. In Shanghai tomorrow a mass meeting will be held to pass resolution demanding that the American and British Government guarantee the promises of the Chinese Government to the outlaws and win the freedom of their imprisoned nationals.

Seven Captives Killed.

The shadow of death has descended seven times this week on the bandit prison corrals in the Paotzuku hills. Two of the Chinese prisoners were thrown from the cliffs because their promised ransoms had not been paid, and five other were shot down for failure to obey orders.

One man, Marcel O. Berube, a Frenchman of Shanghai, yesterday was given his freedom with instructions from Wang, the scholarly young bandit leader, to go to Pekin and lay before the Chinese Government and the foreign diplomatic corps the desperate plight of the 15 others.

To Present Ultimatum.

Berube tomorrow will tell his story and present the ultimatum of the outlaws to the diplomats, including Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, American Minister, who has returned to the capital from a trip to Shanghai and the bandit zone.

Two factors apparently have clogged negotiations for the release of the captives. One is the bickering between Chinese officials at Taochwang, who have poured in there by the carload to treat for the prisoners' release.

The other is the bandits' demand, repeated again and again, that because they cannot trust the promises of the Chinese Government, guarantees that their terms will be met must be given from some responsible source. Opposed to this latter position is the stand of the foreign diplomats that the Chinese Government is responsible for the safety of the prisoners and it must obtain their freedom. Friedman says, and Berube says, that unless

183-MILE TROTTING RACE IN AUSTRIA WON BY AMERICAN-BRED MARE

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, May 19.

THE American-bred mare Vienna, the favorite, won the 294 kilometer (about 183 miles) trotting race between Salzburg and Vienna by completing the last stage of the race at 54 kilometers today, ahead of the remaining field of ten horses. Her time for the complete distance, which was run in four stages, was 16 hours, 17 minutes and 17 seconds.

The race, which was conducted by the Vienna Trotting Association in celebration of its anniversary, carried a prize of 100,000,000 kronen ($14,000).

PATRONS OF SLOT MACHINES ARRESTED IN POLICE CAMPAIGN

Three Found Playing Devices in Saloon Taken into Custody. With Proprietors.

In the warfare on slot machines, the police yesterday adopted the new method of arresting customers and charging them with operating a gambling device.

Three men were found playing the machines at Alex Fargo's saloon, 526 South Vandeventer avenue. The machines were supposed to produce chewing gum or mints for each nickel deposited, with occasional prizes in the form of checks for merchandise, but there was no chewing gum or mints in them. Fargo said that was because he had run out of supplies.

Fargo and the three customers were arrested. These said they were Eli Chiesan and Nick Mann, 526 South Vandeventer, and Michael Comlosan, 539 South Vandeventer. Warrants were obtained against all four. The machines were confiscated.

HARDING TO MAKE CANAL TRIP ON SHIPPING BOARD LINER

President Harrison Will Take Him to San Juan, Where American Legion Will Pick Him Up.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—President Harding will patronize the Shipping Board rather than the navy on his voyage this summer through the Panama Canal and to Porto Rico.

Chairman Lasker conferred with him today and made known that he was to sail either from San Diego or Los Angeles on the Shipping Board liner President Harrison. He has not decided yet from which port he will leave. The President Harrison will go through the canal and drop the President's party at San Juan, P. R., where it will be picked up by the Shipping Board vessel American Legion of the Munson Line. The two ships are of the same design and speed.

The American Legion, according to the present plan, will take the President to New York. She will stop at San Juan on her regular run from South America. The cruise through the canal to Porto Rico will be made after the President returns from Alaska. He hopes to crowd both trips into 60 days.

HOUSING TRUST'S INSOLVENCY PLEA SAID TO BE FRAUD

Charge Made by Attorneys for United Home Receivers, Seeking Revocation of Bankruptcy Ruling.

$4,000,000 RECEIPTS IN TEXAS REPORTED

Petition Declares Money Was Used for Bonus Loans, in Contravention of the Declaration of Trust.

Setting aside of a Federal Court order adjudicating as bankrupt the United Home Builders of America, a housing trust, is sought in a motion filed in Federal Court yesterday by attorneys for the receivers of the company in Texas and Missouri. It alleges an admission of insolvency by a trustee, on which the order was issued, was "designed to be a fraud upon the jurisdiction of the Texas District Court in Dallas."

The motion asks for dismissal of two involuntary petitions in bankruptcy filed against the company in Federal Court here, in one of which the adjudication of bankruptcy was ordered.

Legal difficulties of the company are in an involved state, according to attorneys. In addition to the two cases in Federal Court here, a third petition in involuntary bankruptcy is pending against the company in Federal Court at Dallas; a receivership is in effect at Dallas, and a receivership is pending in Circuit Court here.

Another motion seeking removal of the bankruptcy proceedings from the Federal Court here to the Federal Court in Dallas, was filed Friday by a Texas contract holder.

Trustee Admitted Insolvency.

Temporary receivership for the company in Missouri was ordered by Circuit Judge Landwehr on April 20, and State Finance Commissioner Millspaugh was appointed temporary receiver. On May 3, the day before a hearing on whether the receivership order should be made permanent, counsel for George D. Sebring of Portland, Ind., a trustee, appeared in Federal Court, admitted insolvency of the company, and it was adjudicated bankrupt.

When a hearing was held in Circuit Court the following day the bankruptcy order was on of the reasons urged by the company for vacating the receivership. Judge Landwehr has the case under advisement.

Three contract holders of Gainesville, Tex., John M. Maupin, William J. Maddox and E. A. McElrath, are the petitioners in the case in which the adjudication was ordered. The motion filed yesterday declares these contract holders are not creditors of the company, but co-partners, and as such cannot legally institute a bankruptcy action.

The motion declared the United Home Builders owed no persons and had no obligations, except to the contract holders, "who only hold a beneficial interest and right to distributive shares in the assets."

Charge Fraud Was Designed.

Assets of the company aggregating $1,253,000 are in the hands of the receiver in Dallas, G. G. Wright, the motion states, in urging that the bankruptcy order be set aside. "That bankruptcy," the motion continues, "is designed to be a fraud upon the jurisdiction of the Texas District Court of Dallas." It is alleged that Sebring is not the sole trustee, as claimed, and that he had no power to admit insolvency of the United Home Builders, nor to consent to an adjudication of bankruptcy.

The motion is filed in the name of John W. Polk, counsel for the Texas receiver; J. L. Hicks and W. R. Fitzpatrick, all of Dallas, and all contract holders in the housing trust. Counsel for Commissioner Millspaugh are former Judge Vital W. Garesche, Thomas E. Francis and Wilbur B. Jones, Special Assistant Attorney-General, who also represent the Finance Commissioner in receivership suits against 13 St. Louis housing trusts.

A summary is given of the business of the company in Texas, before it was removed to St. Louis a year ago, when William Sacks, St. Louis banker, purchased a half-interest, and then removed to Portland, Ind., last January, when purchased by the Hawkins Mortgage Co. of Portland,

AIRPLANE USED IN SEARCH FOR ONTARIO OUTLAW

Reward Offered for Leo Rogers, Who, After Escaping From Courtroom, Lured Officers to Battle.

ONE CONSTABLE SLAIN, ANOTHER WOUNDED

Fugitive Had Been Held Originally on Concealed Weapon Charge — Determined to "Get" Officers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OTTAWA, Ontario, May 19.—A Provincial Government airplane is being used in the pursuit of Leo Rogers, outlaw, who escaped from court last Wednesday at North Bay by flourishing a fake pistol. He later killed one Constable and wounded another, and then, wounded himself, made his way toward the North woods, pursued by a posse.

The only charge against Rogers when he was in court was carrying a concealed weapon, but he did not want to stand trial, so he fashioned pasteboard to look like a weapon and, covering the court attaches with it, he backed out of the room, jumped into an automobile and compelled the driver to assist him in his escape.

Towns Offers Reward.

Later he lured officials into range and killed Fred Le Febvre and wounded Constable McGovern. He was wounded in the running fight that followed, but continued his flight.

The town of North Bay has offered a reward of $500 for him, dead or alive. Thirteen Provincial Constables are now in the district scouring the country between North Bay and the town of Corbeil.

Where Rogers obtains his supplies of food and ammunition is a mystery, as inquiries have failed to show that he has called on farmers for food or shelter.

How Officers Were Lured.

Rogers had sworn to "get" Le Febvre, Chief of Police Morbey and Magistrate Weemar. Evidently urged on by determination to revenge himself on them, he came into touch with the officers after making a clear getaway Wednesday. He telephoned the North Bay police from a point outside the town, pretending to be a friend of Rogers and telling them where they could get the escaped man.

Subsequent events as narrated by Chief Morbey follow:

"It was just getting dusk as we drove in front of a garage. There was a clearing in front of the building and the lights of the car on the outer wall of the garage made the car stand out distinctly. Le Febvre and I had just got out of the car when two bullets ripped through the air. Rogers was firing from behind a birch tree about 15 yards distant. We ducked immediately and opened fire on the spot whence the bullets seemed to come.

"Rogers replied with a volley. In order to cut him off I detailed McGovern and another constable to make a detour.

"In going through the woods they evidently went too near the spot where Rogers was waiting, for McGovern was shot. Later Le Febvre was killed."

APPLICATION FILED TO SET ASIDE $886,073 TAX ON GOULD ESTATE

Executors Say Personal Property of Mrs. Kingdon Gould Was Not Permanently in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 19.—The executors of the estate of the late Mrs. Kingdon Gould, who died suddenly in Lakewood, N. J., in 1921, today filed an application in Surrogate's Court to set aside assessments of $886,073 made against her personal estate by the State transfer tax appraiser. The appraisal was made on jewelry, furniture, household goods and other personal effects.

The executors claim that the filing of the assessment was an error, as the property in question was not located permanently in the State of New York.

One of the executors was her late husband, George Jay Gould, who remarried after her death and who died in France this week.

Sons of Funston and Aguinaldo Named as Cadets at West Point

Captor and Captive in Filipino War Incident to Be Represented by Offspring of Identical Names.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The names of Frederick Funston, "United States at large," and Emilio Aguinaldo, "Philippine Islands," appear on the list of successful candidates for admission to the Military Academy next July. Thus will the sons of captor and captive in the concluding dramatic scene of the Philippine insurrection be classmates for four years at West Point.

Young Funston, son and namesake of the late Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston, was appointed by President Harding, according to custom with regard to the sons of high army officers who seek to follow their fathers into service. The young Filipino, son of Don Emilio Aguinaldo, leader of the uprising of the Filipinos, first against the Spanish and afterward against the Americans, received his appointment under the law which permits one Filipino to be sent to West Point each year to be trained for service as an officer of the Philippine scouts.

The outstanding incident of General Funston's brilliant military career, which may be said to have begun when he led the 20th Kansas Voluntary Infantry, as its Colonel, to the Philippines in 1898, was his capture of Aguinaldo. It broke the back of the native resistance to American rule and paved the way for peaceful development of the islands.

In the guise of a prisoner, held with a handful of white comrades by a force of friendly natives who posed as members of Aguinaldo's army, the adventurous Kansan penetrated to Aguinaldo's mountain headquarters, effected a dramatic capture and escaped to the American lines with his prisoner. The Filipino ultimately was released on parole, but his insurgent activities were over.

FOUR MORE SCANDAL LETTERS REVEALED IN MAXWELL CASE

Counsel for Accused Composer Turns Over Missives to New York Prosecutor.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Four more "poison pen" letters today were added to the 147, which are alleged to have wrecked many homes in high society.

The latest missives were laid before District Attorney Banton by Nathan Burkan, counsel for George Maxwell, composer, accused of having mailed similar letters involving the name of Mrs. Allan A. Ryan and the other women. Maxwell, through his counsel, has contended that he himself, was the victim of the "poison pen" writer.

Neither Burkan nor Banton would discuss the latest letters nor say to whom they were addressed

VICTORY OF ZEV IN THE KENTUCKY DERBY STUNS GREAT CROWD

RED OUTSTANDING COLOR IN FASHION SHOW AT DERBY

SHOES OF VIVID HUES WERE POPULAR

Notes of St. Louis Society People Who Were at Churchill Downs, and What They Wore.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 19.—Colors mounting to a prismatic riot in the sunshine, a fashion show that was remarkable chiefly for its kaleidoscopic variations of line, shades and combinations, a vast throng which included persons in every walk of life, and from all parts of the country, a thrilling panorama of handsome people, fine clothing, jewels, and beautiful horses, this was Churchill Downs on the day of the forty-ninth Kentucky Derby.

There were frocks with severely plain lines and little or no trimming, frocks wrapped tightly about the figure in the Egyptian mode, frocks with flounced skirts, frocks of velvet and of softly shimmering satin, frocks of gaudy-flowered crepe, and frocks of bewildering combinations that seemed to have a touch of everything that has been heralded as "the thing" in the world of fashion, offset with a multitude of sports costumes ranging from the practical to the frivolous in an ever-shifting rainbow of tints.

Red Most Popular Color.

Glancing over the crowds which thronged the club house and terrace in front of the grandstand between races, even the most casual observer could not but be struck with the pre-eminence of red. In hats, in sport coats, in sweaters, and in touches on all three, red led the field, while close behind were the many shades of brown which are so popular for early summer wear. The ever-popular black and white combinations easily held their own, and perhaps the most stunning costumes seen during the entire afternoon was the imported gowns of white crepe and lace worn with white hat, hose and shoes, and an ermine coat trimmed with black monkey fur.

Many white crepe costumes had touches of black monkey fur which seems to have become again a favorite trimming.

Almond green, yellow, powder blue, lanvin green shade between copenhagen and green, smoked gray, sand, heather brown, violet and orchid, rasberry pink and French blue helped to make of the grandstand and club house a color palette of glory. Nearly all the women wore earrings and many had strands of beads, but the bracelet fad seemingly has run its course, as few were worn. Skirts were ankle length and longer, but did not dim the brightness of the footwear. Slipper and sandal makers had seemingly vied in rivaling the dressmakers for choice of brilliant colors, and vivid red, green, blue and yellow shoes blended with the popular sports clothes and many of the afternoon gowns. There were small hats and large hats, with more than a sprinkle of poke bonnets and a remarkable number of paradise feathers. Rough straw hats, with bright velvet trimming, said to be forerunners of the mid-summer mode, made their appearance, contrasting oddly with the light fabrics of most of the costumes.

St. Louis Society Folks' Gowns.

St. Louis society was not so well represented numerically as in many other years, but a fair sized crowd was present in the gathering at the

SOCIALISTS DEMAND IMPEACHMENT OF TAFT

Attack on Lenine and Trotzky Also Features First Day of Convention.

NEW YORK, May 19.—A demand for the impeachment of William H. Taft, Chief Justice of the United States for accepting an alleged annuity of $10,000 from the Carnegie Corporation and an attack on the Lenine and Trotzky brand of Russian Communism by Alexander Cahan, editor of the Jewish Daily Forward, featured the opening of the national convention of the Socialist party today.

Mr. Cahan declared in an address that Trotzky was a "big bombastic windbag," but he believed he was sincere and that Lenine's physical breakdown was due, in great part, to his moral incapacity.

The Hearst press has been agitating the move against Taft. The resolution was unanimously adopted but none of the delegates expressed views on the subject.

The Committee on Resolutions was instructed to obtain co-operation of trades unions and other bodies in making the demand for Mr. Taft's impeachment nationwide in its scope.

Algernon Lee, former New York Alderman was elected chairman for the first day.

Mr. Cahan in his address said the Russian Communists were more than two-thirds "fakers and grafters" and it was time for the American Socialists to stop temporizing with the Russian Soviet. He deplored the relatively small attendance at the convention saying it did not augur well for the status of the party in the United States

The text of the resolution directed against Taft read:

"Whereas, William Howard Taft, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, has for many years been in receipt of an annuity of $10,000 from the Carnegie Corporation which was undoubtedly granted in recognition of services rendered, and

"Whereas, Said William Howard Taft has continued to accept said annuity since his appointment to the Supreme Court of the United States, and

"Whereas, The acceptance of this annuity coming indirectly from the Steel Trust, the most powerful and predatory corporation in the United States, is not only unethical, but a menace to the integrity of our courts and detrimental to the best interests of the American people; therefore be it

"Resolved, By the National Executive Committee of the Socialist party, that we voice our protest against the continuance of William Howard Taft in his high office, and demand that Congress take steps to secure his resignation or impeachment, and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the press, to William Howard Taft, members of Congress, our affiliated State and local organizations and to the labor unions of the country."

CHEERING OF THE WINNER OF SPORTSMAN VARIETY ONLY

Opinion Seemed to Be General, Based on Performance of Same Horse in Preakness Stakes, That Harry F. Sinclair's Entry in Classic Was Quitter.

ATTENDANCE PLACED IN EXCESS OF 70,000

Good Time but Very Little Profit Seemed to Have Been Had by Practically All St. Louisans Who Witnessed Event.

By JOHN E. WRAY,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 19.—A handsome big brown colt, his head half encased in blinkers, romped past the finish post at Churchill Downs this afternoon about 5 o'clock, his rider sitting easily with hardly a thought of the steel in his boot or the whip in his hand. Behind, scattered over nearly a sixteenth of a mile, trailed a field of 20 crushed Derby Hopes. The free striding winner was Zev, whose wretched failure in the Preakness Stake at Pimlico only one week before had caused him to be branded a "quitter" and practically ignored today.

Just before the Derby, a racing critic who had watched Zev in his recent races rose up and declared himself.

"Harry Sinclear," he declared, "entered Zev in this Derby only to win a $5000 bet that his entry would start. When the field finished Zev will be back there at the furlong pole."

Not Much as a Prophet.

As a prophet, the Eastern critic probably would prove a perfectly good iron worker. Zev took the lead at the start, ran easily in front all the way and stood off all challengers, without being pressed. He was obviously the best horse in the mile and one-quarter contest and deserved all of the $53,625 that the race brought.

The victory cast almost a pall over the record throng attracted to the course by the fame of the race and the many good horses entered. Of the 21 thoroughbreds that went to the post, Zev perhaps was as little backed as any contender in the race. He paid about 20 to 1 for his supporters, while practically the entire field was as well or better supported.

As the field swept past the stand, after the climax, with the riders checking their mounts, there were cheers, but they were plainly of the polite, I-Want-to-Be-Sportsmanlike kind. It's difficult to let out a whale of welcome when the object to be cheered has just trimmed you out of the family plate.

Cheering Lacked Volume.

And as the sweating, panting mounts one by one trekked back to the Judges' stand to the magic whitewashed circle where only winners may enter, the cheer which followed the placing of the floral saddle on Zev, while more hearty was still not of the volume that the winner of the greatest 3-year-old event of the racing season was entitled to. When trainer Dave J. Leary, representing owner Harry Sinclair, stood up in the judges' stand beside the smiling and happy jockey, Earle Sande, and received the commendatory words of Gov. E. P. Morrow of Kentucky, dif-

GERMAN INDUSTRY SAID TO ADVOCATE TERMS OVER RUHR

Leaders Declared Prepared to Mortgage Fourth or Fifth of Possessions to State as a Guarantee.

MEANS TURN TOWARD SOCIALIST PROPOSAL

New Front, if Carried Out, Would Result in Dropping of Reparation Plan, Based on Foreign Loan.

By Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1923.)

BERLIN, May 19.—Big business evidently has decided to come to terms with France over the Ruhr, and a solution of the reparations problem may, therefore, come of Germany's next offer.

The almost incredible information comes from reliable sources that to release the Ruhr from the French, industry is ready to mortgage a fourth or a fifth of its possessions to the state to form the basis for guaranteeing future indemnity payments.

If this is true, it is an extraordinary change of heart, but as the information comes from the National Association of Industry and many individual concerns, including some of Hugo Stinnes', considerable credence must be given it.

It means coming to the Socialist plan for gold value confiscation of capital, which the industrialists have been fighting for two years. But the serious situation in the Ruhr is accredited with the change, for industry must avoid acting so that the Ruhr would come to believe industry is blocking negotiations.

For State Guarantee Commission.

The new front, if carried out, means dropping the effort to base a reparation settlement on a foreign loan, replacing that scheme by creation of a state guarantee commission holding title over a fourth or a fifth of all private property which could be sold if necessary to meet the guarantee for reparations.

As corroboratory evidence of this change of front, it is declared the fight between Gustav Stresemann, leader of the Conservative Industrials, and Stinnes has been settled. Furthermore, Stinnes' Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung gives the first public hint of the new policy. It asks "closer co-operation between industries and labor and a united front against radicalism from both sides."

The newspaper approaches the subject gingerly, but still it points the new way.

The leader of the People's party, which represents the industrialists, Baron Rheinbaden, pleads the same cause. This is important because it indicates a shift in the industrial position after four months of continual harping on passive resistance as the only means of German salvation.

The skeptical regard it only as a maneuver, but it makes it possible for Chancellor Cuno now to make an offer with guarantees based on the national wealth instead of on a problematic foreign loan.

French Seize Household Goods of Germans for Fines.

By the Associated Press.

ESSEN, May 19.—French troops have begun the seizure of household goods belonging to Germans who refuse to pay fines levied against them by the occupation authorities. The German newspapers say that seizures are to be made at the homes of Fritz Thyssen and Dr. Krupp von Bohlen.

A Ludwigshafen dispatch says three directors of the Badeneze aniline and soda works have been arrested by the French. The Germans understand they are being held as hostages, but say they do not know the reason.

Unconfirmed reports from Duesseldorf are that the German iron and steel syndicate, whose headquarters are at Duesseldorf, has invited several British political leaders to come to the Ruhr to study the situation and discuss the reparations question with German industrialists.

Volume of Exports Disputed.

In authoritative German quarters, it was declared today that the French and Belgians by no means have reached the preoccupation volume of coal and coke exports from the Ruhr as claimed by Premier Poincare. It was admitted, however, that the first fortnight of May saw an average daily export of 300 carloads. Shipments reached as high as 787 carloads on May 9, but dropped to 135 the next day because of bridge destruction. By May 13 traffic had been sufficiently restored to send out 428 carloads.

During April 9445 carloads were exported by way of the Rhine bridge at Duisburg, compared with 1210 in March. One hundred barge loads also were exported in April.

The Germans attribute the great increase over the previous month mainly to the fact that 44 mines were under occupation in the Ruhr in April, against 10 in March.

Interallied Order Expels 902 Persons From Ruhr.

By the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, May 19.—The Interallied High Commission has issued a new expulsion order affecting 902 persons. Most of those whose names appear on the list are German railroad functionaries.

French Pilot Held in Munich.

By the Associated Press.

MUNICH, May 19.—The French pilot of an airplane, forced down by engine trouble last night near Schwaig, northeast of this city, was arrested and his airplane seized on the ground that French aircraft are not authorized to cross German soil. The pilot was on the way from Prague to Paris, with one passenger, a Rumanian, who was allowed to proceed.

The German Government recently protested to France against French planes flying over German territory and called attention to the fact that undesirable consequences might follow in the case of emergency landings.

Mutiny Is Feared.

Advices from Tsaochwang say that mutiny is feared among the troops policing the bandit zone. They have not been paid for eighteen months and are reported to be fraternizing with the outlaws, even to the extent of selling the brigands the Government ammunition they carry.

Some of the soldiers, however, still are said to be encircling the brigand fortress despite repeated assertions from Chinese official quarters that they had been withdrawn to insure the safety of the foreign prisoners, in accordance with the outlaws' ultimatum.

The diplomatic corps, headed by its dean, J. B. Defreitas, the Portuguese minister, has called on the Chinese Government to speed up negotiations for release of the fifteen foreigners. The last time representations were made the Government was informed the ministers were "awaiting with impatience" action by the Pekin regime.

On his way from Shanghai to Pekin, American Minister Schurman stopped off at Tsaochwang long enough to tell the Chinese officials there to get results and get them quickly, or "drastic action" would be taken.

"Get the prisoners out and talk terms afterwards," was the keynote of Schurman's demand.

The Chinese officials at Tsaochwang, comfortable in their 24 sleeping cars, parked on the railway sidings, argue among themselves as to how this or that shall be done to free the prisoners.

Today it was announced that Wu Yu-Lin, Minister of Communications who headed the Central Government's delegation at Tsaochwang, had abandoned his conferences with the outlaws when he received their latest dictum that all troops be withdrawn from Shantung Province and that the bandit forces, said to aggregate 8,000 men be made the provinical army.

This information brought the statement that the diplomatic corps would make new and stronger representations to the Chinese Government.

Bandits Insist on Commanding Provincial Army.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The Fifth, Sixth and Twentieth Brigades of the Chinese Goernment troops surrounding the Soochow bandits near Linching have not been paid for 18 months and are selling ammunition to the bandits who are holding American and other foreign prisoners.

This information was transmitted to the State Department today by the American legation in Pekin and is based on reports from Consul John K. Davis and Maj. Philoon at Linching. Unless the troops are paid immediately it is feared large numbers of them will join the bandits. In order to protect himself, Consul Davis added, the military Governor is importing 1500 personal troops.

The delegation of the Minister of Communications which went to the bandit headquarters on Thursday returned to Linching last night, having failed in efforts to have the foreign prisoners released.

At the same time the envoy of the military government of Shantung returned and brought with him the demands of the bandits. The bandit leader demands that he be made commander in chief, also that the Chinese Government troops be withdrawn and that food be furnished to the bandits.

Consul Davis reported that one of the envoys of the Minister of Communications, accompanied by the envoy of the military government, returned to the bandits this morning with commissions for the leaders and his subordinates. Whether these included a commission as Commander in Chief of the provincial troops was not stated.

The military government has made the following offer to the bandits:

Upon the acceptance of commissions by the bandits five of the captives shall be released. The troops shall then withdraw about two miles, upon which five additional captives shall be released. The release of the remaining captives shall follow the withdrawal of the troops to their regular stations and the incorporation of the bandits into the army.

Whether these terms were advanced by the military government on his own responsibility or with the approval of the Pekin authorities is not stated.

Fastest Aviators in Europe Likely to Race in Meet Here

Holders of Speed Records in Italy, Great Britain and France May Be Entered in National Aeronautic Exhibition—Improvement of Field Begun.

The fastest flyers of Italy, France and Great Britain are expected to take part in the races of the National Aeronautic Association, to be held in St. Louis next October, F. S. Lahm, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the national organization, has sent a message from Paris, stating that negotiations for representation of the countries named is progressing favorably.

If Italy enters the contest for the Pulitzer Trophy, its representative will undoubtedly be Brack Papa, holder of the world's speed record until it was taken by Sadi Lecointe, the Frenchman, who, in turn was displaced by Lieutenant Russell B. Maughan, United States Air Service, when he attained a maximum speed of 230 miles an hour. As Lecointe and Maughan probably will both contest at St. Louis this year, the entry of Brack Papa will give the race extraordinary interest. It is hoped also, that Great Britain may send its speed record holder, Herbert James.

Grading and other improvements at St. Louis Field, near Bridgeton, in preparation for the international races, will begin this week, B. F. Bush, director-general of the races, announced yesterday. Director Bush, Col. A. T. Perkins, Chairman of the Grounds Committee, and B. Russell Shaw, Executive Vice-Chairman of the Contest Committee of the National Aeronautic Association, who arrived in St. Louis yesterday from Washington, will visit the field this morning and make a final inspection before the improvements begin.

Shaw came to St. Louis to confer with the local Air Board, and to look over the field preparations. The National Aeronautic Association is the American representative of the international body which controls all air races or flights in which records are sought. Americans now hold all world records for speed from one kilometer up to 4000 kilometers.

Shaw expressed satisfaction with the plans for the meet. "The time is short in which to carry out the necessary preparations for an event of this magnitude," he said. "We expect the St. Louis meet to be the largest and most important ever held. There will be at least 200 entries, representing the latest developments in air craft and the leading pilots of this country and Europe. New records are certain to be made, and St. Louis will doubtless witness the highest speed ever recorded in air flight.

"St. Louis is to be congratulated upon the comprehensiveness of its plans, which will give the city a permanent air terminal for commercial use and place it upon the great transcontinental air routes of the future. The races here will be a means of advancing aircraft construction and operation, and will thus contribute to the rapidly developing science of aeronautics and to the defense and security of the nation."

PLAN TO SELL SOME OF PIGGLY-WIGGLY UNITS STANDS

Saunders Says Negotiations for Disposal of Denver Unit Are Virtually Completed.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 19.—Clarence Saunders, president of Piggly Wiggly Stores, Inc., announced tonight that he would proceed with his original plan to dispose of a sufficient number of Piggly Wiggly store units to strengthen the finances of the company, and said that negotiations virtually had been completed for the sale of the Denver unit for about $400,000.

Sidney W. Souers of New Orleans today filed suit in Chancery Court here against Saunders, to recover $30,000 on a note which Souers stated, was executed March 28, 1923, and due May 1, payable to the order of the Interstate Trust and Banking Co. of New Orleans.

Herbert Gannaway, Memphis attorney, said Souers bought the note from the New Orleans bank and he understod the note was given for money advanced to Saunders to aid him in his recent operations in Wall Street.

SLAYER OF DEPUTY HOLDING TENNESSEE POSSE AT BAY

Reinforcements Rushed to Aid Citizens in Efforts to Take Fugitive in Mountains.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 19.—A man hunt is on in the East Tennessee mountains for Elihu Brown, slayer of Deputy Sheriff Otey Templeton. Templeton was killed when he went to serve a warrant on Brown, who is wanted in West Virginia, charged with living with another man's wife. An officer from West Virginia came to Greeneville for Brown and appealed to officers there for assistance.

After killing Templeton, Brown fled, but was wounded by another deputy. A posse was organized and started in pursuit, being joined later by officers from Jonesboro and elsewhere.

Tonight officers back in the mountains had surrounded Brown in a barn, according to reports reaching Greeneville. He is heavily armed and has barricaded himself, holding the officers at bay. Officers sent to Greeneville for more men and a carload of reinforcements was rushed to their assistance. A battle is believed imminent and Brown is not expected to be taken alive.

HIGH FINANCE IN CEMETERY ALLEGED; RECEIVER SOUGHT

Phil A. McDermott, Indicted in Night and Day Bank Case, and Aids Named in Suit for Accounting.

How Phil A. McDermott, under indictment as a director of the defunct Night and Day Bank, and his associates, established a cemetery on Loughborough road, in St. Louis County, and ran the alleged assets of the holding company up to $500,000 from an original investment of $3000 cash in about a year's time, is disclosed in a receivership and accounting suit filed in Circuit Court yesterday.

Application for the receiver was filed by Timothy P. Cronin, who claims to have furnished the plans for organization of the cemetery. The receiver is sought for the Fairmont Securities Corporation, which held title to the cemetery property when the organization plans were worked out.

The petition alleges McDermott, as president of the corporation, and other officers, conveyed the assets of the corporation to a common law trust, called Fairmont Securities Trust Estate, for the purpose of defrauding creditors.

Cronin alleges that under a contract dated Oct. 1, 1920, and to run three years, he was to receive 3 per cent of the income of the corporation, in exchange for which he was to furnish his plans and advise for planning and operating a cemetery association. Cronin has been in that business for 15 years. Valhalla Cemettery was formed under his direction.

Cronin, the petition sets forth, has received $1098 from the corporation and that there is due him in commission between $10,000 and $15,000. It is alleged the cemetery has yielded about $350,000 to the holding concerns since its establishment in 1920.

Methods employed by McDermott and his associates in the cemetery venture were outlined yesterday by Louis E. Zuckerman of the law firm of Raithel, Zuckerman & Devlin, which represents Cronin. Zuckerman said 16 months had been spent in collecting data on which the suit is based.

McDermott and several others obtained an option on a 200-acre tract which was to cost them $120,000. They paid $2,000 and gave a mortgage to secure the remaining $117,000 Zuckerman said. When the Fairmont Securities Corporation was organized the equity in the property held by McDermott and the others was valued at $50,000.

The trustees of the corporation were McDermott, Julius Horwitz and O. O. Dunham. McDermott was president and Horwitz secretary. Shortly after formation of the corporation, the petition alleges, Cronin was summoned because of his practical knowledge of operating cemeteries.

Reorganization Undertaken.

Cronin spent about three months from Oct. 1, 1920, working out details. After the plans of organization were formulated and placed in operation by Cronin, the petition alleges, reorganization of the corporation was undertaken.

The Fairmont Securities Trust Estate, with McDermott, Horwitz and the late Julius Hallen as trustees, was formed. The trust estate took over assets of the corporation and had no other assets, yet the capital of the trust estate was placed at $500,000, the petition charges. Under a provision of the trust estate agreement, it is alleged, McDermott, who held one-half interest in the old corporation, obtained a $50,000 beneficial interest, in consideration for his holdings in the old corporation.

One of the schemes suggested by Cronin, the petition alleges, for operation of the cemetery was the formation of Lakewood Park Cemetery Association. The association was to be charged with the actual operation and control of the cemetery while the trust estate would sell the lots. The association was to receive 10 per cent of the lots in each of eight 25-acre tracts into which the cemetery was divided. But the association could not sell its 10 per cent until all other lots in any given section had been sold by the trust estate.

Hohenschild Among Trustees.

The first Board of Trustees of the Lakewood Park Cemetery Association, according to the petition, was composed of H. H. Hohenschild, president of the Night and Day Bank; Roy E. Gans, Charles C. Layton, Alfred D. Ruth and William C. Sheridan.

About 4500 burial lots in the cemetery have been sold to date at from $50 to $500 each, the petition states. A prospectus of the cemetery proposition, prepared by Cronin in October, 1920, states that between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 should be realized from the sale of lots in the course of time. About 40 persons have been buried in the cemetery, Zuckerman said.

Cronin, through his suit, seeks to have all assets returned to the original Fairmont Securities Corporation so that the creditors may be paid. Hearing on the application was set by Judge Hartman for 10 a. m. May 31.

87 Named as Defendants.

Eighty-seven defendants are named. Most of them are holders of beneficial certificates. Listed among these are Philip H. Brockman, president, and William Young, member, of the Board of Police Commissioners, Victor J. Miller, former member of the Board, and City Collector Koeln.

The petition charges the late Julius Haller received $20,000 in commissions from the sale of cemetery lots and asks that his widow be ordered to return that amount to the corporation as a part of the assets.

BRITISH TO COMPLY WITH DRY SHIP RULING, IS REPORT

Disposition of English Is to Give Regulations Against Bringing Liquor Into U. S. Waters a Fair Test.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador, has been given complete discretionary authority by his Government to deal with complications arising from the decision of the Supreme Court denying foreign shipping the right to bring liquor into American waters.

There is no disposition on the part of the Ambassador at this stage to question the soundness of the decision, and it is said the British liners will comply strictly with the regulations soon to be laid down by Treasury officials. The British disposition is to give the new regulations a fair test. It is declared there is no urgency in the case.

When Sir Auckland visits London during his approaching trip abroad he will discuss the subject with Foreign Office officials. Should it be found that injustice has resulted and that British commerce is being unfairly treated, the Ambassador will make representations upon his return to Washington next fall.

The French, Italian, Spanish and other Government, whose ships touch at American ports, however, are under greater pressure to obtain relief from the ruling, in view of their laws requiring vessels to carry and issue wine rations. But they also have refrained from lodging any protest beyond verbal representations to Secretary Hughes, and are awaiting promulgation of the new regulations before they make specific complains.

New Instructions Issued Regarding Doctors' Permits.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The Prohibition Bureau today began the unraveling of red tape around the prescribing of liquor by physicians for medicinal use, in compliance with the more liberal policy of the Treasury Department following Judge Knox's injunction.

Commissioner Haynes has instructed State Prohibition Directors that hereafter they have full authority to renew physicians' permits. Heretofore the doctors have applied to the State Directors, who after an investigation, have forwarded the applications to Washington for approval. In Washington, according to the Bureau, the applications have been subjected to such delay that thousands for 1923 are still unissued. In such cases authority has been given to physicians to continue on their 1922 permits, officials of the Bureau said.

The method of handling the permits has resulted in delay by State Directors, who have waited until they had a batch of applications before sending any to headquarters.

The new instructions are in line with recent orders from Commissioner Blair of the Internal Revenue Bureau that retail druggists shall have their licenses renewed automatically upon application if there is no reason to believe they have violated the law.

There are 35,000 physicians in the country licensed to prescribe liquor out of a total of 150,000. The Prohibition Bureau says 40,000 doctors practice in States which by state law do not permit the sale of liquor as a medicine.

DUELING BY WOMEN STUDENTS AT HEIDELBERG FORBIDDEN

Feminine Scholars Resent Decree, Insisting on Same Privilege as Given to Men.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 19.—Women students at Heidelberg University are very unhappy because they are not permitted to engage in dueling. All the other privileges of the male students have been accorded the women, but the faculty has decided that it is not advisable for women to slash each other's cheeks and scalps with swords, and the 600 women students don't like the ruling. They insist they have the same rights as their brothers to engage in sword contests if they choose to do so.

The dueling season is now at its height in Heidelberg. Many students may be seen on the streets with gashes on their cheeks and scalps, many of which are so deep that they have to be drawn together with sutures. The students are so proud of their wounds that they always wear them uncovered.

Women have been admitted to Heidelberg since 1890 and now number about one-fifth of all its attendance. They are in all the departments. While the women have various vereins, they have no clubs which have houses like the men have had for centuries. The women apparently do not organize into sororities, as American university women do, but divide into groups along religious lines.

FORMER ST. LOUISAN MAY HAVE BEEN N. Y. MURDER VICTIM

Relative of Joseph Caleco Believes Picture of Head in Newspaper Resembles Him.

A picture seen in a copy of a New York Italian newspaper, wrapped around a factory girl's lunch, has set the St. Louis police to investigating the possibility that a man murdered in New York last fall, whose severed head was found in Bronx Park, was Joseph Caleco, formerly of 912 Carr street.

Mrs. Santa Lombardo, sister of Caleco, who saw the picture of the severed head and tore it out of the paper, believes the head was Caleco's. His wife, Rosie Caleco, is not so sure, particularly as she heard within the last four weeks that her missing husband had been seen in Chicago.

Caleco left St. Louis Jan. 30, 1922, his wife says. Last November her father, Fortunato di Pasquale, a track foreman for the Terminal Association, was mysteriously shot at Tenth and Biddle streets, and died later from his wounds. At that time the police undertook to find Caleco, but the idea of his connection with the murder was later abandoned, and two men who had been seen near the scene, and who were accused by Di Pasquale, were charged with the murder, but were discharged at their preliminary hearing.

HOUSING TRUST'S INSOLVENCY PLEA SAID TO BE FRAUD

A total of 25,606 contracts was issued, the motion states, "and approximately $4,000,000 extracted from the people in operations of approximately four years." Out of approximately $1,000,000 in notes, it continues, "approximately 90 per cent of the loans represented are bonus loans, in contravention of the declaration of trust and the contracts, whereby the trustees were disipating the funds of the contract holders to enrich themselves."

Operations of the company were declared to constitute a lottery. This ruling was made by the Texas Court in ordering a receivership, on the ground that the order in which contract holders became eligible for loans was determined by the serial number of their contract, and after the contract matured the granting of a loan was dependent on the money being in the loan fund.

Texas Legislature Committee Completes Its Investigation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex., May 19.—An investigation of the business in Texas of the United Home Builders of America, a 3 per cent loan company, now in receivership, was completed today by a special committee appointed for that purpose by the Texas Legislature.

The committee recommended the Attorney General and Department of Banking and Finance take steps to protect the securities and funds of certificate holders, to the end that subscribers who have invested their funds may get back as much as possible when the assets are distributed."

Withdrawal of an appeal by the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance contesting appointment of a receiver by the Sixty-eighth District Court at Dallas, on Jan. 25 last, was recommended, and it was suggested the Commissioner turn over assets in his possession to the receiver. The appeal was filed on the ground the liquidation should be conducted by the Commissioner's department.

The investigation was directed in a resolution recently adopted by the Legislature, which stated assets of approximately $500,000, alleged to belong to Texas contract holders, were taken out of Texas when the company moved to St. Louis in May, 1922, and then to Indiana last January.

NEW LABOR BANK OPENED IN NEW YORK

Gov. Smith First Depositor in State Institution Capitalized at $500,000.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 19.—New York's newest labor bank, starting with a capital and surplus of $500,000, opened today at noon in quarters at the southwest corner of Thirty-fourth street and Eighth avenue, on the ground floor of the Printing Crafts Building. Gov. Smith made the first deposit and also made a speech during the opening exercises. Ethel Barrymore was the second depositor, and after Miss Barrymore there was rush of persons prominent in labor circles who were anxious to show their confidence in the new institution by entrusting their money to its custody.

Probably there never has been just such a bank opening in this city. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; James P. Holland, president of the New York Federation; Senator Copeland, George C. McLaughlin, State Superintendent of Banks, and Mrs. Sarah Convoy were among the speakers.

The new institution, organized under the State banking law, is known as the Federation Bank of New York. Its shareholders are members of 113 separate labor organizations and the capital was oversubscribed $125,000. Peter J. Brady, long prominent in labor and political circles, is president; Walter McCaleb, one of the organizers of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Bank in Cleveland, is vice president and cashier, and John J. Munholland is vice president and secretary.

The bank will do a commercial and foreign exchange business, and maintain a thrift department paying four per cent interest on deposits. Profits to shareholders will be limited to 10 per cent and any surplus over that will be divided among depositors.

TCHITCHERIN RENEWS VOROVSKY PROTEST

Soviet Foreign Minister Sends Note to Lausanne Conference.

LAUSANNE, May 19.—Two strongly worded protests from M. Tchitcherin, the Russian soviet Foreign Minister, to the Swiss Government and the Near East Conference regarding the assassination of Vorovsky, head of the Russian delegation at Lausanne, contributed to produce another day of almost violent controversy.

The conference itself is struggling along groping for peace against numerous discouraging obstacles, such as the threatened open clash between Greece and Turkey over reparations and the deadlock on the problem of foreigners resident in Turkey.

Tchitcherin, in his note to the conference, raises the spectre of failure of the conference and declares that the soviets reserve all rights and will continue to address communications to the conference and to the French, British and Italian Governments regarding Vorovsky if necessary. But in the meantime Russia affirms the great Powers have their share of responsibility in the failure of Switzerland to adopt indispensable measures which would have made the assassination of the Russian leader improbable, if not impossible.

VISITS MOVIES, GETS DAMAGES

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 19.—Joseph Bedier of the French Academy went to the movies recently to rest his mind from his learned labors. He was astonished but not gratified to see a good film version of "De Roman de Tristan et Iseut," obviously based on his own work of 1900. Although as "Immortal," as academicians are called, Bedier is not without pride of authorship, and as a sequel to his evening's amusement he brought suit against the producers of the film, demanding, above all, that they be obliged to place his name on the program. The court delivered judgment in his favor, and, in addition, awarded him 25,000 francs damages and half the accrued author's rights.

MODIFIED ORDER IN THE UNION HOME BUILDERS' CASE

ALL BUT $50,000 OF ITS CASH RESTORED

Temporary Receiver Given Access to All Books and Records Here Dealing With Concern's Affairs.

The temporary receivership of the Union Home Builders, a housing trust, was modified in a temporary order made yesterday by Federal Judge Dyer, permitting the company to resume business, except in Missouri, restoring all but $50,000 of the approximately $126,000 cash in possession of the temporary receiver, and giving the latter access to all books and records pertaining to the company's business.

Such an order was recommended to Judge Dyer by the master in the case, former Supreme Judge Fred L. Williams, after a conference yesterday with attorneys for the company and receiver. It followed several hours of legal sparring by counsel before Judge Williams on whether the receivership should be continued.

Effect of the Order.

Under the modified order Commissioner Millspaugh continues as temporary receiver, but the company will be permitted to operate pending further examination of its business. It does not affect the rights of the company in continuing its contest of the receivership, nor those of the Finance Commissioner in seeking to make the receivership permanent.

The case originated in Circuit Court, when Commissioner Millspaugh, on May 4, last, filed receivership suits against the Union Home Builders and 12 other St. Louis housing trusts, alleging irregularities in their operation. The Union Home Builders obtained a transfer of its case to Federal Court after the Circuit Court appointed Commissioner Millspaugh temporary receiver.

Other provisions of the temporary order made yesterday include:

Restraining the company from writing any new contracts in Missouri and restraining it from removing any securities or records from the State.

Restraining the company from removing any property from its office, 1411 Syndicate Trust Building, without consent of the special master, or the temporary receiver.

Part of Cash Released.

Modifies authority of the receiver to take possession of the office, assets and property to the authority to hold only $50,000 cash of the company. (The receiver, by court order, took possession of $100,000 in a local bank, and since has taken charge of about $20,000 more, received by mail).

Directs that books and records removed by company officers from the offices be returned there, and directs that all mortgages and other securities (estimated at $300,000) be placed in the vaults of the Mercantile Trust Co., subject only to joint access by representatives of the company and receiver.

Orders the receiver to restore possession of the office and records he holds to the company, but gives him and his representatives the right to use a part of the office for the examination.

Access to the books and securities, which had been withheld from the receiver through their removal from the offices, was obtained by Commissioner Millspaugh Friday, under an agreement by counsel that they be produced by the company in court for examination.

Inquiry May Take Three Weeks.

Wilbur B. Jones, Special Assistant Attorney General, stated yesterday the partial examination indicated at least three weeks would be required to go over the assets and books and sought a continuance. This was opposed by the company.

Robert Holland, representing the company, demanded that evidence be presented to show why a receivership should continue, and declared the three weeks' continuance was sought for a "voyage of discovery, to see if evidence could be obtained to prove the allegations in the suit." He asserted the procedure was invalid and had been started without verifying the charges.

Jones replied it was an extraordinary procedure, "instituted by the State in an emergency, in good faith, to protect the interests of investors in Missouri." He said the company had contended that the Finance Commissioner had no right to file the suit, and declared it was not under his supervision. However, Jones continued, "this concern has distributed circulars in New York, where it sold contracts, and these circulars state the company is under the supervision of the Finance Commissioner of Missouri."

HITCHERIN RENEWS VOROVSKY PROTEST

viet Foreign Minister Sends Note to Lausanne Conference.

LAUSANNE, May 19.—Two strong-worded protests from M. Tchitcherin, the Russian soviet Foreign minister, to the Swiss Government and the Near East Conference regarding the assassination of Vorovsky, head of the Russian delegation at Lausanne, contributed to produce another day of almost violent controversy.

The conference itself is struggling along groping for peace against numerous discouraging obstacles, such as the threatened open clash between Greece and Turkey over reparations and the deadlock on the problem of foreigners resident in Turkey.

Tchitcherin, in his note to the conference, raises the spectre of failure of the conference and declares that the soviets reserve all rights and will continue to address communications to the conference and to the French, British and Italian Governments regarding Vorovsky if necessary. But in the meantime Russia affirms the great Powers have their share of responsibility in the failure of Switzerland to adopt indispensable measures which would have made the assassination of the Russian leader improbable, if not impossible.

VISITS MOVIES, GETS DAMAGES

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 19.—Joseph Bedier of the French Academy went to the movies recently to rest his mind from his learned labors. He was astonished but not gratified to see a good film version of "De Roman de Tristan et Iseut," obviously based on his own work of 1900. Although an "immortal," as academicians are called, Bedier is not without pride of authorship, and as a sequel to his evening's amusement he brought suit against the producers of the film, demanding, above all, that they be obliged to place his name on the program. The court delivered judgment in his favor, and, in addition, awarded him 25,000 francs damages and half the accrued author's rights.

Mrs. Edwin P. Morrow, wife of the Governor of Kentucky, wore a stunning white sports suit of heavy silk, embroidered in bright colors, a white coat and white hat. Mrs. John Glover South, wife of the Minister to Panama, was the guest of Mrs. Morrow. Mrs. South wore a French suit of pale beige canton crepe with cape and hat of the same color.

Included in Sunday's activities will be a large luncheon at the Audubon Country Club, to which most of the St. Louis society contingent have been invited, and a dinner in the evening, at which Mrs. T. B. Lanturn will be hostess in her Audubon Park home. Mrs. Tracy Axton entertained with a breakfast for 25 guests this morning, just before the Derby.

Other St. Louis people at the club were: Linn Secord, Emmett Meyers, Charles Temple, Edward Foristel, M. J. Hackett, H. MODIFIED ORDER IN THE UNION HOME BUILDERS' CASE

ALL BUT $50,000 OF ITS CASH RESTORED

Temporary Receiver Given Access to All Books and Records Here Dealing With Concern's Affairs.

The temporary receivership of the Union Home Builders, a housing trust, was modified in a temporary order made yesterday by Federal Judge Dyer, permitting the company to resume business, except in Missouri, restoring all but $50,000 of the approximately $120,000 cash in possession of the temporary receiver, and giving the latter access to all books and records pertaining to the company's business.

Such an order was recommended to Judge Dyer by the master in the case, former Supreme Judge Fred L. Williams, after a conference yesterday with attorneys for the company and receiver. It followed several hours of legal sparring by counsel before Judge Williams on whether the receivership should be continued.

Effect of the Order.

Under the modified order Commissioner Millspaugh continues as temporary receiver, but the company will be permitted to operate pending further examination of its business. It does not affect the rights of the company in continuing its contest of the receivership, nor those of the Finance Commissioner in seeking to make the receivership permanent.

The case originated in Circuit Court, when Commissioner Millspaugh, on May 4, last, filed receivership suits against the Union Home Builders and 12 other St. Louis housing trusts, alleging irregularities in their operation. The Union Home Builders obtained a transfer of its case to Federal Court after the Circuit Court appointed Commissioner Millspaugh temporary receiver.

Other provisions of the temporary order made yesterday include:

Restraining the company from writing any new contracts in Missouri and restraining it from removing any securities or records from the State.

Restraining the company from removing any property from its office, 1611 Syndicate Trust Building, without consent of the special master, or the temporary receiver.

Part of Cash Released.

Modifies authority of the receiver to take possession of the office, assets and property to the authority to hold only $50,000 cash of the company. (The receiver, by court order, took possession of $100,980 in a local bank, and since has taken charge of about $20,000 more, received by mail).

Directs that books and records removed by company officers from the offices be returned there, and directs that all mortgages and other securities (estimated at $300,000) be placed in the vaults of the Mercantile Trust Co., subject only to joint access by representatives of the company and receiver.

Orders the receiver to restore possession of the office and records he holds to the company, but gives him and his representatives the right to use a part of the office for the examination.

Access to the books and securities, which had been withheld from the receiver through their removal from the offices, was obtained by Commissioner Millspaugh Friday, under an agreement by counsel that they be produced by the company in court for examination.

Inquiry May Take Three Weeks.

Wilbur B. Jones, Special Assistant Attorney General, stated yesterday the partial examination indicated at least three weeks would be required to go over the assets and books and sought a continuance. This was opposed by the company.

Robert Holland, representing the company, demanded that evidence be presented to show why a receivership should continue, and declared the three weeks' continuance was sought for a "voyage of discovery, to see if evidence could be obtained to prove the allegations in the suit." He asserted the procedure was invalid and had been started without verifying the charges.

Jones replied it was an extraordinary procedure, "instituted by the State in an emergency, in good faith, to protect the interests of investors in Missouri." He said the company had contended that the Finance Commissioner had no right to file the suit, and declared it was not under his supervision. However, Jones continued, "this concern has distributed circulars in New York, where it sold contracts, and these circulars state the company is under the supervision of the Finance Commissioner of Missouri."

MAN OPPOSED BY LEGION NAMED OKLAHOMA COLLEGE PRESIDENT

Accused of Expressing Desire to 'Shoot Hole' Through Legion Buttons.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., May 19.—George Wilson, an organizer of the Oklahoma Farmer Labor Reconstruction League, was elected president of the Oklahoma A. and M. College by the State Board of Agriculture today. Wilson's appointment marked the climax of a long fight in which the American Legion vigorously opposed him. His election was by a vote of three to two, new members of the board recently appointed by Governor J. C. Walton supporting him.

Following the meeting of the board, John A. Whitehurst, president, issued a statement declaring: "This is a tragedy in the school life of Oklahoma."

Opposition of the legion to Wilson was based on his alleged statement that "Every time I see an American Legion button I want to shoot a hole through it."

The Executive Committee of the legion conducted an investigation of the charge which terminated in a closed hearing attended by Wilson. At its conclusion a resolution was made public, stating the charges had been substantiated and that the legion opposed his appointment to any State position.

Copies of the resolution were in the hands of each member of the board today, but they were not read and no mention was made of the legion's stand.

WILLIAM S. BARNICKEL, 45, DIES FOLLOWING OPERATION

Discovery of Process for Separating Salt Water From Oil Said to Have Made Him Million.

William S. Barnickel, 45 years old, of Hotel Chase, an obscure chemist in 1913 who is said to have cleared more than $1,000,000 from the discovery of a process to precipitate salt water from oil, died at 2 p. m. yesterday at St. John's Hospital, following an operation for ulcer of the stomach. He is survived by a daughter, Genevieve, 17, a student at Hosmar Hall, and two sisters—Mrs. Lenora Tucker of St. Louis, and Mrs. Della Singer of Hot Springs, Ark.

Barnickel was born at La Grange, Ky., and was brought to St. Louis in childhood. He was graduated 25 years ago from the St. Louis College of Pharmacy.

In 1913 he discovered the formula that is said to be in use by all oil companies, and from which, according to John S. Lehmann, his business partner, he cleared about $500,000 last year. Lehmann added that Barnickel recently refused an offer of $2,000,000 for his holdings in the company.

The company operates a plant at Webster Groves, where the chemical—an emulsion—for separating salt water from oil is manufactured.

The funeral will be at 3 p. m. tomorrow from the home of Frederick W. Lehmann, 10 Benton place.

Barnickel was a member of the Racquet and St. Louis Clubs, Missouri Athletic Association, the New York Chemical Society and the Petroleum Club of Tulsa, Ok.

MAUDE ADAMS SAID TO PLAN TO ACT AGAIN

Report She Will Reappear Next Fall in "Peter Pan" and Enter Movies, Too.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Maude Adams, famous actress who quit the stage without explanation in 1918, will return in the autumn in a revival of her greatest success, "Peter Pan," and in the other Barrie plays, one of them a new effort on which Sir James Barrie now is at work, the Evening Mail said today.

Miss Adams was said to have been induced to reconsider her decision never again to appear before the footlights by Barrie, whom she visited recently in England, where she also Rudyard Kipling and the heirs of Edmond Rostand. She is expected to apear in motion picture versions of several of Rostand's plays and Kiplings5 novels, using in them a new system of lighting. She is said to have developed herself while working in the laboratory of the plant of the General Electric Co., at Schenectady, N. Y.

Besides "Peter Pan" and the new Barrie plays not yet named, "What Every Woman Knows" and "The Little Minister" were given as her proposed stake vehicle.

If the announcement made here proves to be true, it will mark the emergance of Miss Adams from a period of retirement, during which her whereabouts has not been known.

Her absence from the Empire theater, New York, scene of her successes, was emphasized last Christmas when Billie Burke appeared in the Christmas premiere there, in which Miss Adams formerly appeared. It was announced then by an attache of the theater that she would never act again. She is now 50 years old, and it would appear a triumph indeed if she can revive her former success in "Peter Pan," in which the illusion of youthfulness is essential.

The death of Charles Frohman, her manager and close friend on the Lusitania when it was torpedoed by a German submarine is said to have preyed on her mind so that it ultimately developed her resolve not to act again. This resolution was accompanied by a strong religious trend, which resulted in her giving her beautiful country estate near New York to the Convent of Our Lady of the Cenacle with the nuns of which she is said to have made her home from time to time.

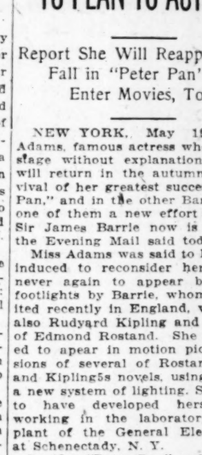
I had become utterly discouraged with a heavy growth of hair on my face and lip. I had tried every sort of depilatory and electrolysis and even a razor. But I couldn't get rid of it.



Then I made a wonderful discovery. I found a simple method by which I removed the hair at once and most wonderful to relate, it keeps the hair removed. My face is now as smooth as a baby's, not only free from superfluous hair but from pimples and blemishes.

I have explained this discovery to thousands of women who have had the same experience with it that I had and I will explain it to you if you also have superfluous hair. It isn't like anything you have ever used. It is not a powder, paste, wax or liquid, not a razor, not electricity. It causes no itching or burning and leaves no scars. As easy to use as your comb or brush.

LIEUTENANT MISS HOYT JILTED SAILS FOR HOME

"It's a Damned Rotten Show All Around," Briton Says Before Leaving.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Declaring that he was heartbroken over the untoward turn in his romance, Lieut. Frederick Wiseman-Clarke, whose engagement to Miss Nancy Mc-Michael Hoyt, society girl of Washington, was suddenly declared off on the eve of their marriage, sailed today with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wiseman-Clarke, for London.

Miss Hoyt is reported to be suffering from a nervous breakdown at her Washington residence. She is the daughter of the late Henry M. Hoyt, who was Solicitor-General during President Taft's administration.

When seen today on the Steamship Orduna of the Royal Mail Line on which he sailed, the young Lieutenant told reporters it was true the engagement was off definitely.

"I don't think we will ever be married," he said. "It is a sad and terrible blow to me.

"I do not want to talk about the reported controversy between our parents. I want to deny that either I or my folks were ignorant of the matrimonial affairs of Miss Hoyt's sister. We knew all about her affairs and that had nothing to do with the break."

"What, then, was the trouble?" he was asked.

"All I can say at this time is that Miss Hoyt is indisposed and suffering from a nervous breakdown," he answered.

"Was the breaking off of the engagement a mutual agreement?" he was asked.

"It came as a complete surprise to me," responded the Lieutenant. "Our wedding was set for 3 p. m., May 16. I was with Miss Hoyt on the afternoon of the 15th, and was shocked to hear at 6 p. m. that the wedding had been declared off. It's a damn rotten show all around."

"Are you coming back to America?"

"For the present my plans are up in the air. I must get home. I may never come back to the States."

He told his questioners he had resigned his commission in the British navy and would probably go to some distant point to study. Perhaps somewhere in Africa, he said.

He admitted he still loved Miss Hoyt and would have willingly have given his life if the disagreeable affair had not happened.

IDENTITY OF CLARA PHILLIPS ESTABLISHED

"It's Clara," Says Message of Sheriff After He Views Woman Suspect.

By the Associated Press.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, May 19.—The woman being held here as Clara Phillips, the California "Hammer murderess" has been definitely identified by Deputy Sheriff Walter J. Hunter, who arrived here from Los Angeles. She will be taken back to Los Angeles where she escaped from jail last December, by the steamer Colombia leaving Amapala May 30.

The prisoner has completely broken down. All day today she made offers to the police officials to help her escape.

In an interview which the Associated Press correspondent had with Mrs. Phillips today she said, weeping, that she was innocent, and charged that Alberta Meadows had been killed by Peggy Caffe. She declared her husband had turned State's evidence. He and Peggy, she asserted, were responsible for her conviction.

In Mexico she declared she met a former friend, Jess Carson, who is now in the Tegucigalpa penitentiary, and that he compelled her by force to leave with him, telling her that Honduras had no extradition treaty.

'It's Clara,' Says Message From Deputy Sheriff.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 19.—The woman held at Tegucigalpa, Honduras, as Clara Phillips, wanted here for slaying Alberta Meadows, is positively the "hammer murderess."

This was definitely established today when a cablegram was received from Walter Hunter, one of the deputy sheriffs sent to Central America to return the woman. If she proved to be Mrs. Phillips, declaring it was she. Hunter's laconic message read:

"It's Clara."

The second woman held in custody with Mrs. Phillips is said to be her sister, Mrs. Etta Mae Jackson.

On page 3 of the True Life Stories Section of today's Post-Dispatch will be found a complete story of the search for Clara Phillips which is said to be the most remarkable hunt for a woman criminal in history. That story was written several days ago before the arrival of the Los Angeles sheriff's deputies to confirm her identification though the evidence at that time was overwhelming that it was she

JEWELRY STORE HELD UP; $937 IN LOOT TAKEN

Two Robbers Force Clerk to Lie on Floor While Safe Is Robbed.

Two young men, one armed, entered the jewelry store of Fred Halter, 2010 South Jefferson avenue, at 5:15 p. m. yesterday, forced the clerk, George Heckler, 47 years old, of 2706A Ann avenue, the only person in the store at the time, to lie on the floor behind the counter, and rifled the safe, which was open, of diamonds, wrist watches and cash, the total amounting to $937.50. The loss was insured.

Heckler told the police that as the men entered the store, one of them pointed a revolver at him, while the other forced him to lie on the floor. Heckler, who does not hear well, was a bit slow in carrying out their commands, and was pushed to the floor and his mouth bruised. The men then took a tray containing 11 diamonds, valued at $387.50, 10 wrist watches worth about $350, and about $200 in cash, the day's receipts, from the safe.

BARGE LINE FIGHT NOW UP TO SUPREME COURT

Government Seeks Final Decision on Goltra's Claim of Control of Boats.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 19. — The Federal Government brought to the Supreme Court today its fight to secure possession of the Mississippi barge line leased to Edward F. Goltra of St. Louis, who, the War Department contends, has sacrificed his contract by failure to operate the line. The highest court was asked to set aside the injunction granted by the Federal courts in Missouri restraining Secretary Weeks from seizing the 19 barges and the four towboats involved.

In its petition the Government asserted that the injunction suit brought by Goltra should not have been entertained by the lower court because it was in effect a suit against the United States and could only be brought with the consent of the Government.

BONAR LAW, EXHAUSTED, ARRIVES IN LONDON

British Premier Ordered to Abstain From Political Activity for the Present.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 19.—Great secrecy is being maintained regarding Prime Minister Bonar Law's condition which is causing his friends grave concern.

The Prime Minister, who recently left on an announced voyage of one month for his health, looked tired and worn out when he reached London this afternoon from Paris, and was compelled to rest because of his exhausted condition when he reached the private house where he is staying. Sir Thomas Horder, the noted specialist, was called upon the Premier's arrival and remained with him a long time.

It was remarked that the Premier was so fatigued when he alighted from his train that he failed to respond to the cheers of the crowd that had gathered to receive him.

At Sir Thomas Horder's residence it was stated that no information in regard to the Premier's health will be given out for the present, but it is learned that absolute rest and freedom from political strain have been ordered and that during the next few days Monar Law will be unable to meet his Cabinet.

Retirement of Bonar Law Would Not Affect Debt Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINTGO, May 19.—Negotiations for the funding of the British war debt to the United States have progressed to a point where officials both at the treasury and at the British embassy are confident the agreement will not be affected by any change in the British Cabinet resulting from the illness of Premier Bonar Law.

Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador, said today that there was "not the slightest possibility" of a reconsideration of the accord already reached on all but minor points of the settlement.

BAPTISTS CONDEMN 'MARATHON DANCES'

Convention Calls Them "Latest Nauseating Excess of This Destroyer of Morals."

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 19.—The Southern Baptist Convention, in session here today, selected Atlanta, Ga., as the place for the convention next year, indorsed the establishment of a seminary for negroes in Nashville, Tenn., and approved plans for the erection of a $2,000,000 hospital in New Orleans.

"Marathon dances" were characterized as disgusting exhibitions; mob violence whether by persons masked or unmasked was declared to "trample in the dust every human right," and prohibition laws were indorsed, in a report of the Social Service Commission, adopted tonight by the convention.

On the question of dancing the report said in part:

"The ever present and ever indolent dance evil continues. The latest form of nauseating excess to which this destroyer of the modesty and morals of manhood and womanhood has gone were the disgusting exhibitions popularly known as 'marathon dances.' Such exhibitions serve to show in a new light the incurable evil of an indulgence which in its very nature is fleshly and sinful. Our pastors ought everywhere to speak in the most emphatic terms concerning such evils."

"The recent action of New York in repealing its prohibition enforcement code is a disgrace to that State and an insult to the Federal Government" the report said in commenting on the eighteenth amendment.

"Enforcement in New York will be somewhat more difficult, but prohibition will go forward, not backward. The question before the American people is not, shall we have prohibition, but shall orderly government prevail.

"The recent decision of the Supreme Court is in every way good for this cause. It is a surprise that it holds that American ships are exempt from the operation of a law of the United States when on the high seas or in foreign ports. But this easily can be remedied by the next Congress through the enactment of a law to apply specifically to American ships everywhere. Meantime it will not be very feasible for ships to stock and unstock with liquors at the three-mile limit."

A report of the relief and annuity board, adopted today, declared that the Southern Baptist Convention is aiding 925 aged ministers and dependent members of their families. It declared that the board's resources were $1,490,193.59, which, according to the report, is inadequate. The board has a program for the raising of $10,000,000 for future work.

A change in Chinese exclusion laws was recommended.

"Deportation of Christian Chinese born in this country and brutal treatment of others," a report declared, "is doing much to weaken the influence of American mission work in China."

William J. Bryan addressed the convention tonight.

RADIO STATIONS TO BROADCAST JAZZ AND POPULAR SONGS

Supply of Music to Be Available Wednesday Under Arrangement Just Completed.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 19.—An arrangement between broadcasting radio stations and the Independent Music Publishers whereby popular songs and jazz music will be made available was announced by Frederick Smith, secretary of the National Broadcasters' League, today. The supply of music will be available beginning next Wednesday, when popular songs will reappear on radio programs.

For several weeks copyrighted songs have been absent from radio programs, taken off after the demand of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers that license fees be paid for the broadcasting of copyrighted songs.

BAN ON SUNDAY MOVIES URGED AT ASSEMBLY

Hays Absent When Report Is Presented; Bryan to Speak Today Against Evolution.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 19.—Presbyterians of the United States of America today received a report from the Committee on Sabbath Observance demanding that the movies "clean up and clear out of the Lord's day." Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and distributors of America, who is attending the assembly as an elder of the church, was absent from the hall at a committee meeting when Dr. Harry L. Bowlby, president of the Lord's Day Alliance, attacked the Sunday movie shows.

"I have noothing against the movies," said Dr. Bowlby, "if they will clean up and clear out of the Lord's day, and I so told an important representative of the motion picture industry, who is attending this assembly as a commissioner.

"The commercial movie house ought to give the church, the Bible school and the home the right of way on the Christian Sabbath. Without the Christian Sabbath there will be no Christian morality, and without Christian morality the free institutions of this country cannot be preserved."

Movie Censorship Resolution Expected.

A resolution on motion picture censorship and Sunday movie shows is expected to be presented to the assembly for action.

The controversy between the ultra-conservative and the progressive factions was quiet today, due to the absence of William Jennings Bryan, leader of the fundamentalists, from the city. Bryan, who went to Kansas City to address a Baptist meeting, is coming back in time to make two addresses on evolution and the fundamental interpretations of the Bible, tomorrow. The first will be at a "popular meeting" of the assembly in the afternoon, under the auspices of the Committee on Sabbath observance, the other from the pulpit of Westminster Presbyterian Church tomorrow night.

Dr. Clarence E. MacCartney of Philadelphia, who brought to the assembly the Philadelphia Presbytery's protest against the liberal doctrines of Harry Emerson Fosdick, as expounded in the First Presbyterian Church of New York, is to preach at Meridian Street Methodist Church tomorrow morning, and is expected to elaborate on the conservative faction's views.

The liberals will be represented by the Rev. William P. Merrill, pastor of the famous Bick Church of New York, and a warm defender of Dr. Fosdick, who will fill Henry Ward Beecher's old pulpit at the Second Presbyterian Church here, and by Dr. Charles F. Wishart, the new moderator, who will preach at the First Presbyterian Church. Dr. Wishart, while conservative in views, has declared he stands for tolerance in dealing with the opinions of others, so long as they do not conflict with the basic confession of faith.

Church Council Charged With Maintaining Lobby in Capital.

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, N. C., May 19.—The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America was charged with maintaining a lobby in Washington for the purpose of injecting the church into State affairs, in spirited debate today at the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

A demand that the church separate itself from the council was made in a minority report from the Committee on Foreign Correspondence, signed by six members. Eleven, however, subscribed to the report of the majority, which recommended remaining in the council. Decision on the question will be had on Monday.

Realization

¶ Quite a long time has passed since Conroy's entered the piano industry. The David Harums, wildcatters, old-timers, in fact, all those who believed that pianos should bring whatever the customer could afford to pay, called us amateurs, dreamers, etc., and predicted that Conroy's "one-price system" would end in bankruptcy.

¶ Today Conroy's is the largest piano store in America and direct distributors for the largest manufacturers. The so-called panic of 1920 was our largest year up to that time.

¶ By this we do not mean that Conroy's sell all the instruments in the Southwest. The gold-brick advertisements of the music faker make a strong appeal to those not seasoned to such enticing propaganda.

¶ But we venture to say that Conroy's sell more pianos to sensible individuals than all other music stores combined.

NEW YORK, May 19.—When y to that apparently safe point where ninth, two strikes on the pitcher an able to suppose that that game is rictory. However, suppositions are w game of baseball, and the Cardinals ies to Brooklyn to-day merely becau

The Rickeymen came into the last half of the final frame leading 5 to 4 by reason of a two-run rally in their half of the ninth. Lou North, who impresses an observer about as much as the scenery in a subway, was Rickey's selection to pitch the last half of the ninth and retire three men as quickly as possible. Lou got down to that narrow two out, two strike basis and then lost the ball game. The final score was 6 to 5. And not alone poor pitching but, if the truth must be known, dumb pitching gave Brooklyn its victory.

High was the first batter in the ninth. He worked North to a three ball two strike count and then filed to Blades. Taylor did the same thing and then rolled to Lavan. North suddenly switched. He shot a strike over on Reuther. Then he cut the plate with another one and Reuther fouled it off. Three tosses, high and outside put him in the hole again and Reuther hit the following "cripple" for a single to center.

Johnston Hits First Ball.

Things happened quickly after that and North regained his control, but lost his head. He put one straight "down the middle" for Bernie Neis and Bernie lofted it to center for a double. Bailey, running for Reuther, stopped at third. It was strictly a matter between North and Jimmy Johnston then. To retire Johnston meant a Cardinal victory and send the team into the New York series tomorrow only three and one-half games out of first place. To fall—but that is what North did.

North shot the first ball over and Johnston did exactly the same thing only in more exaggerated form. He walloped it to the farthermost point of deep left field and Bailey and Neis scored with the winning runs.

The game was recorded as a defeat but it was in the nature of a fable from which you might extract as a moral this ancient baseball proverb: "A game is never over until there are three out in the ninth."

The Cardinals came into the ninth one run behind and tied the score and stepped ahead when the Brooklyn defense collapsed after eight innings of perfect play. Freigan opened with a single to center and took second on Wheat's fumble. Smith ran for him and ambled over to third on Ainsmith's scrifice.

Smith Scores on Error.

Clemons batted for Pfeffer and hit to Fournier. Smith was trapped off third, but scored when McCarren dropped Taylor's relay of Fournier's toss. Clemons reached second on the play and then surrendered his place to Dyer. Dyer scored a moment later on Blades' single to right.

The Cardinals were counting that game on the proper side of their account when North trudged to the bill. Then all those untoward incidents, hereinbefore related, happened and the game just as promptly shifted to the wrong side.

The eight preceding innings represened a battle between Pfeffer and Ruether. Each was hit hard, but received good support. Ruether's precinct patrols were the superior through the agency of four double plays. In addition Bernie Neis wandered out to the deep center field fence in the seventh and threw up a gloved hand to rob Blades of an apparent home run.

The Cardinal attack failed in the first inning, although it had a wonderful opportunity. Blades walked but died stealing when Mann failed to connect on the hit and run. Then Mann singled to left. Horsby popped out to Johnston, but Bottomley singled to left and Mann stopped at second. Stock worried Ruether until he passed him and filled the bases. It was up to Brooklyn's Hy Myers, but Hy forced Bottomley at third with a roller to McCarren.

Wheat Hits Home Run.

Brooklyn counted two in its half on Johnston's single and Wheat's homer to center. The Cardinals tied it in the third on Mann's single, Horsby's double, Bottomley's single,

Rally With Two Out in Ninth Overcomes Lead of Rickeyites

Hits by Ruether, Neis and Johnston Decide Contest, With North Pitching—Hornsby Is Back in the Game.

By Joseph F. Holland,
Of The Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, May 19.—When you narrow a ball game down to that apparently safe point where you have two men out in the ninth, two strikes on the pitcher and a one run lead, it is reasonable to suppose that that game is within one pitched ball of a victory. However, suppositions are without standing in this modern game of baseball, and the Cardinals lost the final game of the series to Brooklyn to-day merely because you can't suppose.

The Rickeymen came into the last half of the final frame leading 5 to 4 by reason of a two-run rally in their half of the ninth. Lou North, who impresses an observer about as much as the scenery in a subway, was Rickey's selection to pitch the last half of the ninth and retire three men as quickly as possible. Lou got down to that narrow two out, two strike basis and then lost the ball game. The final score was 6 to 5. He shot a strike over on Reuther. Then he cut the plate with another one and Reuther fouled it off. Bailey, running for Reuther, stopped at third. It was strictly a matter between North and Jimmy Johnston then. To retire Johnston meant a Cardinal victory and to send the team into the New York series tomorrow only three and one-half games out of first place. To fall—but that is what North did.

North shot the first ball over and Johnston did exactly the same thing only in more exaggerated form. He walloped it to the farthermost point of deep left field and Bailey and Neis scored with the winning runs.

The game was recorded as a defeat but it was in the nature of a fable from which you might extract as a moral this ancient baseball proverb: "A game is never over until there are three out in the ninth."

The Cardinals came into the ninth one run behind and tied the score and stepped ahead when the Brooklyn defense collapsed after eight innings of perfect play. Freigau opened with a single to center and took second on Wheat's fumble. Smith ran for him and ambled over to third on Ainsmith's scrifice.

Smith Scores on Error.

Clemons batted for Pfeffer and hit to Fournier. Smith was trapped off third, but scored when McCarren dropped Taylor's relay of Fournier's toss. Clemons reached second on the play and then surrendered his place to Dyer. Dyer scored a moment later on Blades' single to right.

The Cardinals were counting that game on the proper side of their account when North trudged to the hill. Then all those untoward incidents, hereinbefore related, happened and the game just as promptly shifted to the wrong side.

The eight preceding innings represented a battle between Pfeffer and Ruether. Each was hit hard, but received good support. Ruether's precinct patrols were the superior through the agency of four double plays. In addition Bernie Neis wandered out to the deep center field fence in the seventh and threw up a gloved hand to rob Blades of an apparent home run.

The Cardinal attack failed in the first inning, although it had a wonderful opportunity. Blades walked but died stealing when Mann failed to connect on the hit and run. Then Mann singled to left. Horsby popped out to Johnston, but Bottomley singled to left and Mann stopped at second. Stock worried Ruether until he passed him and filled the bases. It was up to Brooklyn's Hy Myers, but Hy forced Bottomley at third with a roller to McCarren.

Wheat Hits Home Run.

Brooklyn counted two in its half on Johnston's single and Wheat's homer to center. The Cardinals tied it in the third on Mann's single Hornsby's double, Bottomley's single and Stock's infield out. Whereat Brooklyn once more took the lead on Neis's single, a sacrifice and Griffith's double in the latter half of the third. Mann's homer once more knotted the issue in the fifth, but the Dodgers jumped back into the lead in their portion of the inning on Neis' single, another sacrifice and Griffith's single.

There matters stood until the ninth when they ceased standing and totally collapsed.

Haines to Oppose Giants.

The New York Giants, with a Stadium that has been remodeled to seat 55,000 persons, will entertain the Cardinals tomorrow in the first of a four-game series. Haines of Toney, probably the former, will pitch for the Rickeymen with Nehf occupying the honor role for the champions of the world.

Yesterday was Hornsby's first appearance in a game since May 9 when he injured his knee in Philadelphia. His play indicated that he has fully recovered. He made a two-base hit and scored a run in four times at bat. In the field he handled two assists flawlessly.

Dempsey to Meet Wills Labor Day, Kearns Announces

Colored Champion Would Prove Better Drawing Card Than Willard or Firpo.

By the Associated Press.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., May 19.—The heavyweight battle for championship honors next Labor Day will not be between Dempsey and Willard or Firpo, said Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, but will be between Dempsey and Harry Wills, colored heavyweight fighter.

"This statement," said Kearns to an Associated Press correspondent today, "is, of course, predicated upon Dempsey winning over Tommy Gibbons in the championship battle of the world in Shelby, July 4th.

Neither Willard nor Firpo, whichever may win in their coming fight, would make a drawing card equal to Wills, nor be as hard to crack. Dempsey does not draw the color line and is willing to go against Wills Labor Day if a satisfactory offer is made and Dempsey holds the belt against Gibbons in the Shelby fight."

Kearns arrived in Great Falls last night and will go to Shelby Tuesday to see what progress is being made for the battle July 4. On his return here the latter part of the week, he will remain with Dempsey at the training camp until July 4.

The contractors of the Shelby Arena are putting a large crew of men to work and are to rush it to completion by June 30. Dempsey has not started heavy work as yet and today he took a five-mile road workout with George Godfrey, the giant negro; shadow boxed ten rounds and skipped the rope for 45 minutes.

He looks in the best of condition and expresses himself as well pleased with his camp on the Missouri River.

Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul, contender for the championship against Dempsey in Shelby, July 4, will arrive in Great Falls tomorrow evening and will be met by the Municipal band. A large delegation of citizens are expected to greet him.

PHILLIES BREAK LOSING STREAK, BEAT CUBS 11-4

PHILADELPHIA, May 19.—Jimmy Ring broke the Phillies' losing streak this afternoon by humbling the Cubs in the final game of the series, 11 to 4.

It was Ring's third straight on the home lot and was mainly due to his hard hitting. He hit a homer in the second with Heinie on base, singled in the fourth and drove in a pair of runs with his single in the seventh.

Athletics Defeat Cleveland, 5 to 2

Rommel Found for Only Six Hits in Ten Innings by Speaker's Men.

CLEVELAND, May 19.—Stop those Athletics. The Indians to a man and Cleveland fans in general are out with the battle cry to put a damper on the advance of Connie Mack's hustling bunch and it is not to be wondered at for Saturday the Mackmen rounded out four straight victories over the Tribesmen, the count in the final game being 5 to 2 in 10 innings. Ed Rommel pitched his second game of the series and acquitted himelf nobly. George Matevier, however, matched Rommel's effort up to the tenth and should have escaped unscathed in that inning. Lutzke started the Mackmen on the road to victory when he muffed Rommel's high fly. Matthews sacrificed him on and Hale was thrown out by Lutzke, Rommel taking third.

The Indians disdained passing Perkins and he clouted a single to center that scored Rommel with what proved to be the winning run. Hauser was hit and Welch shot a single to right. Summa fumbling the ball and Houser following Perkins across the plate.

IOWA UNIVERSITY WINS COLLEGIATE TRACK MEET

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., May 19.—The University of Iowa romped away with the thirty-first annual track and field meet of the Iowa Collegiate Association here this afternoon, scoring 91 1-3 points and taking 11 firsts out of 16 events. Iowa State College was second with 30 2-3 points.

Three State records were broken. A high wind prevented the runners from establishing any exceptional records.

McQuillan Blanks Reds With 3 Hits

NEW YORK, May 19.—The Giants won a pitchers' battle between Eppa Rixey, the Cincinnati left-hander, and Hugh McQuillan today by a score of 1 to 0.

The Reds made but three hits off McQuillan and until the ninth got no runner to second base. In that frame, Hargrave singled with one out, but Grob made a sensational stop on Bressler for the second out and after Burns had walked, McQuillan covered first and retired Daubert on his hard smash to Kelly.

A smart bit of base-running gave the Giants the big run in the seventh. Frisch singled to start the inning and Meusel followed with a single to left. Frisch rounded second, coaxed Harper into a throw to second and then kept on to third. He made it and scored on Young's sacrifice fly to Burns. Kelly ended the inning by hitting into a double play.

John Scott, a pitching ace of the Giants, showed up today with a broken hand, the result of a blow from a batted ball by Jack Bantley in batting practice yesterday. The doctors say he will be out of the game for from four to six weeks.

Mays' Triple in Tenth Beats Pruett; Ruth and Williams Hit Homers

McManus, Ward and Meusel Also Hit for Circuit—Schliebner, Browns' New First Basemen Fields Excellently.

By J. Roy Stockton,

Miller Huggins is leading a wonderful baseball machine in the American League. Of that there is no doubt. Yesterady the Yankees scored their fourth successive victory over the Browns, 6 to 5, in ten innings. And yet despite their great batting punch, the machine-like fielding skill and their pitching staff, it took two little breaks to enable the men of Huggins to make a clean sweep of the series.

Not that the Yankees need any lucky breaks to win. A team with such a devastating punch does not need breaks. It will make its own breaks. Meusel or Ruth or Pipp or Ward or Schang will hit a home run whenever a break is needed. Yesterday there were three New York home runs and the only reason the game went 10 innings was that McManus hit a home run with two on bases.

But, just the same, in looking back at the four games the fact stands out that two plays, which broke wrong for the Browns, changed the complexion of the series. If Eddie Foster had held a throw from Robertson in the first game Vangilder would have shut out the Yankees, 1 to 0. And if Kenny Williams had scored from second on a pop single by McManus yesterday, Hubert Pruett would have been victor over Carl Mays in nine innings, 5 to 4.

That was the break that beat the Fohlman yesterday. It was unfortunate rather than poor base running on Williams' part. Here's how it happened: With one out in the eighth inning and the score tied at 4 to 4, Williams' hit to center, and by excellent base running converted a single into a double. His hook slide to beat Witt's throw to the bag was a picture of excellence.

Williams Guessed Wrong.

As Mays pitched to McManus, Williams dashed for third. He had a big lead and appeared to be trying to steal the bag. McManus swung, met the ball and sent a pop fly to center. Williams was almost at third when he realized that there was danger of being doubled off second. He stopped and retraced his steps, though he still was far from second that had Witt made the catch Kenny probably would have been doubled off second. But Witt could not reach the ball. Witt threw to the plate and McManus reached second.

But Williams advanced no farther than third. Mays intentionally passed Severeid, Robertson forced Williams at the plate and Schliebner, the Browns' new first sacker lined gently to Mays.

If Williams had scored on that single by McManus the Browns would have won. And so an error at second base by Foster in the first game and unfortunate base running by Williams in yesterday's contest changed the series from an even break to a clean sweep for the Yankees.

The four games have shown the Yankees at their best. They always had the batting power. They always had good pitching. Now they appear to have the spirit necessary to a great winning team. Cols. Ruppert and Huston builded well when they built their new stadium. When they built that great amphtheatre they gave their Yankees a new spirit. What Yankee player would want to be traded, with the prospects of sharing in the gate receipts of the remunerative world series in the history of the game? The prospective juicy profits from the series and the fact that the players have been shown that Huggins is boss, authorized to buy, trade or sell as he pleases, with buying resources unlimited, have done for the Yankees what no amount of tact or managerial shifts could have done. The men have found a common interest at last, the great American dollar and the Yankees now are a great ball club.

Lee Fohl's Sislerless Browns gave the great New York baseball machine a great battle yesterday. The Fohlmen fought to the last but the enemy's strength was too great.

Dugan's single, Ruth's home run—his seventh of the season—and Meusel's home run, gave the Yanks a three-run lead in the first inning. The Browns overcame that lead in their half. Gerber scratched a single to Scott. Williams singled to right and McManus tied the score with a home run into the left field bleachers.

Then in the third the Browns took the lead, an all-too-narrow lead of one run. Williams walked and stole second and went to third when Bengough threw to center field. Severeid's single scored Williams.

Ward Ties the Score.

Pruett did some great pitching to hold that narrow lead until the eighth when Ward tied the score with a home run into the left field bleachers. The score remained tied then until the tenth when the heavy bludgeons of the Yankees did the dirty work. Schang started with a single to short and Ward walked. Scott sacrificed and Carl Mays, with the call three and two, slammed a triple to right center, scoring Schang and Ward.

The Browns had the satisfaction of seeing Mays knocked out of the box in the tenth. Williams led off with a home run into the right field seats and right there Mays departed. Waite Hoyt finished the game, retiring McManus, Severeid and Robertson in order.

The Browns put up a great defensive game. Schliebner's presence enabled McManus to shift to second and Marty played brilliantly at his old position. Schliebner got a single in four trips to the plate but met the ball solidly each time he batted. In the field he turned several clever plays. He left the bag to take a wild throw from Gerber and deftly tagged the runner as he slid for the base. On a close play he stretched far out to meet a throw from Robertson, a fine example of what baseball men call "helping the throw." He scooped several throws out of the dust and during preliminary practice made some stops and pick-ups which drew applause from the spectators.

Vangilder or Shocker will pitch for the Browns this afternoon in the first game of the series with the Washington Senators.

Zev broke in front and, showing high speed, moved into the lead at once. He stood up gamely under a drive in the stretch run and held Martingale safe. Martingale was close up all the way and held on well. Vigil began slowly, went wide, but closed a big gap and may have been best. Nassau saved ground during last quarter. Chittagong ran a good race. Enchantment tired badly. Prince K. quit. Bo McMillan away poorly.

Cosden entry, $25.80 place, $16.50 show. Vigil, $12.30 show.

to the $6500 gold plate that goes to the owner of the winner, the crowd of boys and infield patrons that crushed past the guards on to the track gave out the nearest approach to a roar of real approval heard during the occasion.

The surprise had been genuinely stunning.

While the race may have been disappointing to the gentlemen with a ticket on the loser, it was in no sense a disappointment as a real racing treat. In fact, the occasion was a record one in every way, if the statement of the authorities be taken.

Crowd 70,000 or More.

The estimated crowd of 70,000 or more persons set a new attendance mark; speculation on the Derby reached a new high total mark of nearly one and one-third million; the day could not have been bettered; and the track was at its holiday best. And then there was that record of 21 starters, four more than any previous Derby field, which, as it paraded to the post, flashing all the colors of the rainbow, carried so many hopes.

Undoubtedly, the best-played stable to win was the Whitney quartet, consisting of Enchantment, Cherry Pie, Rialto and the Picketeer. Nassau, General Thatcher, the Ben Block pair all came in for support. Even the eight horses that represented the "field" group received a fairly heavy play.

But about Zev, little if anything was said. His failure at Pimlico damned him.

At the post Starter Billy Snyder got them away to practically a perfect start, even the sluggish Enchantment and the bad actor Martingale, had few excuses. As the barrier went up after a short delay the stream of color that poured down the track toward the mouth of the funnel-shaped starting point made it almost impossible to distinguish the horses in their proper order. Up in the stands, Caller Jack Dempsey, performed the seeming miracle of describing in what order the horses got away from the post, but all the craning necks of the public, a quarter of a mile down the stretch could see was the big brown with blinkers, out in front from flag fall.

Zev Sets the Pace.

Zev went to the front and swept past the clubhouse setting the pace with Vigil, the horse that beat him only a week ago in the Preakness, laying back comfortably in third position.

At this point, all the bettors in the stand were cheerful; they recalled the well-broadcast statement that Zev would quit. "He'll come back" was echoed all around the track, but as the half, the three-quarters and the mile posts reeled by and Zev still kept the lead, the grand stand crowd began to show symptoms of frigidities of the pedal extremities, cold feet preponderated, despite the sweltering temperature in the crushing crowds of the stands.

Around the far turn, lengths back of the leader, other horses began to make their bid, but Zev showed the way around the turn into the stretch, Vigil moved up closer to the leader and Enchantment from the Whitney barn, came up to third.

It was here that Enchantment was expected to make his bid, if in a contending position, but there was no Derby bid left in the Whitney horse. Martingale, closing strong, got up to catch the tiring Vigil. But Zev was not in danger and won out in the clear. He left the impression that if the Derby field came together once a month for a year the result would be yesterday, today and forever the same.

The Bashford Manor Stakes, which preceded the derby, furnished almost as sensational a performance as did the derby, when Black Gold, a Black Toney colt from the stable of Mrs. R. M. Hoots, ran over his field, after being a bad last away from the post.

This event was a four-and-one-half furlong dash for two-year-old colts and geldings with $5000 added. It is one of the features of the Churchill Downs spring meeting. In the field were some well-bred contenders, but Black Gold was very well played.

Black Gold's Great Race.

When the barrier went up there were 10 horses ahead of Black Gold who got away almost flat-footed. Crowded back by the big bunch ahead and with only a short distance to race, Black Gold seemed beaten, his supporters were ready to tear up their tickets. Turning into the stretch Black Gold was still last, but when they started down the straightway, Black Gold came through like a meteor and without effort moved up past the contenders one by one.

T. S. Jordan, one of the good things of the race, looked a winner at the sixteenth as it did not seem Black Gold could stand the terrific drive. But he came on and won going away with consummate ease. He was 10 or 15 lengths the best horse in the race. He carried 122 pounds and ran the distance in 53 seconds. This was 2-5 seconds under the track record set by Miss Joy.

Bad start considered, the performance appears much better than that of Miss Joy's effort when she established the course mark.

The crowd was something to wonder at. Although probably it was not numerically as great as the authorities stated, facts, however, indicate that if any more persons had been permitted within the allotted space, they would have to have been inserted with the aid of a hydraulic press.

Description of the Crowd.

Some idea of the press of the crowd may be gained from the fact the viewpoints for the races at Churchill Downs extend in a straight line for one-fourth of a mile along the track. Within this space are the clubhouse with stands, tiers upon tiers of boxes and bench-studded lawns; next comes the big grand stand with mezzanine boxes and the balcony; next is the betting arena and paddock and the long stretch of standing room clear up to and beyond the starting point of the Derby. All the seats were occupied, all other space at Derby time appeared to be a solid mass of persons standing shoulder to shoulder, such movement as was possible was accomplished with the same speed and facility that a steam digger removes a hill. At either extremity, the crowd was less dense, but still too solid for comfort.

The grand stand was so packed that moving from one point to another was practically precluded for all except the fair and the brave. Most of the other patrons gave up attempts to make bets in disgust, but there were still enough of the hardy ones to jam the betting ring until men had to all but fight to give the mutuels their money. If the accommodations could have taken all the money offered, there might have been even less hearty cheering for Zev's great victory.

Some Slept in Infield.

This crowd began to assemble with the opening of the gates at 9 o'clock. Several men slept in the infield to make sure of being on hand without the formality of having to consult the gatekeeper in the morning. The grand stand was practically filled at 10 o'clock and in the clubhouse enclosure, where the privileged and other gentlemen with the price may navigate not always too freely, perhaps, the assemblage began almost with the grand stand arrivals. Ten o'clock, the row of club benches near the track fence were all occupied, largely by women. The sun was blazing at that time, seven hours later it was still blazing sunburn patterns through some of the peekaboo waists, but they were game. Seven hours in the sun is nothing compared to a chance to see a close-up of the Derby running.

In the betting arena, men sweated and toiled as they never would for anything except pleasure. And the suffering was only less acute than that attendant upon getting itno line and waiting to collect. It almost made some of the visitors wish they had lost.

Army Plane Adds to Spectacle.

The spectacle, during the running of the Derby, was one not so easily forgotten, between a lane of scores of thousands, the thoroughbreds fought it out toward the wire while spectators looked on from the roofs and even from airplanes. The TC-1 army dirigible from Belleville was among those present; this boat circled the field several times, but, of course, did not descend. It was reported to be on its way to Dayton, O.

St. Louis, or such part of it as was to be encountered in the crowd, fared none too well financially. Practically none had Zev on his calling list, except a few who had be on him in the winter book on the strength of his two good sprint race victories. Even these had a grievance, for the winter book prices on Zev, at which most Westerners got down, was 6 and 7 to 1, while the track odds were a scream at more than 19 to 1.

In fact, the St. Louis contingent needed a shock absorber badly as the several special trains pulled out of the station here following the race. A good time but very little profit seemed to have been had by all.

Bob Moser Out of Luck.

Perhaps the hardest-hit individual from the Mound City district who invested in the Derby was Bob Moser of East St. Louis, who got it straight from Jimmy Rowe that the Whitney entry would finish one-three. Mr. Whitney was out of luck with his entry. So was Mr. Moser with his 2000 hard boys.

Congressman Harry Hawes and several trainloads of disappointment will return to St. Louis tomorrow with hard-luck tales that may beat Moser's, but that will be another story.

The Rancocas Stable, which supplied the winner, is one of the strongest now being operated in the East. Harry Sinclair, the oil king, is the principal owner, with Sam Hildreth, an old fox of the turf known well to veterans of the St. Louis racing game, the brains of the racing outfit. Leary, the trainer, is highly esteemed. Jockey Earle Sande probably is as widely known and as highly esteemed as any rider in the country. His bank account will probably be swelled by $5000 as a result of his fine ride, which, indeed, could not have been better. He was greatly aided by having a quick-breaking mount with a wonderful turn of speed.

Kansas Defeats Missouri, 13 to 7

Game a Slugfest for Jayhawkers, Who Rap Tiger Pitchers for 19 Hits.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 19.—With an exhibition of pitching as miserable today as yesterday's twirling was excellent, the Missouri Tigers went down before the Kansas Jayhawkers, 7 to 13. Coach Potsy Clark shuffled his hurlers about, using Bloomer in the pinches and Kennedy for the snaps after Davis had been batted from the box, while Hank Garrity sent three men to the box in a vain attempt to stop the Kansans.

The Jayhawkers slammed the Tiger hurlers for 19 safeties, seven of them for extra bases and these, coupled with three Missouri errors, brought the 13 Kansas runs across the plate.

The box score:

Vandervear Opposes Spalla in European Title Bout, Today

By the Associated Press.

MILAN, May 19.

MILAN was aroused tonight as seldom before, on the eve of the European heavyweight championship fight to be staged in the Napoleonic arena here tomorrow between Erminio Spalla of Italy and Vanderveer, the Hollander, who holds the title. The affair furnished practically the only topic of conversation, the chances of the Italian fighter to capture the title, being the subject of long and heated argument. Additional interest is lent to the event by reason of the fact that it is the first pugilistic encounter of a major character to be held in Italy.

There has been little betting, except on a pool basis, but the majority of the local enthusiasts are favoring Spalla because of pride in their compatriot.

Specially constructed seats completed today increased the capacity of the arena to 45,000. All the ringside seats, which sell at four hundred lire (approximately $20) have been taken and everything points to a capacity crowd tomorrow. Both fighters tonight issued the customary statements of their confidence in victory.

Grey Lag Beaten in Record Time

Snob 2 Sets World's Mark of 1:43 in Feature Race at Jamaica.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Grey Lag was beaten in the Long Beach Handicap at the Jamaica track today, but to bring about this upset J. S. Cosden's Snob II was forced to establish what amounts to a world's record for one mile and a sixteenth.

The four-year-old son of Prestige-May Dora, for which Cosden paid $85,000 just before the Belmont stakes last year, took the lead at the start, set a fast, even pace and won by three lengths with 115 pounds up in the remarkable time of 1:43.

This broke the track record established by Brainstorm under 98 pounds by a second and a fifth. It may be stamped the world's mark, although Celesta is credited with the record of 1:42 3-4 over the hard trotting horse track at Syracuse.

Yeatman Defeats McKinley, 7 to 3; Soldan Is Beaten

Defeat by Central, 11-1, Eliminates 1922 Champions as Flag Contenders.

Soldan High School, 1922 interscholastic baseball champions, was eliminated from the 1923 title race yesterday when it succumbed to the heavy hitting Central nine by an 11 to 1 score, while Yeatman High was administering a 7 to 5 defeat to the McKinley aggregation.

A victory for Soldan over Yeatman next week will put the Central and Yeatman nines on an even basis and necessitate a playoff as both teams will own 6 victories and 1 defeats. Central has completed its regular league schedule.

The Yeatman victory yesterday was mainly due to the steady pitching of Mel Stremmel. McKinley took advantage of the North End twirler's wildness in the opening frame and scored four runs. After that Stremmel settled and the South Siders were powerless in the pinches, getting but three scattered hits.

Ehrlick and Condon walked to start the game and Mulvaney singled, scoring Ehrlick. Selucky walked and scored with Condon and Mulvaney when Henderson allowed Clem Ehrlick's single to roll through him.

Errors Help North Siders.

Yeatman counted three in its half. Hannegan scored when a relay from center field on his triple went over third base. Harding walked and Mulvihill was safe on an error. Condon then dropped a hot liner from Stremmel's bat and the two runners scored. Two more were added in the fourth. Soroghan singled and both runners were safe on Blumenkamp's tap. They advanced on Henderson's roller and scored when Harding singled.

Three walks and an infield single gave Yeatman two more in the seventh and ended the scoring for the North Siders. McKinley counted one in the ninth when Turner, first up, singled and was sent around on outs. McKinley filled the bags in the fourth with but one down, but Stremmel struck out the next two batters. Again in the eighth the Crimson put a man on third with none out. The next two batters fanned and Selucky was caught stealing home.

Central Puts on Big Rally.

The Central-Soldan game was transformed from a closely fought battle into a one sided rout in the Central half of the sixth inning. Both Colligan and Beckett were pitching tight ball up to that period. Then Beckett failed and the Red and Black sluggers of Mike Walker went into action. Two walks and nine hits off the deliveries of Beckett and Cruse, who relieved him, resulted in nine runs. Kuteer's triple off Crause came with three on.

Soldan drew the first blood in the second when Stanford doubled, was sacrificed to third and scored on Shaw's bunt.

Central tied it in the fourth, on singles by Thomas, Kuterer and Goldberg. Another was scored in the fifth on singles by Gockel and Colligan.

Margulis singled and was caught stealing in the sixth. Thomas, Kutterer and Goldberg singled, Hunt flew out, Dunkman walked and then Gockel and Colligan and Williamson singled. Margulis up for the second time hit, Thomas walked and Kutterer tripled. Goldberg ended the slaughter by striking out.

Eight New Marks Established in Municipal Meet

Illinois Athletes, Running Unattached, Set Records in Four of the Events.

PIKERS FINISH FIRST

Washington U. Runners Gather 75 Points, While Illini Athletes Gather 24.

Washington University's track team captured the seventh annual Municipal track and field meet yesterday afternoon at Francis Field. The Pikers, running unattached in compliance with Missouri Valley Conference rules, placed in every one of the 14 events on the program and captured seven firsts to win with a total of 75 points. Eight new records were made in the meet.

Five University of Illinois athletes, also running unattached, piled up a total of 24 points to win second place. The Washington University Freshmen, unattached, won third place with 23 points, and Principia Academy was fourth with 11.

Joe Bier, the Piker speedster, led his teammates in scoring and was tied for highest individual honors with 10 points. He won the 220-yard dash in good time and set the new mark record of 50 1-10 seconds in the 440-yard run, lowering the old mark record by 9-10 of a second. Bier also ran as anchor man on the Piker half-mile relay team that smashed the old record of 1:30 1-5 by running the distance in the fast time of 1:29 6-10.

Merrill Schwarz of Washington set a new record in the two-mile run with the time of 10:29 4-10, beating the record he established last year by 17 seconds.

Anderwert of Washington ran a fast race in the 100-yard dash to win with 9 9-10 seconds.

Kinsey Sets Two Records.

The Illinois contingent gave the most spectacular performance of the meet. The Illini were entered in only four events, but they set new records in all four and even placed twice in two of them. Dan Kinsey, who was tied with Bier of Washington for highest individual honors, made record time in both the high and low hurdles, showing excellent form to nose out Blanchard, the Piker ace, in both events. In the 120-yard high hurdles he lowered his own mark of 16s to 15 6-10, and in the 220-yard low hurdles he lowered the former time of 25 4-10s to 24 7-10.

Brownell of Illinois, a former Principia star, held the spectators spellbound as he pole-vaulted 12 feet 6 inches, beating the old height by 18 inches.

Johnson of Illinois won the broad jump with a leap of 22 feet 3 1-2 inches, one inch farther than the old mark.

Willman, running for the Washington Freshmen, set a new record in the half-mile run by making the distance in 2m and 2 3-10s.

Cleveland Junior Winner.

The scores made by the various entries were: Washington Varsity, unattached, 75; Illinois University, unattached, 24; Washington Freshmen, unattached, 23; Principia, 11; Runge, unattached 7; Epsilon Eta, 6; Ebenezer A. C., 2; Central High, 3.

There were five special events in the junior division, the championship of which was won by Cleveland High with 18 points. Soldan was second with 15 points; Yeatman third with 12; McKinley fourth with 6 and Central fifth with one point.

Curran's 317 Low In 72-Hole Test

Forest Park Club Determines 12 Members to Compete in District Championship by Test.

Members of the Forest Park Golf Club finished their elimination test yesterday to determine the 12 members to enter the qualifying round of the St. Louis District Championship which begins at Algonquin Club on June 2. Those who came through the test are:

J. B. Curran.
Walter Kossman.
Fred Conway.
H. A. Franke.
R. Belleville.
Tom Malley.
John Eckelkamp.
Paul Anderson.
James Mullin.
R. Kreat.
V. Nettler.
C. H. Cheney.

Curran was low medalist, with a score for 72 holes, of 317. The highest score among the 12 was 347.

Nettler and Cheney who were off their game during the first half of the tourney came through with good games yesterday and finished well up in the race.

The elimination test was necessary because of the large membership of the Forest Park Club and because the rules of the St. Louis district will permit only 12 members to enter.

SIX RECORDS ARE BROKEN AS TIGER TRACK STARS DEFEAT HARVARD TEAM

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 19.—Showing a splendidly balanced team and one that performed more than up to expectations, Princeton defeated Harvard at track in the stadium this afternoon 85 1-2 points to 49 1-2. Six new dual records were registered, one of them by Ralph Hills, of Princeton in the shot putt, proving to be a collegiate record. J. P. C. Taylor, of Princeton, was the winning performer for the Tigers.

Perhaps the most spectacular race of the afternoon was the 880-yard run Capt. J. W. Burke of Harvard, who had previously won the mile in record breaking time, led the field in the shorter distance race until the last hundred yards. It was here that S. C. Conger of Princeton, started a marvelous sprint to the tape and when he crossed the line as a victor, Burke was a yard behind in second place. The time was 58 3-5s.

Hill's shot put of 49 feet 3-4 inch was beautifully thrown. It broke the collegiate record of 48 feet 10 3-4 inches made a number of years ago by Beattie of Columbia. Huis also won second place in the hammer throw.

St. Louis Drew 33 Percent of Attendance at U. S. Cup Games

42,788 Spectators Paid $26,002.75 to Witness Championship Soccer Contests Here Last Season — Cahill's Report Shows Increase Over 1921-22.

By Herman Wecke.

St. Louis' drawing powers, as regards soccer, were not seriously threatened during the season closed recently. In fact, this city far outstripped all rivals, as shown by the annual report of Secretary Thomas Cahill, which will be read to the delegates at the annual meeting of the United States Football Association, which will be held at Cleveland, starting Monday.

Some interesting facts regarding St. Louis' drawing powers are brought to light in Cahill's report. In brief they are as follows:

That championship games played in St. Louis drew almost 33 per cent of the total attendance.

That St. Louis turned over almost 33 per cent of all the money and that, excluding the final, which was played in the East, St. Louis' share of the gross receipts amounted to 37 per cent.

Further, it is shown that St. Louis drew only $4,764.55 less than the entire Eastern division, excluding the final, in which the Scullins, a St. Louis eleven, were one of the contending teams. That all the other cities in the Western division drew but $13,648.32.

The local district, which has been the biggest money-getter for the national association since it joined the body four years ago, did itself proud in the 1922-23 competition. During the past campaign a total of 42,788 persons attended the contests in the Missouri division, while the money taken in at the gate was $26,002.75. Against this attendance, but 52,429 attended Eastern games, while the total for the Western division was 67,829. The receipts at title battles in the East reached but $30,767.30, while the grand total for the West was $39,651.07.

Increase in Local Attendance.

Figures also tend to prove that soccer is becoming more popular in this city, inasmuch as the attendance was 5966 more the past campaign than the year before, when the championship game was played here between the Scullins and Todds. The final this season drew $588 more than the one played here, but when weather conditions were more favorable at Harrison, N. J., than they were when the Bradymen battled the Shipyards aggregation here.

The St. Louis figures compared to those of the entire United States:

Round.	Receipts.	Attendance.	Total for U. S.
First	$2953.00	5,972	25,902
Second	4379.55	6,795	21,786
Third	5542.95	11,278	22,256
Fourth	2686.25	5,406	14,280
Semifinal	4880.75	6,607	21,491
Div. final	6366.25	6,580	13,034
Totals	$26,022.75	42,788	118,834

The above table shows that the two games between the Scullins and Vespers, two local elevens, drew more than half of the spectators who witnessed the 17 contests played in the third round. In all the other rounds, with the exception of the first and the division finals, St. Louis furnished one-third of the spectators.

All of which seems to indicate that the other sections of the country are far behind St. Louis when the growth of soccer, at least when figured as a drawing power, is concerned.

129,857 Attended Contests.

Cahill's report shows that the attendance and receipts this past season were greater than the previous year. The total receipts were $79,705.87, an increase of $29,268.40, while the attendance jumped to 129,857, the first time in the history of the U. S. F. A. that the total has gone over the 100,000 mark. This is an increase of 34,838.

However, the popularity of the game increased far more in the West than in the East. The figures show that 27,108 more attended the Western clashes of 1922-23 than in 1921-22, whereas the increase in patronage in the East was only 6699. Gross receipts for the U. S. F. A. treasury were $11,434.80, $4880.11 more than the year before.

Enclosed Grounds Are Needed

Cahill, further in his report, stresses the fact that the U. S. F. A. is handicapped by the lack of enclosed grounds. Cahill asserts that the body needs "a permanent field and a stand of high grade to care for the spectators and prove that soccer is a permanent sport in the United States." The U. S. F. A. secretary thinks it would be a worthy investment for the association to purchase grounds in the metropolitan district to handle the more important battles. It is the third year that Cahill has included this feature in his report.

In President George Healy's report, which also will be read to the delegates, he recommends that some action toward creating new associations in the West and South be taken. Healy thinks that if this is not done, someone else will beat the parent organization to it.

Plan to Play Three Games to Decide Cup Tie to Be Voted Upon

IMPORTANT rule changes, which will effect the playing of the soccer championship game, will be advocated by the St. Louis delegates at the annual meeting of the United States Football Association to be held at Cleveland, May 21, 22, 23 and 24.

The foremost of these is to change the laws to read that the "championship be decided in a series of best two out of three games, one contest to be played in each of the cities represented in the competition and the other at a place to be selected by the committee."

The other change to be asked is in the rule, which now states "that the championship contest must be played on a neutral field." This, according to the local delegates does not only affect St. Louis, but other large soccer centers.

Winton E. Barker, president of the St. Louis League and a vice president of the U. S. F. A., will attend a preliminary meeting to be held tomorrow. J. J. Barrett, Father Thompson, George Klosterman and John Scully will also represent St. Louis.

American Golf Team Overcomes Lead to Defeat British Stars in Play for Walker Cup, 6½ to 5½

Ouimet, Stymied and One Down on 18th Green, Curves Ball Into Cup, Squaring Match—Dr. Willing Sinks 8-Foot Putt in the Pinch to Win Contest That Decides International Meeting.

By Patterson McNutt.

ST. ANDREWS, May 19.—The American golf team worked a miracle here today and won the Walker Cup, emblematic of the world's championship for team play, by 6 1-2 points to 5 1-2 for England. The Americans won one of Friday's four matches and five of today's eight, losing two and halving one.

The finesh was one of the most dramatic ever seen in international golf. With possession of the trophy depending on the final match when play began this morning, England was leading three points to one. At the start of the second round this afternoon the British held a lead in five out of eight matches and the other matches were square.

Faced with the almost hopeless handicap, the Yankee golfers then went out to play like a bunch of fighting fools and to win as glorious a victory as ever was won on a golf course.

Willing and Wright, yesterday the forlorn stepchildren of the American team, shared the honors of exceptional heroism today with Ouimet. All of them won the right to golfing immortality by wizard-like play with their putters. Herron and Sweetser were the only Americans to lose their matches.

Ouimet's Great Shot.

Ouimet squared with Wethered, but no one who saw that match will ever forget the classic battle those two stars put up right up to the final hole, and Ouimet's final shot will go down in golf history as the nerviest and most masterly shot ever played in a tournament match. Wethered was leading then by a hole. The drives were almost even, Outmet being only a yard back of the most powerful hitter of British golf.

Francis ordinarily takes no time at all to study a shot, but he knew much depended on that approach shot and he studied the roll of the green carefully for a moment before signaling the caddie he wanted a massie niblick. In spite of the extra care he put into that approach, however, he was short on the tricky green about 18 feet. Then Wethered played his shot and his first putt stoppedq six inches from the hole and was a dead stymi for Ouimet.

An exultant gasp of delight went up from the gallery of 5000 that circled the green. It was apparent to every observer there that Francis could not make a putt for a three. If he had been near enough to the hole to pitch the Scotch might have been apprehensive, but they knew that as the balls lay on the green, Ouimet would have to go wide of the cup in order not to knock Wethered in.

That hole would then be halved and Wethered the winner of the match.

Outlook Was Gloomy.

But Ouimet stepped up to the ball and what everyone in the gallery knew was impossible. He squatted behind the ball for a short moment, studied the line of the putt, took a final nerve-satisfying drag at a cigarette and suddenly stiffened with decision.

He flicked the cigarette away, stood up, walked to the ball and without even a second of hesitation hit it as boldly and confidently as if he were tapping a short one in a practice match. To the Americans in the gallery it seemed as if it took that putt one entire week to make the 18-foot journey. The ball went away from the blade fast enough, but then it began to crawl as a man might crawl who was sneaking up on an adversary on hands and knees.

On the first six feet the ball headed straight for the cup and a preliminary shout of triumph went up from the gallery. But Francis had judged the roll of the green perfectly. Suddenly the ball swerved an inch to the right; then it began its forward journey again and continued to follow a straight path until it came within a foot of the hole when it suddenly drifted off again to the right where it caught a downward slope off an almost invisible roll in the green. Catching that slope was a master-piece of a stroke for the ball hung there for just a fraction of a second and then almost with as languid a movement as if it had been floating in a placid lake with the surface disturbed by only a most gentle breeze, the ball drifted into the cup.

Wright and Willing Share in Glory, Fighting Gamely to Overcome Lead

Five distinct American war-whoops could be heard in the moment of stunned silence caused by the putt, but then the gallery came to and cheered the master stroke of a genius at golf as such shots should be applauded.

Next to that shot the most dramatic moments of the day occurred on the seventeenth and eighteenth greens when Wright and Willing won after fighting an uphill battle all the way against a handicap of three down at the start of the afternoon round.

Wright came to the eighteenth all square with Holderness. Both drives were good, but Wright laid his approach within six feet of the pin, while Holderness was going past 20 feet. Holderness laid his first putt on the lip of the cup. The point score was then all square and Wright made America one up when he sank his six-footer as a game golfer should sink them in a pinch.

With America one up the gallery stampeded across the fairways to watch the finish of the Herron-Wilson and Willing-Murray matches. Coming to the seventeenth green Herron was all square with Wilson, but the Scotchman holed a 15-footer for a three and took a lead of one up. At the eighteenth Dave missed a putt for a three and halved the match by two inches and England and America were all square again on points.

Dr. Willing Delivers.

The final decision was then up to Willing and as the gallery again raced across the bunkered terrian to back up that match, the Americans in the gallery were glad that the burden of clinching our right to hold the Walker cup rested on the thick-set shoulders of the rotund little doctor from Portland.

The gallery caught the final match at the seventeenth and American hopes of a miraculous victory went skyrocketing when they learned Willing was one up. Both were short of the green in two with the doctor away and faced with a difficult pitch which if it went wrong might either land him in a bunker or carry beyond the green to the graveled road bordering the course.

The good doctor took his own sweet time, studying the lie of that pitch in spite of the whispered murmur of discontent from the gallery over his slowness, chewing contentedly on the ever present piece of grass he carried between his teeth and gently whistling discordant melody which seems to be the doctor's substitute for the chant of victory.

The pudgy little man walked along the line of his shot two or three times, then firmly pitched the ball eight feet from the hole. It was a courageous shot as he gambled by pitching just to the rim of the bunker between him and the hole so that he might catch the fall of the green toward the pin.

Murray's approach was not over 4 feet from the hole and it looked like a half or a victory for Murray, but Willing putted surely and confidently to get his four and a half. When Murray's ball hung on the lip of the cup it was all over.

Americans Celebrate.

In the next five minutes the stunned, depressed Britishers were treated to some Yankee acrobatics. At isolated and open spots on the crowded course, men who were apparently insane could be seen cartwheeling their way to the clubhouse. Other men were noticeable as they raced over the course, only to suddenly jump on the backs and shoulders of comrades who were doing war dances." Still other figures could be seen who were apparently indulging in mortal combat as they pounded each other on the back and went down to the ground locked together as two ancient enemies fighting a battle of life and death. It has probably been guessed that all these strange figures were Americans.

From a technical standpoint the Ouimet-Wethered match was the most brilliant struggle of the day. Only the most miraculous putting saved Wethered from defeat. Ouimet wanted to win that match more than any other in which he ever played in order to reverse the devision at Deal. Wethered naturally wanted to win in order to justify his position as national champion.

Francis picked up a lead of two holes at the start, but Wethered chopped that lead down, finally finishing the round 2 up when Francis slipped for an instant on the sixteenth and seventeenth holes. Two down to the British champion with 18 to play is not the easiest assignment in the world, but the slender star from Boston went to work on the lanky Englishman as cooly and confidently as if the lead were his.

Wethred Putts Brilliantly.

Considering that Wethered holed four long putts—one 30-footer, two 40-footers and one of 60 feet—Outmet's achievement in squaring the match was a super-effort. The figures prove it for he equaled the course record. The first of the murderous putts came on the second hole in the afternoon when Wethered holed a 30-footer. Francis got that back on the next green, but Wethered went 3 up again when he sank a 40-footer on the fourth. Again Francis cut the lead down to 2 on the next hole when he got a 5 while Wethered was getting into trouble and taking 6. Ouimet squared the match on the seventh with a birdie 3. Wethered sank his 40-footer on the ninth for a 4 against Ouimet's 5. On the twelfth Ouimet again got into trouble, needing 5 against Wethered's 4 and when the British champion holed another 40-footer on the fourteenth for a birdie 3 it looked as if the match was over. But then Francis began to fight and facing the handicap of 2 down he finished with a 3, 4, 3 to square the match.

Sweetser lost because he offered only a mediocre game against the machine-like play of Tolley and Herron was beaten by Wilson for the same reason.

Jolly Wins From Hagen in Leeds Golf Final, 2 Up

Englishman's Long Driving Offsets U. S. Player's Great Work on Greens.

By the Associated Press.

LEEDS, England, May 19.—H. C. Jolly, the young professional of the Foxgrove Club, by his steady playing and long driving, today won the £700 professional golf tournament conducted by the Yorkshire Evening News, defeating Walter Hagen, American holder of the British open golf championship by 2 up in the final round.

Jolly's ability to get great length from his shots through the fairway more than offset the brilliant work of the American on the greens and the latter was never able to get the lead. Starting the afternoon round one up, Jolly increased his lead by winning the fifth, sixth and seventh holes.

Then, by a wonderful exhibition of iron shots, Hagen overhauled his opponent to square matters at the thirteenth.

The next three holes were halved, but Hagen's drive on the seventeenth landed in a bunker, while Jolly holed a seven-yard putt for a birdie 2. Hagen lost the match when he missed the cup by several feet on his putt on the eighteenth green.

A gallery of more than 2000 people watched the match.

Johnston Shows Poor Form in St. Cloud Match

Hard Pressed to Win From Gentien—Partner Brings Defeat in Doubles.

By the Associated Press.

ST. CLOUD, May 19.—Playing in disappointing fashion, William M. Johnston, of California, defeated Gentien, a French schoolboy in the first round of the men's singles in the world's hard court tennis championships today. The score was 6—4, 4—6, 7—5, 6—4.

The day was cool and dark—not the kind of weather the Californian likes. Then, too, he had little opportunity to practice since his arrival in France, owing to rainy weather. Nevertheless, the spectators were prepared to see him crush his youthful opponent, some of them even believing it would be by love sets.

Gentien played marvelous tennis almost from the start. After losing the first two games of the first set, he gathered confidence, but while Johnston netted many returns and could not get his forearm drive working with usual effectiveness, the allround skill of the American proved too much.

The ten-minute rest after the third set—in effect for the first time in French tennis tournaments—appeared to be a welcome intermission for Johnston.

In the mixed doubles, against M. and Mme. Diemer Kool, of Holland, he showed great improvement but had to go down before the splendid playing of the married pair, who showed better tennis in every department of the game. Miss Elenora Sears, who was Johnston's partner, was the weak end of the combination and it was commented that Johnston might have won with a better partner.

The latest knockout was in the form of an opinion by Assistant Corporation Counsel Leonard J. Grossman holding that boxing and sparring exhibitions are in violation of the law.

Chief of Police Collins sought the opinion in order to be guided in the issuance of a permit to the 131st Infantry to give a boxing show.

Grossman's finding on the law is specific and the only loophole left open for promoters and organizations, he said, is by the injunction route.

ACT I.

THE parlor of the Jordan Homestead at Veazie, Me. Late November, 1922. In the room which for a hundred years has been the rallying point of the Jordans, are gathered the family to await the passing of the old woman who long has been the head of the clan. Henry Jordan, the eldest son, a heavy-set man of 50, dull, worn by business cares; Emma, his wife; Nettie, a shallow little rustic beauty, the wife's child by a former marriage; Sadie, a Jordan, widow and a gossip; Orrin, her son, 19 years old; Ella, a Jordan, 35 and unmarried, restless and unsatisfied.

Sadie: Why should Jane be with her instead of you or me, her own daughters?

Henry: You girls always made her nervous, and I guess she's pretty low. (He looks at his watch again.) I said I'd be back before closin' time. I don't know as I dare to trust those boys.

Emma: You can't tell about things; when Sadie's husband died we sat there most all night.

Sadie (angrily): Yes, and you grudged it to him. I knew it then and it isn't likely I'm going to forget it.

Ella: Will was a good man, but even you can't say he was ever very dependable.

Henry (he turns and glances nervously out of window): I don't know but what I could just run down there for a minute, then hurry back.

Sadie: You're the oldest of her children; a body would think you'd be ashamed.

Henry (crosses back to the stove): Oh, I'll stay.

(Jane Crosby, 24, plainly dressed and of quiet manner, "driven into herself" by lack of sympathy and affection, enters with the doctor, who has given her a prescription.)

Doctor: Get it as quick as you can, Jane. I don't know as it's any use. (Jane starts off.) But we've got to keep on trying.

Jane: Yes. (She exits.)

Doctor: Jane's been up with her three nights. I don't know when I've seen a more dependable girl.

Ella: She ought to be.

Henry: If there's any gratitude in the world.

Doctor: Oh, I guess there is; maybe there'd be more if there was more reason. (He returns upstairs.)

Ella: It's my place she took—in my own mother's home. I'd been here now, but for her. I ain't goin' to forget that. No. Me, all these years paying board and slaving my life out, making hats, like a nigger.

(The conversation shifts to their mother's will, and how she may have divided her money.)

Henry: Well, I guess it would be fair enough if she was to remember the trouble I've had with my business. I don't know what she's worth, she's as tight-mouthed as a bear-trap, but I could use more'n a third of quite a little sum.

Ella: Well, you won't get it. Not if I go to law.

Henry: I like to see folks reasonable. I don't know what you'd want of a third of all mother's got, Ella.

Sadie (to Ella): You, all alone in the world.

Ella: Maybe I won't be, when I get that money. I mean I never had anything in all my life, now I'm going to. I'm the youngest of all of you, except Ben, and he never was a real Jordan. I've never had a chance. I've been stuck here worse than if I was dead, 50 times worse. Now I'm going to buy things—everything I want—I don't care what—I'll buy it, even if it's a man. (All laugh.)

Orrin: Mum! Mum! (pulling at his mother's skirts) I thought you told me not to laugh, not once while we was here?

Henry: There hasn't been a Jordan before Ben who's disgraced the men more'n a hundred years—he stands indicted before the grand jury for some of his drunken devilment. If he hadn't run away, like the criminal he is, he'd be in the State's prison now down to Thomaston. Don't talk Ben to me, after the way he broke mother's heart and hurt my credit. We've always been a united family, we've always got to be, leavin' Ben out, of course; you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ears.

Orrin: Mum! say, Mum! Why should anybody want to make a silk purse out of a sow's ears?

Ella: Can't you stop that boy askin' such foolish questions?

Sadie: Well, as far as that goes, why should they? It never seems reasonable to me.

Henry (sternly): Decent folks don't reason about religion; they just accept it.

Orrin: You could make a skin purse out of a sow's ear, but I'll be darned if you could make a silk purse out of one. I'll bet God couldn't.

(Jane returns with Judge Bradford, a man of about 35, better dressed than the others, a more cosmopolitan type, a New Englander, but a university man, the local Judge and the leading lawyer of the town.)

Judge: Court set late. I couldn't get here before.

Jane: I'll take this right up to her.

Judge: I can't realize it, she has always been so strong, so dominant.

Ella: In the midst of life we are in death.

Orrin: Say, Mum, that's in the Bible, too.

Henry: An awful time for us. Mother—wasn't ever the kind to neglect things; if the worst does come, she'll find herself prepared. Won't she? Won't she, Judge?

Judge: Her affairs are, as usual, in perfect order.

Henry: In every way?

Judge (looks at him coldly): Her will is drawn and is on deposit in my office, if that is what you mean.

Henry: Well—that is what I mean. I'm no hypocrite.

Ella: Just to the three of us, that would be fair.

Henry: Judge! My brother's name ain't in her will, is it? Tell me that. Ben's name ain't there?

Judge: I'd rather not talk about it, Henry.

Ella: She'd cut him off, she said, last time he disgraced us, and she's a woman of her word.

Sadie (eagerly, to Judge): And the very next day she sent for you, because I was here when she telephoned, and you came to her that very afternoon because I saw you from my front window cross right up to this door.

Judge: Your brother has been gone for almost two years; your memory is very clear.

Nettie: So's her window.

(Jane enters, with the news that there is no change in the mother's condition. The outside door slams and a few moments later Ben Jordan steps into the room and faces them with a smile of reckless contempt. He is the black sheep of the Jordan family, years younger than any of the others, a wild, selfish, arrogant fellow, handsome, but sulky and defiant.)

Ben: Well (he looks contemptously about. Sits at table). Nobody missing. The Jordans are gathered again, handkerchiefs and all.

Henry: You'll be arrested soon as folks know you've come.

(Ben reveals the fact that Jane, who has kept steadily in touch with him, sent her own money that he might come home before his mother died. The others are angered. Ben insists upon going to his mother and Henry tries physically to prevent him; in the commotion the women scream and the doctor, coming downstairs, chides them for their unseemly behavior. The mother has heard the row and in a few moments Jane brings them word that she has died.)

Henry (after a moment's silence, broken by the low sobs of the women, who for a moment forget their selfishness in the presence of death): The Jordans won't ever be the same; she was the last of the old stock, mother was. No, the Jordans won't ever be the same.

Jane: Hannah and I will attend to everything, Henry. You might come over for a minute this evening and we can talk things over. I'll make the bed up in your old room, Ben, if you want to stay.

Emma (rising and looking at Jane, coldly): Now, Henry Jordan, if she's all through givin' orders maybe you'll begin.

Henry: We was thinkin', now that mother's dead, that there wasn't much use in your stayin' on here.

Jane (turns on them): I hate you, the whole raft of you, and I'll be glad to get away from you. She was the only one of you worth loving, and she didn't want it.

Judge (quietly): Jane isn't going at all, Henry.

Henry: What's that?

Judge: From the moment of your mother's death everything here belonged to Jane.

Ben: Ha! Ha! Ha!

Henry: She couldn't have done a thing like that without sayin' why. She said something, didn't she?

Judge: I don't know that I care to repeat it.

Henry (fiercely): You must repeat it.

Judge (at table): Very well. The day that will was drawn she said to me: "The Jordans are all waiting for me to die, like carrion crows around a sick cow in a pasture, watchin' till the last twitch of life is out of me before they pounce. I'm going to trick them," she said. "I'm going to surprise them; they are all fools but Jane—Jane's no fool."

Ben (bitterly): No—Ha! Ha! Ha! Jane's no fool.

Judge: And she went on (turns to Jane)—she said: "Jane's stubborn, and set, and wilful, but she's no fool. She'll do better by the Jordan money than any of them."

Henry (to Judge): We can break that will, you know we can.

Judge: It's possible.

Henry: Possible! You know, don't yer? You're supposed to be a good lawyer.

Judge: Of course, if I am a good lawyer, you can't break that will. There are small bequests left to each of you.

Sadie: How much?

Judge: One hundred dollars each.

Ella: Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! (She laughs wildly.)

Henry (sternly): Stop your noise, Ella.

Ella: I—ha-ha-ha—I told you I was going to have my laugh, didn't I? Ha! Ha! Ha!

Orrin (pulls Sadie's skirt): Ain't she still dead, Mum? Ain't grandma still dead?

Sadie (angrily): Of course she is.

Orrin: But I thought we was all goin' to cry.

Sadie: Cry then, you awful little brat.

(She slaps his face and he roars loudly; she takes him by the arm and yanks him out of the room, followed by Henry, Emma, Nettie and Ella—through his roars they all speak together as they go. The front door is heard to slam. Jane, Ben and the Judge are alone.)

Ben: Ha! Ha! Ha! "Crow buzzards," mother called us—the last of the Jordans—crow buzzards—and that's what we are.

(He asks Jane if he may go up to see his mother; she consents, and he goes. In his absence the Judge mentions a sealed letter which Mrs. Jordan has left for Jane.)

Judge: And so you're a rich woman. I am curious to know how you feel.

Jane (looks at Judge, half smiles): Just tired.

(Ben comes slowly down into the room.)

Ben: If there was only something I could do for her. Did mother look like that, un-

Lloyd George Sees in French and Belgian Attitude the Potentialities of War

Europe Is Disquieted and International Relations Are Saturated With the Inflammable Spirit of Resentment, Hatred and Revenge, Former British Premier Declares.

Russian Arrogance Furnished no Such Example of Clumsy and Shortsighted Ineptitude as Did France and Belgium in Rejecting Latest Offer, He Says.

LONDON, May 19.

THE French and Belgian Governments have slapped another opportunity in the face.

To make that slap resound as well as sting, they accompanied the rejection of the German offer by a savage sentence of 15 years' imprisonment on the head of the greatest industrial concern in the Ruhr, if not in Europe.

What for?

Because he ordered the works' siren to sound "cease work" for one day when French troops occupied the place.

There's a swagger of brutality about that sentence which betokens recklessness. It came at a moment when the German Government had just made an offer of peace, and when that ally of France who had made the deepest sacrifice in the war to save her and Belgium from ruin was urging the French Government to treat that offer at least as a starting point for discussion.

The answer was to treat the German note as an offense; to promulgate a penal sentence which outrages every sense of decency throughout the world, and to refuse to permit an ally who has been so faithful in time of trouble for France and Belgium even the courtesy of a discussion on the tenor of the reply to be given to a note that so vitally concerned the interests of all the allies without exception.

"Shortsighted Ineptitude"

Russian arrogance in its crudest days furnished no such example of clumsy and shortsighted ineptitude. It gives point to Lord Robert Cecil's observation in the House of Commons that it is very difficult to reconcile the French attitude with the conviction that the French Government desires a settlement.

What was the German offer?

It proposed to limit the total obligations of Germany in cash and kind to 30 milliards of gold marks, to be raised by loans on the international money markets at normal conditions, in installments of 20 milliards up to July 1, 1927; 5 milliards up to July 1, 1929; 5 milliards up to July 1, 1931.

There were provisions for the payment of interest from July, 1923, onward, and agreements entered into for delivery of payments in kind on account of reparation, to be carried out in accordance with arrangements already made. Then came this important provision. After the paragraph in which it was argued that the above figures would strain the resources of Germany to the utmost, it was added: "Should others not share this opinion, the German Government proposes to submit the whole reparations problem to an international commission uninfluenced by political considerations, as suggested by State Secretary Hughes." It further stated that the German Government would prepare and devise suitable measures in order that the whole German national resources should participate "in guaranteeing the service of the loan." Guarantees were also offered for deliveries in kind.

Arbitration Proposal

In order to insure a permanent peace between France and Germany, the note proposed an agreement that all contentious questions arising between them in future should be referred to arbitration. The note finally stipulated that evacuation of the Ruhr be made "within the shortest space of time," and that restoration of the treaty conditions in the Rhineland constitute "an essential leading up to negotiations on the basis of the above ideas."

The above represents the substance of the German proposals.

The French and Belgian Governments in their reply stood by the May, 1921, schedule of payments and declined to forego even the very problematical "C" bonds of £4,250,000,000. Hitherto it has been common ground that £2,500,000,000 is the figure which Germany can be expected to pay. The French and Belgian Governments are now insisting on full measure of the £6,600,000,000 award.

The Hughes proposal they scoff at and treat the proposals put forward by Germany as part of

"No Wonder Marshal Foch Is Touring Central Europe to Put Allied Armies in Order."

"NO wonder Marshal Foch is touring Central Europe to put the Allied armies in order. He seems to me to be the one man in France who has an understanding of what all this is leading up to."

"This proposition (Germany's offer) consists in a virtual acceptance by the German Government of Secretary Hughes' famous New Haven suggestions."

"I can understand those who wish to exploit reparations for ulterior purposes being anxious to keep America out of the business."

"It is essential in order to carry out the Treaty of Versailles that America should have a representative on the tribunal that fixed the payments to be exacted from Germany. The German Government now offers to submit the fate of their country to the unaltered clauses of the treaty which was signed at the Galerie de Glaces in June, 1919. France and Belgium have no right in honor to demand submission to any other."

"Because they insist on enforcing something which is entirely different from the contract entered into by them with Germany in 1919, Europe is disquieted and international relations are saturated with the inflammable spirit of resentment, hatred and revenge."

"Russian arrogance in its crudest days furnished no such example of clumsy and shortsighted ineptitude. It gives point to Lord Robert Cecil's observation in the House of Commons that it is very difficult to reconcile the French attitude with the conviction that the French Government desires a settlement."

"The French and Belgian Governments have slapped another opportunity in the face."

"an expression of systematic revolt against the treaty of Versailles." The real temper and purpose of their intransigient attitude is found in two sentences. Here is the first: Alluding to the resistance offered in the Ruhr to the French attempt to exploit its resources, the note says: "The Belgian and French Governments cannot take into consideration any German proposal whilst resistance continues." That is, however complete and satisfactory a proposal may be in itself, it would be rejected unless preceded by abject surrender to France's designs in the Ruhr. Then later on comes this significant sentence, emphasizing the moral of the first. "The Belgian and French Governments have decided they will only evacuate newly occupied territory according to the measures and in proportion to payments affected. They have nothing to alter in this resolution."

No Interference Tolerated

An impossible payment is to be insisted upon—costs of occupation are to be added to that, and until both are liquidated the French armies are to remain in possession of the richest areas in Germany. Meanwhile, the British Empire and the United States of America, who, at prodigious cost in life and treasure, saved France from a similar humiliation to that which she is now inflicting on Germany, are practically told when they venture to offer suggestions to mind their own business. No interference will be tolerated from meddlers of any sort.

The sum offered by Germany in settlement of reparations is no doubt inadequate. It cannot be accepted by any of the allies in discharge of the German obligations under the treaty. The German Government must make a very substantial advance on that offer before it can hope to come to terms with the allied Governments.

I have no doubt the German Government fully realizes that fact, and I am sure they did not put forward these figures as final tender. They meant them to be taken as the beginning and basis for negotiations. In fact, they say so. When you enter into negotiations your lawyer, if he knows his business, never starts with the figure he is authorized ultimately to propose. Nor does the client always communicate to his advocate the last figure he would be prepared to pay if he had to decide between that and a continuation of the struggle with its costs and its complications. Once pourparlers begin, the original figure disappears, and disappears quickly. A refusal to meet in conference until the figure proposed is acceptable rules out discussion between the parties as a means of coming to terms on the main question in dispute.

Honest Endeavor Needed

I have taken part in the settlement of more industrial differences than probably most politicians. In every case I have started with an impasse. The first meeting of the parties always revealed an apparently unbridgeable chasm between the respective positions. But perseverance and honest endeavor on both sides to find a solution ends in agreement. Good will can bridge any abyss. Unconditional surrender, if insisted upon between independent bodies, is a sure prelude to fresh disputes. Given the fact, therefore, that Germany put forward a proposal which falls short of the needs and equities of the case, is not sufficient reason for declining to meet her representatives at a conference to determine what the right sum should be and the best method of liquidating it.

But there's another and a stronger reason why the German offer should not have been so peremptorily rejected. It did not end with the submission of an inadequate amount in the discharge of reparations claims. Had it done so, the French Government might perhaps contend that Germany must make up her mind, before she is allowed to confer, to raise that figure to something which at least approximates the region of acceptability. But even if France's contention in that respect were reasonable, it is ruled out by the circumstance that in this note the German Government proposed an alternative if the figure they offer is considered unacceptable.

That alternative changes the whole character of the note when you come to judge the question on its bona fides. This proposition consists in a virtual acceptance by the German Government of Secretary Hughes' famous New Haven suggestions. It will be recollected that as a way out of the reparations entanglements he proposed that an international experts' commission should be set up to inquire into the question of the amount which Germany was capable of paying, and the best method of discharging her obligations once they were fixed. Mr. Hughes made it clear that the United States was prepared to assist in such an inquiry. It is this that lent such significance and importance to the speech.

Supports Hughes' Proposal

When I first read that speech I thought it of such moment that I cabled from Spain to British and American papers my earnest hope that the allies, about to sit in conference in Paris, would immediately consider its terms and act upon it. It seemed to me a supreme opportunity for placing a question which is fretting Europe almost into nervous paralysis on a pathway which must inevitably lead to a real settlement. The more I think of the proposal the more I am convinced that I was right, and the more I am perplexed by the rude indifference with which it was treated by the allied Governments.

To this I am baffled to explain why those who are anxious for conclusions never brought these momentous declarations of American readiness to take a hand to the notice of the conference. I can suggest explanations, but none which is not a grave reflection on the way in which the proceedings of that conference were handled. I can understand those who wish to exploit reparations for ulterior purposes being anxious to keep America out of the business.

But why did Britain, Italy and Belgium neglect these chances of securing the association of the one power which could be helpful to the allies in reaching a full and sound decision, and, what is equally important, helpful in all subsequent operations for cashing that decision? Now Germany states categorically that if her cash tender is unacceptable to the allies she is willing to leave the question of the amount she is capable of paying to an international tribunal on which America is represented, and to abide by the decision of that tribunal whatever it may be. That is in substance Secretary Hughes' suggestion. How can a note containing so reasonable a proposal, and a proposal originally emanating from so powerful and so friendly a quarter, be treated as if it were an insult to the dignity of France and Belgium? To declare—as the French note does—that the Hughes proposition is an abrogation of the treaty of Versailles, is to ignore the provisions of that treaty. As a matter of fact it would be a restoration of the treaty.

Original Reparations Plan

As I have repeatedly pointed out, that treaty relegated the question of the amount which Germany has to pay in respect of reparations to an allied commission on which the United States of America was to be represented. The function of this commission was to assess the amount of damages for which Germany was responsible under the treaty, and then to adjudicate on the capacity of Germany to pay those damages in whole or in part. The commission was authorized to fix the amount of annual payments to be demanded of Germany on the double basis of liability and capacity to pay. The withdrawal of the only country which had no direct interest in reparations from the treaty left the commission a lopsided and highly prejudiced tribunal. The Reparations Commission no longer carries out the treaty idea.

A Callous Legislature.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

OUR Democratic legislators of the State of Florida undoubtedly considered human life as something very insignificant when they refused to pass legislation which would abolish whipping of prisoners in private convict camps, now in existence in that State. They seemed to be very little impressed with the accounts of untold suffering and murder of helpless convicts at the hands of whipping bosses, who are employed by those who control the camps because they can take advantage of an existing whipping law.

The reason why this bill did not pass is very evident. It would affect the pockets of those who find it very profitable to use the whip on the poor victims they contract from the State if they do not produce enough to fill their pockets. I sincerely hope that the people of Florida will realize what a blot these gentlemen have placed upon the name of their State, and at the next election will send to the Legislature representatives that will represent them and not those who love whips and who will not only eradicate whipping laws, but also inhuman convict camps.

A Daniel Come to Judgment.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SINCE the days of Woodrow Wilson's superb English, that is to say, when he was President, I learn more of the English language from the Post-Dispatch's editorials than from any other source. I enjoy the editor's style and logic; long may he write to the enlightenment and edification of the intelligentsia.

Degrading Mothers' Day.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MOTHERS' DAY is the sweetest day in the year, and is observed by all. Everyone worships mother, for a mother represents the highest type of womanhood. She is the embodiment of all the noblest qualities—sacrifice, sympathy and unselfish love. This day of mother remembrance comes in the month of flowers, budding May time. Only a flower can symbolize her fragrant kindness and affection.

Then why must profiteering florists rob this day of its joyous sentiment by charging exorbitant prices for just one white flower?

Saturday I was in several shops and saw the flower dealers rolling in the money, selling flowers at their own sweet price; Sunday, I went into a shop to purchase a white carnation, the emblem of the day. Upon being informed that they were 50 cents apiece, I walked out, honoring mother in my heart and foiling an unmasked highway robber.

Normalcy in Webster Groves.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN I voted for Harding three years ago on his promise of going back to normalcy, I didn't know he was going to take us back so far. A letter mailed in the Post Office in Kansas City at noon on Friday is not delivered in Webster Groves until the following Monday, there being only one delivery in my section of the city on Saturday, and this delivery does not include mail arriving on early morning trains.

Borah's World Court.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN an editorial of Monday, you say the Federation of Women's Clubs indorsement of the world's court principle "is as applicable to the Borah aberration or to anybody's else hobby as it is the only feasible plan in existence." From the little that your paper has published about Senator Borah's plan, I had gained the impression that it was a quite feasible plan, and far more likely to succeed without involving undesirable complications, than any yet broached. I mention this as typical of a too prevalent attitude among newspaper editors to dismiss with a slur anything which they have not investigated, or which conflicts with their prejudices and preconceived opinions on a certain subject. Do you know what the Borah plan is?

PROGRESSIVE.

Persecution in Alabama.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHILE attention has been centered on convict camps of Florida, I call attention to a condition in Mobile, Ala. Some 14 seamen arrested on charges of belonging to the I. W. W., sentenced for "vagrancy," in jail since March, and now on a hunger strike. All had money and jobs, but an officer of the American Legion led police to arrest them because they were "dangerous radicals." The offense seems to be that they held a union meeting, in which was advocated general organization for workers.

BORAH'S BUNCOMBE.

If Senator Borah has no better brief against the participation of the United States in the established International Court of Justice than that submitted in his speech at the Coliseum he would do well to cease his campaign. He would strengthen his cause more by silence than by floods of demagogic oratory such as he unloosed for his St. Louis audience.

Senator Borah has admirable impulses; he has captivating ideas, more or less inchoate; he has the courage of his impulses. His criticism of the conduct of France in the Ruhr and of nations seeking spoils and advantage by force and his eloquent denunciation of war are excellent; but in dealing with the practicalities of the situation his views are frothings from the ferment of prejudices, vagaries and intangible fancies. He doesn't think straight.

His argument against the International Court is a mass of slurring trivialities, special pleadings, gross misrepresentations and bald inconsistencies. He doesn't touch the heart of the subject, but multiplies misleading assertions and catchy meritricious phrases designed to belittle and blacken the object of his attack.

The whole trouble with the court is that it is the creation of the League of Nations. Mr. Borah hates the League with such furious hatred that he cannot see in any function, creation, motion or act of the League anything but the diabolical machinery of Satan to foment imperalism, tyranny, spoliation and war. Most of his attack on the League is a rehash of his previous denunciations, with amazing additional charges, which if not caused by crass ignorance, is prompted by prejudicial and unreasoning hatred.

Unmindful of the good work of the League and its real purpose to maintain peace and establish international law, ignoring all the truth and the facts, he pictures its course as a trail of conquest and blood.

He charges the misconduct of members of the League and their unholy purposes to the League itself and treats the International Court—a court framed by the leading international authorities of the world and manned by the best available men—as a mere instrumentality of the vicious greeds and malign purposes of imperialistic members. The world's a muck heap and its best men, if they have anything to do with the League of Peace and its court, are tool sof the foul fiend—except Borah; he alone can be trusted to set the world aright.

Mr. Borah got cheap laughter and applause by talking about the judges of the court being mere political agents selected by the Governments for their own political purposes—mere tools; he caught the fancy of the unthinking by talking about the salaries of the judges and the expenses of the court and the League which the United States would have to share as a member of the court. In an explosion of clownish wit he intimated that the whole expense would be saddled on the United States.

Now strangely enough, Senator Borah wants an international court established by the nations. He wants a court fashioned after his own model. It is a court of far wider jurisdiction and more binding power than the existing court. He wants the nations in establishing it to sign treaties binding themselves to submit all controversies to it and to abide by its decisions.

The bare mention of such a court is enough to give Jim Reed, the irreconcilable pal of Senator Borah, the rabies—to make him froth at the mouth.

How is Senator Borah to get such an agreement from nations that are now so devilishly bad that they are completely addicted to selfish ambition and war and cloak villainous schemes of conquest and spoliation under a covenant of justice and peace?

How is he to get a court without a league, or association of nations? To speak of treaties is to beg the question.

Will not the nations which, under agreement or covenant, or treaty, set up his court, control its machinery for the appointment of judges and share the expenses of maintaining the court?

Being the creation of a combination of nations, will it not be as much in danger of political influence and control for diabolical purposes as the existing court?

Will not the United States as a member have to share the expense and run the risk it would run if it entered the present court, of having all the expense saddled upon it?

Mr. Borah wants war outlawed, but he doesn't want to use force to outlaw it. He doesn't want the nations to stand together against the war aggressor. He wants the decisions of the court to be enforced by moral force.

We grant that the moral force of public opinion is powerful, but it has not yet stopped a war when there was no fear of superior physical force or combination of economic forces. Public opinion has not kept France out of the Ruhr.

The basest thing Senator Borah did was to compare the League of Nations and its work with the holy alliance of Metternich, organized for and by the Kings and autocrats to suppress all political freedom and all freedom of action, education and speech, and to make war for the purpose of suppressing freedom or change.

Every argument that Senator Borah offers against the league and the International Court applies to his own imaginary court. He smashes his own case when he pleads for another international court created and maintained by international agreement. He condemns himself for his opposition to the League of Nations.

By rejecting the immediate, practical, established processes to avert war and pleading for some other plan involving the same conditions, Senator Borah brands his denunciation of war as mere "sound and fury signifying nothing."

The Senator wants everything embodied in the League of Nations and the International Court, but he will accept nothing to obtain them except something unattainable which he himself conceives and shapes. He is gyrating in the air. He is the howling dervish of the irreconcilables.

GENEROSITY AND ITS RESULTS.

Attention is called to the announcement in another part of this paper of the opening of the annual campaign to provide ice for the benefit of children of poor families, who otherwise would be deprived of that essential to infant health in hot weather. There will be some financial relief to the friends of infant health this summer inasmuch as the Community Chest has taken over the burden of supplying the milk formerly provided by contributors to the Post-Dispatch fund. But the number of families to be assisted with ice is expected to be greater than last year. Also, destitute sick persons and invalids are to be provided with necessary ice purchased from the fund.

The results of what has come to be the traditional ministration of St. Louis people to the children of the poor are measured in the official health statistics of the city. The death rate of infants under 1 year of age fell 4.92 per thousand last year, to 56.8, the lowest for any metropolitan city in the United States. The excellent and distinguishing feature of this charity is that it is chiefly contributed by children from entertainment and savings funds. It is a token of generosity and good will from children fortunate enough to be provided by their parents with the necessaries of life to those who are not. Here, if anywhere, is a spirit to be encouraged by other givers, without whom the sad want could not be fairly supplied.

A GARY-CONTROLLED SENATOR.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa sailed from New York to Europe boasting that "I am against anything and everything, all things, which Judge Gary stands for." The distinguished farm-blocker presumably regarded this statement as a declaration of independence, but in fact it is a declaration of intellectual servitude.

A Senator who is automatically opposed to everything that Judge Gary stands for is no more a free man than one who is automatically in favor of everything that Judge Gary stands for. Neither has a mind or an opinion of his own. Neither is capable of forming an independent judgment.

No small part of American political activity, however, derives its inspiration from the kind of prejudice that Senator Brookhart glorifies. The farm bloc, for example, is against anything that Wall street favors, and a large element in Wall street is against anything that the farm bloc favors. Many Republicans are seriously urging President Harding to abandon the World Court, not because they know or care anything about the World Court, but because the court has something to do with the League of Nations. Mr. Wilson is the champion of the League, and therefore a Republican President ought to oppose anything that a Democratic President advocates.

BELITTLING A GREAT MAN.

The pages of history reek with the wrongs perpetrated upon primitive races by the so-called civilized peoples. Even the most passionately patriotic of American historians admit that we have not always dealt generously with the red brother. But perhaps the most glaring of all examples of petty malice toward the savage is that noted by the Cleveland Plain Dealer. It illustrates to what despicable lengths an otherwise enlightened nation will go to satisfy a petty vengeance.

Two Guns White Calf, as the saying is, was a tough bird. He declined to be civilized, and the blessings of religion left him cold. Whenever a missionary approached him, Two Guns White Calf responded with fair words, but as soon as the missionary's back was turned he buried a large hatchet in it. The few white men who got close to him subsequently were compelled to wear wigs. Two Guns White Calf always took away a souvenir of such meetings; usually, for reasons of convenience, it was only the scalp, but sometimes, in a burst of feeling, he took the whole head.

Eventually the palefaces realized that they could not beat T. G. W. C. at his own game. But they were determined to humiliate him and slight his memory, so what did they do? Enlisted the aid of the Government, and put his picture on the face of the nickel. It was a typically mean way of saying that he wasn't worth carfare. A low trick!

The Chinese Government will find that the ransom required for foreign captives will be a bargain compared to the indemnity required if the captives are slain.

FALSE JUDGMENTS.

Mussolini's pronouncement a short time ago that "the people are tired of liberty" was regarded as the observation of a reactionary swashbuckler who had emerged from medieval psychology into a twentieth century dictatorship. But now comes the famous English Socialist, Robert Blatchford, who concurs in that illiberal opinion. "The fact is," he says, "the majority do not want to rule. They will not take the trouble; they are incapable; they do not want to be bothered."

There is doubtless a measure of truth in each verdict, though the emotions of the judges are separated by the infinitude between gloating and despair. Yet both are essentially wrong. Despite the appearance of the man on horseback suddenly galloping into the front page, we know him to be but a bizarre episode; and, similarly, the submission of the majority to the clamor and energy of a special interest is a temporary listlessness. Any comprehensive survey reveals democracy progressing.

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
Notwithstanding
All the bludgeoning
We bore,
Matters stand
Between the nations
Mostly as
They were before.
Where we hoped
For something better
And acclaimed
The thought of peace,
Lo, the mention
Of it merely Causes folks
To cry "Police!"

Let us take
The case of Borah,
Who regards us
As deranged
For believing
Human nature
Has materially Changed.
Nothing to it,
Bill assures us:
Glorify him
As you will,
Man remains
The same old bloody,
Predatory
Creature still.

Reed is equally
Insistent;
Hear him lift
His warning cry,
Bidding us
Beware of others,
Lest by joining
Them we die.
Keeping isolate Forever,
What though simple
Folks are prone
To believe
That others' motives
Are unselfish
Like our own.

So it goes,
My little girlie;
Where we had
A moment thrust
Through the gloom
A ray of promise,
All is after
All distrust.
Owning birth
To fifty nations,
And sojourning
Here as friends,
Each one thinks
The other's homeland
Somewhat oddly
Past amends.

What a spectacle,
Luella!
All forgetting
How we sprang
From the crafty
Evildoers
Everybody
Wants to hang.
Hearing some fool
Tell about them,
Our lucky stars
That we did
Not come from Europe,
But were immigrants
From Mars.

WHAT COUNTRY PEOPLE ARE LIKE.

(Monroe County, Mo., Appeal.)

Nine neighbors, with 32 horses and all sorts of implements, swarmed into Ray Cartwright's fields southwest of Paris, Wednesday, to do the work he has been unable to do on account of a prolonged illness. Plows, harrows, drags and planters were in action during the day and there was a lot to show for the effort when night came. The men brought their own dinners and horse feed. Mr. Curtwright was overwhelmed with appreciation and gratitude for this further evidence of the goodness of his neighbors. He had an attack of flu several weeks ago. It settled in one leg and he had been unable to walk for a month or more.

Sir: The recent international conference of chiefs of police in this country left one important thing undone. No resolution was passed against the Duncan family. Altogether Isadora and her husband have saddened the lives of the Chiefs of Police of Chicago, Boston, New York, Paris, Berlin and Moscow. Just now the head of the Paris police is bitterly regarding Raymond Duncan, Isadora's brother. Raymond is exhibiting a picture called "Maternity," which is declared to be a "serious offense against public morals." The Chief knows that if he arrests Raymond he will be denounced all hands around by those who believe in freedom for the arts, and if he doesn't, the law and order element will hop on him. His feelings are doubtless shared by dozens of Irish-American cops, who have had to stand, blushing to the ears, and watch Isadora dance without anything on, dance intoxicated, or fight with her poet husband. No band of international crooks has ever caused the police the world over half the trouble the energetic Duncans have.

Serious artists labor all their lives and die unknown. Isadora, whose dancing need not be taken very seriously, is by her inborn gift for publicity, one of the founders of the classic dance revival which has spread over the world, to the embellishment of our illustrated magazines. Public men, senators, bankers, captains of industry, have been known to pay a great deal of money to become well-known; Isadora by a natural and unconscious gift has succeeded better than most of them, and for nothing. If some Lord Carnarvon could have obtained exclusive rights, excavating Isadora would have beaten Tutankhamen by numberless columns and rotogravure pages.

Admitting that English lecturers come to this country primarily for the money, which most of us likely suspected, Hugh Walpole, the British novelist, speaking at a St. Louis Artists' Guild dinner, threw even more light upon this growing practice. "There are no people on the continent speaking our tongue who would care to hear us talk," he said, "and except for Mr. Shaw perhaps there is no one writing in England whom the English people would care to hear talk. That limits us to America." Walpole is on his second lecture tour through the United States. He told this story on himself: "In a little city where I was to lecture a lady came with her husband to take me to the hall. The husband drove the Ford, and as we bumped through the streets the good lady kept up a rapid fire of questions about books and authors. She finally said: 'I always thought "Bumurum" was the best book you ever wrote.' I protested that it could hardly be that since I did not write it at all, whereupon the husband, who was listening above the roar of the Ford and who perhaps doubted his wife's entire adequacy upon the subject, exclaimed: 'Stung again, Emma!'"

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

PAN-AMERICAN CONFERENCE.

From the Detroit News.

IT is necessary to look below the surface of the record to determine the value of the achievements of the Pan-American Conference. However disappointing it may seem to some that greater and more definite strides were not made in treaty articles, it is easy to perceive that the absence of signed agreements carries no sinister implication and is even logical. • • • There were no issues so mischievous as to demand a contract pledging written solution. There was no ill-will to be fenced in sharply by treaty precautions. Hypothetical wars found little effective discussion and all proposals looking to the subject of armament and its associated adventures found apathetic audiences. Fundamentally there is a spirit of international amity that broods over the Western atmosphere, and it was the potency of this spirit that caused the measure predicated on disputes and hatreds to evaporate for want of definition. • • • Where all men think of war it is difficult to guard against specific wars. When all men think of peace it is easy and logical to further the works of peace. And not least in importance is the fact that these delegates of so many Powers, with proper jealousies and proprides, could meet and discuss and adjourn without sowing a single seed of ill-will from which misunderstanding may spring. None can say how great or small are the fruits of the conference. But that any frank and friendly exchange of ideas between neighbors is an encouragement of understanding is so true that, if nothing else could be said of it, the conference justified itself in that.

HARDING AND THE WORLD COURT.

From the Philadelphia Public Record.

IF the isolationists of the Republican party expected to intimidate the President in the matter of the World Court, they are greatly disappointed. The President shows no weakening in his demand that the United States participate in the Permanent Court of International Justice. On the contrary, he is convinced that he is reuniting the whole country with him, and we believe he is right, not only as to the World Court, but as to the "fulfillment of larger aspirations" of which he says he has indulged the dream, "nay, a justified hope." The American people were misled three years ago, and they are finding it out.

YOUNG CZECHO-SLOVAKIA.

From the Boston Transcript.

BOSTON'S welcome to the group of 35 children of the Bakule School of Czecho-Slovakia, now making a tour of the United States under the auspices of the Junior Red Cross, promises to be as cordial as it is deserved. • • • Elsewhere on their American tour, now nearly a month old, the students at the Bakule School, through their picturesqueness and color of their national costumes, and the appeal of their folk songs, have attracted wide interest. It seems certain that Massachusetts' interest will be every bit as lively as that of other states. One of the most prosperous states of Central Europe, Czecho-Slovakia is justly proud of her system of national education. At Prague and in many other cities and towns the schools and other educational institutions have reached a high level of efficiency. With the fulfilment of their national aspirations, the Czecho-Slovak people have turned with quickened enthusiasm to a study of the sources of their native culture. That culture, it is needless to say, is rich and ancient one. The students selected from the Bakule School are representatives of the younger generation of Czecho-Slovakia, the generation that is born to this new spirit of nationhood. A visit to America, let us hope, will not "Americanize" them too much, but rather encourage them to return to Prague better qualified for citizenship in the Czecho-Slovak state.

Judge: Yes.

Ben: Crow buzzards. God damn the Jordans!

(The front doorbell rings sharply. It is the Sheriff, after Ben. Jane offers to give bail for him, but he refuses the favor at her hands.)

Jane: I'm just curious. You've got so much contempt for the rest, I was just wondering. You were wild, Ben, and hard, but you were honest. What brought you here?

Ben (sulkily): The money.

Jane: I thought so, but when you saw her you were sorry, but even then the money was in your mind—well—it's mine now. And you've got to take your choice: you can do what I tell you, or you'll go with Mr. Jay.

(Ben finally capitulates and it is arranged that he will stay and work the farm until the spring term of court.)

SITTING ROOM of the Jordan Homestead, some months later. Ella sits at the sewing machine, hemming rough towels. Orrin and Nettie are by the fireplace; Sadie, dressed for outdoors, is also present. The usual petty quarreling is going on between them.

Sadie (to Nettie): Tell your mother I don't wonder she's sort of worried about you. I'd be if you was my daughter.

Nettie: Then you know a lot. I heard Horace Bevins say a week ago that he didn't know as it was any use tryin' to have a Masonic lodge in the same town as you.

Sadie: There never was a Bevins yet that didn't have his tongue hung from the middle. The day his mother was married she answered both responses.

Orrin: Mum! Mum! Shall I take off my coat or are we goin' to stay, Mum!

Sadie: No, we ain't goin' to stay: I just want to see Cousin Jane a minute.

Ella: It won't do you much good. She won't lend you any more money.

Sadie: How do you know?

Ella: Because I tried it myself. (Jane enters, aproned, some towels over her arm. She has an unmistakable air of direction.)

Jane: Are those towels finished?

Ella: Some is; maybe I'd have done 'em all if I'd been a centipede.

Jane: Orrin, just run out to the barn and tell your Uncle Ben we've got to have a path cleared under the clothesline.

Orrin: All right. (Starts for door.)

Jane: And, Orrin, tell Hannah to give you a piece of pie.

Sadie: How do you like workin'?

Ben: How do you think I like working a big farm in winter, tending the stock and milking 10 cows? How do I like it? Another month of it and then State's prison, I guess. I don't know as I'll be sorry when the time comes.

Nettie: Do you know, I'm sorry for you—awful sorry? (Speaks low.)

Ben: You're a good kid, Nettie.

(While they are talking Henry and Emma enter. Nettie is called away from Ben. Jane sends for Ben. He refuses to go. She comes herself for him.)

Ben: I ain't going to move off this stool today. You do what you damn please. Send for Jim Jay, have me locked up, do as you please. Oh, I've said it before, but this time I mean it.

Jane: It's one of the horses. I don't know what's the matter with her. She's down in her stall just breathing. She won't pay any attention to me.

Ben: Old Nellie?

Jane: Yes.

Ben: Watcha got? (Takes bottle from her hand and looks at it.) That stuff's no good. Here—if you hadn't spent five minutes stalling around, I might have had a better chance. (Exits quickly.)

Henry: Mother was like that about animals. I guess Ben sort of takes after her.

Hannah: (The ancient maid-of-all-work). Of course, he is—he's the spittin' image of her.

Jane (re-entering): Well—(she looks at them inquiringly) we have quite a family gathering here this afternoon. I'm wondering if there's any special reason for it.

Henry: I want to talk with you for just a minute, Jane.

Jane: I've a lot to do. Suppose I answer you all at once. I'm sorry, but I can't lend you any money today.

(She firmly declines to grant their requests. Henry wants a note endorsed. Sadie rent money, Ella $200 to start a dressmaking shop. Nettie after a new frock, lags behind, when her parents and Sadie leave. She goes upstairs with Ella.)

Hannah: Every time I listen to that girl, I get fur on my tongue.

Jane: Fur?

Hannah: Like when dyspepsia's comin.' There's two things I can't abide—her and cucumbers.

Orrin (re-entering): I just remember I forgot something. (Goes to fireplace).

Jane: Oh, your overshoes—you mustn't go out without your overshoes.

Orrin: If I had a pair of skates, I wouldn't need any overshoes.

Jane: Well, you could get a pair, couldn't you?

Orrin: (Crossing to the door, on his way out) I could if I had $2.

Jane: Orrin, (takes bill from purse) here's two dollars.

Orrin: Two dollars! Two dollars! Say—you didn't think I—I was sort of hinting for it?

Jane: Oh, no!

Orrin: Well, I'm sorry about hintin,' but I'm glad I got the skates. (Exits).

Hannah: Like when dypepsia's comin.' There's two things I can't abide—her and cucumbers.

Orrin (re-entering): I just remember I forgot something. (Goes to fireplace).

Jane: Oh, your overshoes—you mustn't go out without your overshoes.

Orrin: If I had a pair of skates, I wouldn't need any overshoes.

Jane: Well, you could get a pair, couldn't you?

Orrin: (Crossing to the door, on his way out) I could if I had $2.

Jane: Orrin, (takes bill from purse) here's two dollars.

Orrin: Two dollars! Two dollars! Say—you didn't think I—I was sort of hinting for it?

Jane: Oh, no!

Orrin: Well, I'm sorry about hintin', but I'm glad I got the skates. (Exits).

Ben: (Returning from the barn) Well, I fixed old Nellie up. Just got her in time. Thought she was gone for a minute—but she's going to be all right—I remember her when she was a filly—year before I went to school.

Jane: You like animals, don't you, Ben?

Ben: (She starts to take sewing basket, changes her mind and goes to sit at the table). I don't know—I don't like to see them suffer. I guess it's mostly because they ain't to blame for it. Animals live cleaner than we do anyhow and when you do anything for them—they've got gratitude. Folks haven't.

Jane: Hand me that sewing basket, Ben.

Ben: (Crosses to the machine and brings sewing basket down to her). Sometimes I kinda think I'd like to be here when spring comes and see all the young critters come into the world. I should think there would be a lot a feller could do to make it easier for them.

Jane: Yes.

Ben: Everybody's always making a fuss over women and their babies—I guess animals have got some feelings, too.

Jane: Yes.

Ben: What's the difference? A prison ain't just a place. It's being somewhere you don't want to be and that's where I've always been.

Jane: You liked the army, didn't you?

Ben: I s'pose so. There was things to do and you did 'em.

Jane: And someone to tell you what to do.

Ben: Maybe that's it. Somebody that knew better than I did. It galled me at first but pretty soon we got over in France and I saw we was really doing something. Then I didn't mind. I just got to doing what I was told and it worked out all right.

Jane: Somebody must do the farming, Ben.

Ben: Somebody like the Jordans, that's been doing it generation after generation. Well, look at us—I heard a fellow in the Y. M. C. A. hut telling us how Nature brought animals into the world. Able to face what they had to face.

Jane: Yes, Ben?

Ben: That's what Nature's done for us Jordans. Brought us into the world half froze before we was born. Brought us into the world mean and hard so's we could live the hard, mean life we have to live.

Jane: I don't know, Ben, but what we could live it different.

Ben: They laugh over there and sing, and God knows, when I was there they didn't have much to sing about. I was at a rest camp near Nancy, after I got wounded. I told you about that French lady with all those children that I got billeted with.

Jane: Yes.

Ben: They used to sing right at the table and laugh. God, it brought a lump into my throat more than once, looking at them and remembering the Jordans.

Jane: I guess there wasn't much laughing at your family table.

Ben: Just a few folks together, day after day, and every little thing you don't like about the other, rasping on your nerves till it almost drives you crazy. Most folks quiet because they've said all the things they've got to say a hundred times. Other folks, talking, talking, talking about nothing. Sometimes somebody sort of laughs and it scares you. Seems like laughter needs the sun same as flowers do. Icebound, that's what we are—all of us—inside and out. (Turns and looks out of the window.)

(It is Jane's birthday. She has ordered a blue dress, of the precise shade described by Ben as worn by the daughter of the French lady. She and Hannah have prepared a gala supper. The Judge drops in and Jane asks him to get Ben off by paying for the barn which he burned)

Judge: You—you love Ben—Jane?

Jane: Do you know what was in that sealed letter you gave me the day after she died?

Judge: No.

Jane: I want to read it to you. (Takes letter from portfolio in table drawer and reads): "My dear Jane—the doctor tells me I haven't long to live, and so I'm doing this, the meanest thing I think I've ever done to you. . I am leaving you the Jordan money. Since my husband died, there has been just one person I could get to care about—that's Ben who was my baby so long after all the others had forgotten how to love me, and Ben's a bad sop and a bad man. I can't leave him the money—he'd squander it, and the Jordan money came hard. If squandering the money would bring him happiness, I'd face all the Jordans in the other world and laugh at them, but I know there's only just one chance to save my boy. Through a woman who will hold out her heart to him and let him trample on it as he has on mine."

Judge: Jane!

Jane: "Who'd work and pray and live for him until, as age comes on, and maybe he gets a little tired, he'll turn to her, and you're that woman, Jane. You've loved him ever since you came to us, although he doesn't even know it. The Jordan name is his—the money yours, and maybe there'll be another life for you to guard. God knows it isn't much I'm leaving you, but you can't refuse it because you love him, and when he knows the money is yours, he will want to marry you. I'm a wicked old woman. Maybe you'll learn to forgive me as time goes on. It takes a long time to make a Jordan." (Drops letter on table.) Then she just signed her name.

(The Judge, when he understands the situation, agrees to get Ben discharged by paying plaintiff's charges. Jane and the Judge go downtown together, Jane to match the blue dress with a ribbon. While they are gone, Nettie discovers the dress, puts it on and coquettes with Ben. Later, Jane, who has been busy with the dinner, opens the doors of the dining room to discover Nettie in Ben's arms.)

Jane: (Bursting into the room) Supper's ready!——

Nettie: (Disengaging herself) I'm ashamed about wearing your dress, Cousin Jane. It was so pretty. I'll take it right off.

Jane: You needn't. I guess I don't want it any more. Supper's ready, Ben.

ACT III.

THE parlor. Two monthes later, Jane has called a family meeting. It is revealed by the Judge, who speaks for her, that Jane has had the money in trust for Ben, that Ben has been freed of the charge against him, and that he is now in possession of the Jordan estate.)

Ben: I'm head of the family now, ain't I? And you can bet all you've got I'm going to be a real Jordan.

Henry: I think, Ben—

Ben: From now on there ain't nobody got any right to think in this house but just me. So run along home, the whole pack of you, and after this, when you feel like you must come here—come separate.

(Jane prepares to leave.)

Ben: You're goin' today? Before I order my new farm machinery or anything? You're going to leave me with all this work on my hands?

Jane: Yes, Ben. (She goes upstairs to pack.)

Ben: Well—that's a lesson to me. Oh, she's a good woman. I ain't denyin' that—but she's fickle!

Judge: You fool. Jane went your bond the day your mother died. Jane took you in and taught you how to work, made you work, taught you through the one decent spot in you, something of a thing you'd never known, self-respect. Worker over you, petted you, coaxed you—held you up—then you hurt her—but she kept on—she went herself to Kimbal, after he had refused me, and got his help to keep you out of prison—then, against my will, against the best that I could do to stop her, she turns over all this to you—and goes out with nothing.

Ben: Why? Why has she done this, all this, for me?

Ben: Oh, it don't take long for a man to get hungry—it only takes a minute for a man to die—you can burn down a barn quick enough—or do a murder, it's just livin' and gettin' old that takes a lot of time. Can't you stay here, Jane?

Jane: There's Nettie.

Ben: Nettie—that couldn't stand the gaff—that run out on me when I was in trouble.

Jane: It doesn't matter what folks do, if you love 'em enough.

Ben: You be quiet and let an expert talk. I was lonesome and I wanted a woman, she was pretty and I wanted to kiss her—that ain't what I call love.

Jane: You! You don't even know the meaning of the word.

Ben: That don't worry me none—I guess the fellow that wrote the dictionary was a whole lot older'n I am before he got down to the L's.

Jane: You've got good in you, deep down, if you'r only try. I know, it's always been that way. You've never tried for long, you've never had a real ambition.

Ben: I don't know what 'twas you promised mother, but you've broke your word. No man ever needed a woman more'n I need you, and you're leaving me.

Jane: Don't, Ben—

Ben: Look, what I done to her, Look what I done.

(Later.)

Jane: You said I was a good sport once. You shook hands on what we'd do to bring this old place back—there's plenty to be done.

Ben: A good sport—(he takes her hand). I'll say you're all of that. (Hannah enters.)

Hannah: If you ain't careful you'll miss that train.

Ben: She ain't never going, Hannah.

Hannah: I guess you'll be mighty happy—marriage changes folks—and any changes in him will be a big improvement. (She picks up Jane's bag and climbs the stairs. Jane and Ben laugh.)

LLOYD GEORGE SEES POTENTIALITIES OF WAR IN FRENCH ATTITUDE

Its character has completely changed.

It is essential in order to carry out the treaty of Versailles that America should have a representative on the tribunal that fixed the payments to be exacted from Germany. The German Government now offers to submit the fate of their country to the unaltered clauses of the treaty which was signed at the Galerie de Glaces on June, 1919. France and Belgium have no right in honor to demand submission to any other.

Because they insist on enforcing something which is entirely different from the contract entered into by them with Germany in 1919, Europe is disquieted and international relations are saturated with the inflamable spirit of resentment, hatred and revenge.

No wonder Marshal Foch is touring Central Europe to put the allied armies in order. He seems to me to be the one man in France who has an understanding of what all this is leading up to.

Kiwanis Club in Annual Picnic.

Members of the Kiwanis Club and their families and friends attended the annual picnic of the club in Forest Park yesterday afternoon, where the old-time greased pig contest, with other old-fashioned games, held the interest of business men and children alike. A baseball game was played between two teams composed of members.

A generous contributor to this work is Ben Selling, a merchant of Poreland, Ore., who has given $10,000 annually for the last two years as a feature of his birthday celebration. Selling is 71 years old.

WOMAN WITH PHONE COMPANY 40 YEARS

Men Operators Were Being Replaced With Girls When Miss Frances Oberbeck Began Work.

Miss Frances Oberbeck, 4145 Maryland avenue, yesterday completed 40 years of service for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. The company is making an event of it. She will be decorated with a service emblem and rewarded in other ways.

MISS FRANCES OBERBECK.
—Gerhard Sisters Photo.

When she began the masculine era of telephone operators was passing out. Instead of "Number, please," as the girls say now, the men used to ask, "What do you want?" The switchboard was a table and the operators sat around it. There were 3425 telephones to watch instead of 20,000 in one switchboard, as it is today.

"Spilling the Beans."

The telephone instrument, much cruder than its later developments, was also simpler. The subscriber pressed a button and gave his number. It was possible for all subscribers to do this at once and at times the operators were busy, Miss Oberbeck remarks.

In order to divide the work fairly, each call was counted by dropping a bean in a bowl on the table. When work was pressing, Miss Oberbeck recalls, someone was sure to "spill the beans." Hence one of the reasons for the present slang expression.

Office at Sixth and Pine.

The main office of the company was at Sixth and Pine streets when Miss Oberbeck applied for a job. There were other exchanges on Leffingwell avenue, Cass avenue and Rutger street and an exchange in East St. Louis.

Shortly after Miss Oberbeck started the work of switchboard operation was turned over to girls. She was graduated from the switchboard to the post of supervisor and was made an instructor of telephone operators. She served at the school at Vandeventer avenue and Olive street from 1907 until a short time ago, when she was transferred to work at the main office.

Meighen to Speak in St. Louis.

GARDEN CLUB FLOWER SHOW OPENS SATURDAY

Admission Free and No Charge for Entries in Competition for Prizes.

The fourth Free Flower Show of the Garden Club of St. Louis will be held next Saturday and Sunday at Shaw's Garden, opening Saturday at 2 p. m. and Sunday at 10 a. m., and remaining open Saturday and Sunday until 10 p. m. There is no charge either for admission to the show or for entries, and the show is given to demonstrate the possibilities of St. Louis gardens, whether in back-yard plots or more spacious grounds. There will be no commercial exhibits.

Prizes of vases, garden tools, bulbs and seeds are offered. Entries will include familiar plants, garden flowers and flowering shrubs. Premium books and entry blanks may be obtained by a telephone call to Grand 567.

Miniature Garden Prizes.

Special prizes are to be given both adults and children for miniature gardens. These are made on trays about three feet square, and a model which was on exhibition at the New York Flower Show is now on display in the Olive and Sixth street window of the Famous-Barr store. Flower beds, terraces, lily ponds, a cottage and garden furniture in tiny proportions, are arranged in the miniature gardens, with artificial materials used. The children's prize will be $10 worth of radio or electrical supplies.

There will be other prizes for children, and schools are urged to make group entries of flowers.

Prizes are offerded for the best arrangements of flowers for dinner or luncheon tables and the exhibitor does not have to show flowers raised by himself, but can buy flowers, as the prize is offered on arrangement points.

Cause of Change in Dates.

In many of the classes members of the Garden Club will not compete, leaving the competition to the general public. The change in date of the show, which had been first announced for yesterday and today, was made because the cold weather had retarded the growth of many plants.

The committee in charge of the Flower Show includes Mrs. O. K. Bovard, Mrs. W. N. Matthews, Mrs. Robert J. Terry, Mrs. Charles M. Rice, Mrs. W. J. Polk, Mrs. Sam C. Davis, Mrs. Robert J. Terry, Mrs. E. H. Simmons, Mrs. J. Lionberger Davis, Mrs. E. J. Walsh, Mrs. S. Shapleigh Boyd, Mrs. R. H. Switzler, Mrs. G. F. Tittmann and Mrs. F. C. Sharp and others. E. H. Angert is president of the Garden Club of St. Louis; Mrs. James T. Drummond, vice president, and W. N. Matthews, secretary and treasurer.

ARMY MAKES MONEY ON SHIPS

Refusal of First Bids, Brings $22,000 More for 4 Vessels.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

MANILA, April 22.—The United States army made more than $22,000 on the sale of four army vessels during the week by refusing first bids and advertising a second time.

The old transport, Liscum, which was sold to a lumber company, brought $43,792, while the first bid was only $30,170. The tugs General Weeks and General Lawton and a quartermaster scow brought a total of $28,000, as a result of the second advertisment for bids, which brought approximately $10,000 more than the first bids. The sale of these vessels was a final cleanup of salvaged material in the Philippines department.

Y. M. C. A. HOSPITAL SERVICE

14,174 Bedside Visits in St. Louis in Year.

That the work of the "Y." did not cease with the war is the substance of a report just published of the work of the Hospital Service Division of the Y. M. C. A. during the past year. With the wounded veterans undergoing treatment at nearly all the large St. Louis hospitals, many visits were necessary to have personal communication with them. At the U. S. Veterans' Hospital at 5800 Arsenal street, alone, there were 9500 patients during the past year.

In order to make the 14,170 bedside visits listed, it was necessary to made 435 trips to the hospitals. The report also lists 950 calls on seriously sick and dying patients, and many other details out of the routine of the doctors and nurses, but necessary to the welfare of the veterans. George T. Houser is secretary of the Hospital Service Division.

THE "ACID TEST" OF REALTY INVESTMENT VALUES

BANKERS, FINANCIERS AND OTHERS CHARGED WITH THE INVESTMENT OF FUNDS IN REALTY, INVARIABLY APPLY THE SO CALLED "ACID TEST" TO THE PROPERTY INVOLVED. THIS TEST USUALLY COVERS THE FOLLOWING POINTS:

Location of property, is it in the direct track of progress and expansion? Does the use to which the property is to be put, supply an economic or physical need?

Has it commercial, building and racial restrictions that adequately secure the investment against value-depressing encroachments, for a long term of years?

Is it priced at a fair valuation?

Its convertibility, does it constitute a ready collateral?

Are its promoters residents of long standing with high-class dependable reputations?

Finally, does it offer a fair return, within a reasonable time, to the investor?

OLIVE BOULEVARD APARTMENT ADDITION UNIVERSITY CITY
STANDS THIS "ACID TEST" 100 PER CENT PERFECT

LOCATION. On one of University City's most prominent boulevards, places it directly in the field where the demand for apartments far exceeds the supply. It is an undisputed fact that the residential expansion of St. Louis is westward.

NEED—Olive Boulevard Apartment Addition fills both an economic and physical need. It is estimated that there is today a shortage of 25,000 homes and, at the present rate of building, the city will face in two years a shortage in excess of 60,000. Two and four family apartment houses must be built to avoid this menace. This property is ideal for such apartments.

RESTRICTIONS. An investor in this property has the satisfying assurance that he is fully protected against deteriorating invasions of industrial enterprises or unsightly environments; yet entailing no hardship upon himself.

VALUATION—Olive Boulevard Apartment Addition is selling today at prices ranging from $35 to $47.50 per front foot, including all improvements which is one-third the price per foot charged for University City's most desirable apartment house property, within but three or four blocks distance.

CONVERTIBILITY. This property offers an exceptional collateral security, as its constantly increasing value affords the most desirable character of guarantee.

ITS PROMOTERS. The E. Davis Realty and Mortgage Co. need no introduction to the people of St. Louis; their achievements in the realty field of this city reads like a history of the city's residential growth. THEIR REPUTATION STANDS BACK OF EVERY TRANSACTION MADE BY THEM.

INVESTMENT RETURN. The return from an investment in this property will unquestionably amount to 100 per cent within two years. It will take but a casual investigation to convince anyone of the absolute certainty of this fact.

OLIVE BOULEVARD APARTMENT ADDITION
OFFERS AN UNEQUALED OPPORTUNITY FOR INVESTORS

LETTER OF 'HARD TIMES' FINDS U. S. HOME FOR GERMAN GIRL

Belleville Man and Wife, Touched by Story of Hardship, Pay Writer's Way Here.

A description of conditions in Germany and a desire to leave her homeland, expressed in a letter which she had written for another person, resulted in the arrival of Miss Hedwig Windeich, a young German girl, of Saxony, at the home of Albert Rehg at Belleville Friday.

Rehg and his wife decided to pay the girl's passage to America after reading an account of the suffering caused by famine and disease in Germany, in a letter which had been written to them by her for a friend of theirs in Saxony. Upon her arrival in Belleville, the girl told Rehg that because of the lack of stability of German money, hardships are being experienced by many people.

BAD COMPLEXIONS ARE POPULARITY RUINERS

"Clear the Skin, Regain That Girly Appearance and Most Other Faults Are Overlooked," Say Authorities on Beauty.

The motion picture screen has done more than any other thing to prove that with a beautiful complexion you can overcome the handicaps of no education, few advantages, poor circumstances and a thin, unattractive form.

If you could see and talk with a great many of the girls and women of the screen you would find that their charm is in their face and that they rarely ever have that inherent aristocracy which their appearance on the screen impresses you with.

This shows that you can make the same impression on the people who pass you as you walk along among the crowds, or those you come in contact with every day, if you will just let the thousands of girls and women who use the Black and White Beauty Creations be your guide.

If these women were not satisfied with Black and White Cleansing and Peroxide Cream, Face Powder, Soap and many other complexion necessities now sold under the Black and White label, the tremendous sale of more than eight million packages a year would not be possible. Anything can be sold once, but unless it really brings results that thing will not be bought a second time.

QUIETNESS MARKS WEEK'S BUSINESS ON STOCK MARKET

Slackening Viewed as Natural Aftermath of Recent Liquidation—March Foreign Trade Figures Discussed.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 19.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review says:

"Quietness succeeded weakness as the feature of the markets during the past week. At London a similar condition was accounted for partly by the approach of the Whitsun holidays. There, as here, however, the slackening was a natural aftermath of recent liquidation. Weak holders apparently have been shaken out on both sides of the water and the technical position considerably improved. Yet the displays of weakness served to undermine confidence and so to restrain new buying. Political uncertainities also have continued to exert a deadening influence, the trend of the Ruhr negotiations still being undetermined and the condition of Bonar Law's health raising questions as to the possibility of a new British Premier. These circumstances, and the season of the year, offer ready explanations of the conspicuous lack of activity.

Better Tone Displayed.

"Meanwhile the markets have displayed a better tone. Striking successes such as were achieved by the bear party during the two preceding weeks have been lacking. For the most part the bears have contented themselves with delaying operations, some covering of short commitments going on. Certain of the commodity markets also have steadied. The decline in copper prices was arrested and some signs of a resumption of buying appeared. In the sense that the recent lull in buying was due to consumers being fairly well covered by forward contracts, time is now working against the bears. Production is intense, but goods seem to be passing into consumption rather well. Sooner or later existing contracts will expire and as that time approaches new buying inevitably will appear. It is still too early to judge the outcome of that test.

"But the momentum which business now has makes it seem unlikely that the new buying movements will be weak. What seems more probable is that as fall approaches commodity prices will stiffen once more and that higher wages and production costs will have their full effect in the latter part of the year.

"That the recent reactions in commodity prices will have less effect on the general level than has been thought is indicated by the Department of Labor's index for April. As compared with March, the figure for all commodities is unchanged. Aside from a weakening in coal prices, which is an aftermath of last year's strike, all the industrial groups are higher. This is, of course, the unfortunate part of the whole price movement. The cost of industrial products has been generally increased, while farm products have benefited by an amount smaller than the average. Thus during the past year the Department of Labor's index of all commodities has risen 11 per cent. In the same interval farm products have gained only 8 per cent and foods only 5 per cent, while cloths and clothing have risen 20 per cent, building materials 30 per cent and metal and metal products 37 per cent. In other words, the margin between what the farmer sells and what he buys has been increased to the detriment of his purchasing power. The margin has, furthermore, been materially increased since the first of the year. Nevertheless, unless farm products rally for some unforeseen reason the margin is likely to be even greater this fall because of the advancing tendency of wages.

Our Foreign Trade.

"March foreign trade figures, showing an excess of imports amounting to $61,000,000 draw attention both to the effects of the Ruhr crisis and a general tendency in our own trade. Occupation of the Ruhr has checked European business and so reduced the purchasing power of our best customer. This is one of the reasons for the recent reactions in the prices of our grains and raw materials. Yet the administration, which is so anxious to be the farmer's friend, will do nothing to help straighten things out in Europe, although this is the principal way in which it can really help the farmer. Similarly the policy of keeping money at home and of demanding payments from our foreign debtors has inflated production costs and again injured the farmer. It also is reducing our ability to sell manufactured goods abroad. Our trade clearly is badly out of balance. A more conservative monetary policy at home and a more co-operative policy abroad would be greatly to the benefit of the country as a whole."

"Quotations for most of the active industrial issues decvlined, further during this morning's two-hour session of the stock market. The major part of the selling took place during the first hour, but the rally which followed was not strong enough to make up the earlier losses and declines of a point or more were the rule throughout the list. The volume of trading continued small. The bond market was generally firm with the restricted business typical of a Saturday morning.

New Low for Mark.

"With the leading markets abroad closed or inactive trading here in foreign exchange was extremely dull. The only interesting feature was a further drop in the German mark. With very little business done the quotation raced to .0019¾ of a cent which establishes a new low for all time. Movements in other currencies were, for the most part, without any particular significance. Sterling at $4.62¾ was ¼ higher while French francs lost ⅛ at 6.66 cents."

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House shows a moderate gain in demand deposits and a sharp increase in loans and discounts, the latter amounting to $37,000,000 which brings the total to $4,491,000,000. Time deposits decreased $12,391,000 to a total of $136,000,000. Along with these changes was an increase of $3,242,000 in surplus reserve, the latter item standing at $10,720,000.

"Commodity markets were influenced to a considerable extent by the action of the stock market. Cotton opened quiet and firmer on unfavorable weather prospects. Short covering in the early trading in the May and July futures was rather pronounced, the latter rising about 22 points and later reacting sharply when stocks sold off. Following this a good rally on renewed buying and further covering set in and at a late price of 25.41 cents the July future was 13 points above the previous close.

"Wheat found a narrow market and also sold off shortly after the opening, but failed to show much rallying power in the later trading.

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, May 19.—The actual conditions of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows an excess reserve of $10,720,410. This is an increase of $3,242,490.

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, May 19.—The local wool market wound up a somewhat inactive week today with a slightly better absorption of raw wools by manufacturers in evidence and prices firm at prevailing levels. Western growers are continuing to hold clips for high prices.

SHORTS COVER AND COTTON CLOSES UP

NEW YORK, May 19.—The cotton market opened steady on an advance of eight to 18 points, with active months selling 11 to 23 points net higher, right after the call, on trade buying of July and covering inspired by prospects for unsettled and showery weather in the South over the week end. The advance carried July prices to 25.50c and October to 23.14c, but after the initial buying orders had been supplied, there was apparently little demand and prices soon eased off under a scattering liquidation prompted by the unsettled ruling of the stock market and unfavorable reports from the primary markets of cotton goods. July then sold down to 25.16c and October to 22.81c, making net declines of about eight to 10 points on the more active positions. Trading was comparatively light after the first few minutes and prices corresponsingly sensitive to any selling.

The market steadied up again later in the morning on unfavorable weather advices, covering reports on heavy showers in South Texas with a cloudburst at Beaumont. Much of the buying was attributed to covering on the outlook for continued unsettled weather over Sunday, but there was also some stray buying of July which closed at 25.42c, or about 28 points up from the lowest.

The general market closed steady at net advances of 12 to 20 points.

St. Louis Engineers Also Take Up Fuel Saving Question.

Fuel saving and the elimination of excessive smoke were chief topics of discussion at a dinner given for mechanical and chemical engineers by the St. Louis section of the American Ceramic Society, at the Gatesworth Hotel Friday night.

W. B. Chapman of New York, a member of the American Ceramic Society, which is a clay products producers' association, spoke on "Fuel Saving in Modern Gas Producers and Industrial Furnaces," and F. E. Bausch, president of the St. Louis section, told the engineers that with methods learned from European countries, from 30 to 50 per cent could be saved in fuel consumption and smoke be virtually eliminated.

DESCENDANT OF ROBERT EMMET TO WED ENGLISH HEIRESS

Fiancee Daughter of Sir Rennell Rodd, Former British Ambassador to Rome.

(Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 19.—Sir Rennell and Lady Lillian Rodd have returned to London from Italy to make preparation for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Evelyn Rodd, to Thomas Emmet, some time next month. Sir Rennell, formerly British Ambassador to Rome, will give his daughter away.

The girl whom young Tom Emmet has been lcky enough to win eventually will come into possession of a considerable share of the very large fortune of her mother, who was one of the Guthries of Craigie, in Forfarshire. Lady Rodd inherited her wealth from her father, who made a fortune in South Africa.

Miss Evelyn Rodd is one of the most highly gifted girls in England. She is a B. A. of Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford; she speaks four languages fluently and is a fine dancer.

Thomas Emmet is a great-great-nephew of the Irish patriot, Robert Emmet, and a grandson of Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet of New York. Young Emmet served in the Great War, in which his brother, Robert Emmet, an officer of the First Life Guards Regiment, laid down his life, and which their father, Col. Robert Emmet, likewise played a gallant role in France under the British flag.

MUSICIANS TO MEET IN WEST.

Colorado Springs Awarded Convention Over Jacksonville, Fla.

Colorado climate won over Florida oranges in competition for the meeting place of next year's American Federation of Musicians' convention, and the delegates, adjourning their twenty-eighth annual gathering yesterday at Hotel Chase, voted to meet again at Colorado Springs rather than Jacksonville, Fla. Omaha, Salt Lake City and Springfield, Mo., also were considered.

Joseph N. Weber, president, of New York, together with the other officers of the federation, was re-elected. A resolution was passed in memory of Otto Ostendorf of St. Louis, former national treasurer, and for 25 years a member of the organization.

CHURCH PROCESSIONAL TODAY

A processional of many dignitaries of the Catholic Church will inaugurate the pontifical high mass to be celebrated this morning at 11 o'clock in St. Francis Xavier's College Church, Grand and Lindell boulevards. GRAIN LIST LOWER ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, May 19.—Grain futures closed lower at the week-end session. Bullish crop reports from Kansas caused rises at times, but they did not hold. The market was not a large one. There was evening-up business.

In the local cash grain market Saturday wheat offerings were freer and prices were lower. Local mills took the good wheat bought No. 2 red, sound country run No. 3 and sparkling wheat there was virtually no outside demand, nor an outlet for skinburnt and Western damp offerings. Ordinary No. red was offered at $1.20. Five or six cars were carried over. Hard wheat was lower. There was little domestic demand for yellow descriptions. Local mills took lower. Local mills took one cent dark 12.50 per-cent protein at $1.26. Cash corn was quiet with receipts small and demand also light. Shipping wheat there was 2¼c decline. Oats offering were light but prices were lower. Mills and local trade were buyers but not all wanted.

Both wheat and corn futures ruled lower in the forepart of the day, reports of favorable weather conditions influencing values. Liverpool was closed, which fact, with it being a holiday, tended to curtail trading.

July wheat opened at $1.13⅜. September was $1.12⅛, July corn, 81½@81¾c, and September wheat, 78¾c.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 555 cars of wheat, compared with 509 a week ago and 565 last year, Minneapolis receiving 147 cars, Duluth 65 and Winnipeg 343.

Local wheat receipts, which were 63,623 bushels, compared with 60,000 a week ago and 68,800 last year, included 33 cars local and 20 through. Corn receipts, which were 16,970 bushels, compared with 31,200 a week ago and 46,800 last year, included 12 cars local and 1 through. Oats receipts, which were 58,000 bushels, compared with 90,000 a week ago and 114,000 last year, included 18 cars local and 13 through. Rye receipts were 21 cars local and 7 through.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators were 454,070 bushels of wheat, 353,680 bushels of corn, 320,526 bushels of oats. Grain stocks comprised 2018 bushels of No. 1 red winter wheat, 73,500 bushels of No. 2 red winter wheat, 2726 bushels of No. 1 hard winter wheat, 216,558 bushels of No. 2 hard winter wheat, 58,320 bushels of No. 2 corn, 144,550 bushels of No. 2 yellow corn, 121,411 bushels of No. 2 white corn, 259,841 bushels No. 2 white oats, 98,061 bushels of No. 3 white oats, 214,820 bushels of No. 2 rye, 28,013 bushels of kaffir corn.

WHEAT TRADE UNINTERESTING ON THE CHICAGO MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 19.—Wheat trade today was uninteresting and price changes were of little consequence. There was pressure at the start, prompted by the weakness in stocks and cotton, but after the first rush to sell was over trade fell into a rut. The feature in the late trading was the excellent demand for July at around $1.15⅝ and the failure of the price to go through that level discouraged short selling. Covering by shorts caused a little recovery in the later trading. Whitsuntide holiday restricted export business. Milling demand was limited to a few cars. Sales of 45,000 bushels were reported to go to store. Weather was generally favorable. Primary receipts show a slight increase. Shipments of 40,000 bushels from Russia are the first since season of 1920-21. That year Russia shipped 120,000 bushels. Chicago May closed ⅝ lower, May, $1.17⅜; July $1.15⅞@⅞; September, $1.14.

Corn action was much the same as in wheat. There was pressure at the start, but some of the bulls were good buyers on the dip. The cash corn situation is weaker. St. Louis reported cash corn weaker and Kansas City sold cash corn was offered 2c lower than yesterday, while yellow corn sold at 1c lower premium than yesterday. Shipping demand was slow. Market closed ⅝@¾c lower, May 80c, July 79⅝@¾@⅞, September 80¼@⅞.

Oats were lower at the start, but some good support was uncovered on the dip. Cash demand was slow. Market closed ¼@⅝c lower, May 42⅛, July 42, September 40¼.

Provisions were dull and prices showed little change. East sold a little lard, while ribs were wanted in a small way by investors on the better cash demand. Lard closed unchanged and ribs unchanged to 5c higher.

Weekly Butter Review.

CHICAGO, May 19.—Under the weight of increasing supplies, the butter market developed a weaker undertone, although advances at the opening of the week indicated a firm market.

Trading was hardly well started when it became apparent that stocks would not be cleaned up at the current level of prices. The remainder of the week found the market in the buyers' favor. Confidence was generally lacking and as a result speculative demand lagged.

Surplus on the large markets was generally regarded as the cause of the week's unsettled ending. The source of that surplus was a more rapid increase in production without a corresponding increase in consumptive demand.

Impending the season of flush productions kept all operators nervous. Evidence of that cautiousness was the unsettled condition of the market and the character of the trading. In Boston where the market was comparatively firm all week, full cars were not in demand. Buyers wanted smaller lots. That was also true to a certain extent of other markets.

The week was marked by a tendency of prices on different scores to spread out due to the larger percentage of undergrade butter. Spring defects were more prominent in the receipts of all markets.

Ninety-two score stock at Chicago closed at 40½c, a drop of 1 point.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 19.—Trading in cattle on the Kansas City market during the current week was more irregular than usual, paves the way for the market news service of the United States Department of Agriculture. Most beef steers were steady to a little better, with long native yearlings and heavy steers up to $10.25. Bulk all grades sold from $8.10 to $9.75. Receipts were 39,000, including 6000 calves, against 39,000 and 11,000 the previous week.

In the hog market shipping demand was much broader than usual, outsiders taking more than three times as many offerings as the week earlier. Advances noted during the forepart of the week, which brought hogs to $7.75, were eliminated later. Friday's market being about the same as a week ago, with tops both days at $7.80. Receipts were 65,000, against 77,703 the previous week.

All killing classes in the sheep and lamb market were higher. More spring lambs, especially natives, were offered than any previous time this season.

Totals	127,869	118,228	102,802

Hogs finished slightly lower for the week at the St. Louis National Stockyards, while other classes closed generally steady to mostly higher. Combined receipts were of fair volume, figuring approximately 127,860 head. Native cattle found active and closed 25c higher on an average. Western steers, on the other hand, of which there were some 75 cars on sale, encountered a fairly active outlet and declined 25c to 40c. The bulk of steers from local territory available for beef purposes cashed from $7.50 to $9 per cwt. Seven dollars caught a plain offering and the top was $10.20. A load of choice 1384-lb. Herefords that had been fed in Benton County, Mo., were the attractive droves of steers were noted at $9.15. Stockers and feeders, $7.25 to $8.75. Bulk of offerings, all from native and quarantine alleys, varied from $6.50 to $7.60. Strictly good to choice yearlings were included in a range of $7.90 to $8.50. Yearling steers reached $10 and $8.25 to $7.75, most making $8 to $7. Cutter cows made $3.25 to $4 and canners $2.75 to $3.25. Most of the heavy beef and bologna bulls sold through a spread of $5 to $5.85, with some best reaching $6. Notwithstanding the busy season in the country there were enough buyers here to absorb the limited offering of stockers and feeder cattle. Steers suitable for this trade were usually of light weight and indifferent quality. A popular price range was $6.60 to $7.50.

Veal calves advanced $1.25 to $1.50 under normal receipts and an active demand. Eight lights Friday were quotable at $10.50 to $10.75, as against $9 to $9.50 the previous Friday.

Hog Receipts Generous.

Hog receipts the past week were generous, the supply totaling approximately 66,740 head. This is a decrease of 2763 from the previous week's run of 93,977 and an increase of 13,787 over the supply of swine received for the corresponding time of last ago. The run for that week was 72,953. The quality of the offerings this week has been good, the number of heavy hogs showing up better than for some time recently. The demand has centered largely on the better weight kinds, those weighing 210 pounds or more. Prices for the week were lower, the gains made during the early part of the week being more than offset by the losses toward the close. Heavy hogs from 250 pounds and up at the close of the week were about 25c lower. The medium and light hogs from 150 to 240 pounds are from 20 to 25c lower. Pig receipts for the week have also been generous and during the first part of the week the supply was greater than the demand. However, there has been an improvement later, although the close of the week's trade found pigs somewhat lower. Most of the decline is noted on the lighter kinds, the better weights still finding a right good demand. Light lights from 130 to 140 pounds are little changed compared with the previous week's close. Fair strong weight kinds from 120 to 130 pounds are also about steady. Medium weight pigs from 110 to 120 pounds are from 15 to 25c lower, selling from $6 to $6.50, according to weight and quality. Light pigs and pee wees from 110 pounds and down are also lower, selling from $5.25 to $6 largely. Rough hogs are uneven at the week's close. Packer sows selling at $6 to $6.25 are steady the week and stags at $4.75 to $5.50 are about 50c higher than the previous week's close. At the close of this week hogs are selling at the following prices: Heavy hogs from 250 pounds and up, $7.50 to $7.60; medium weight kinds from 230 to 250 pounds at $7.60 to $7.70 and light hogs from 150 to 230 pounds at $7.60 to $7.70. Pigs with weight from 130 to 140 pounds are selling from $6.75 to $7.25 and lighter kinds from 120 to 130 pounds at $6.50 to $6.75. Pigs from 110 to 120 pounds are selling from $6 to $6.50 and light pigs and pee wees from 110 pounds and down are clearing at $5.25 to $6. Packer sows $6 to $6.25 and stags $4.75 to $5.50.

Sheep Market Active.

A much better supply of sheep and lambs arrived this week than any week so far this year, and a good proportion of them was spring lambs. Sheep did not show any active all week. Sheep did not show any improvement in prices but the lambs were higher. Spring lambs made a slight gain while the clipped ones advanced sharply and reached the highest point of the year. Receipts totaled around 9500 head which shows that the heavy season is about here. Most of the good spring lambs sold at $16@17.25, fair to medium grades went at $14@15.75, and the culls and those that were not quite as good as the others at $10@13.50. Clipped lambs reached $15.25, several decks going at that price. Shorn lambs are top the previous week. Sheep of all kinds were ready sale but only at steady prices. Some feeding ewes and breeding ewes but this trade has really not got start as yet. All good mutton ewes sold around $7 and heavy ewes at $6, breeding ewes $7.50, choppers and bucks $3.50@4.50 and canners $1.25@2.25.

Horses and Mules.

Commission receipts of horses and mules for the week figured approximately 550 head, a modest total. The offering was about evenly divided in the two departments. Demand was much the same as the previous week's trade centering largely on good big horses, heavy chunks and the good, big mules. These classes ruled steady to strong. There was a fair clearance was made. Demand for other grades of horses and mules was less active and values were no better than steady.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, May 19.—The raw sugar market was quiet today and in the absence of business prices were more or less nominal. The undertone was firm and offerings were light, with holders generally asking 6½c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6½c for centrifugal with no indications what refiners would pay.

The firmness of the spot market and expectations of an increased consuming demand, caused considerable covering for over the week end in the raw sugar futures market and final prices were 10 to 19 points net higher or the best point of the season. Refined sugar futures were 10 to 15 points net higher, or the best point of the season.

Sales included 2,000 tons of July, 6.64; December, 5.08; March 4.78.

There was no improvement in the demand for refined sugar in first hands, although it was said that second hand supplies had been pretty well cleaned up and there appeared to be nothing available below refiners quotations, which range from 9.50 to 9.90 for fine granulated.

Refined sugar futures nominal.

GRAND JURY INQUIRY IN BALLOT CASE HELD UP

No Evidence Tending to Incriminate Individuals, Sidener States.

Plans for a grand jury investigation of alleged tampering with ballot boxes containing ballots cast in the Fifth Justice of the Peace District at the April election, have been abandoned for the present, Circuit Attorney Sidener announced yesterday following a conference with members of the Board of Election Commissioners.

Recount of the ballots in that district and investigation by the Election Board of charges that the ballot boxes were broken open and markings on ballots changed while the boxes were in vaults at the city hall have failed to produce evidence tending to incriminate any particular individual, the Circuit Attorney said.

Chairman Edwards of the Election Board said there were clear indications that the boxes were opened and markings on ballots changed, but that the board's investigation had not disclosed by whom this was done or how.

One Republican and one Democratic employe of the Election Board are the only persons holding keys to the vault. Both have disclaimed knowledge of the charges. Ben Murmann was elected Justice of the Peace in that district by a majority of 215 votes, as counted and tabulated by precinct election officials. The recount, made in the contest case brought by Edward J. O'Hare, Democrat, opponent of Murmann, shows O'Hare leading by 213. Attorneys for Murmann charge that the ballots were changed after they were delivered to the Election Board.

Murmann's attorneys have obtained permission of court to call as witnesses 412 persons who are shown to have voted for O'Hare, to ask them if they cast their ballots for him. Republican workers say many of these voters declare they did not vote for O'Hare.

Circuit Attorney Sidener said the grand jury would be requested to investigate if completion of the contest case revealed evidences of fraud which have not been discovered at present.

SPECIAL PROSECUTION FOR 'WHITEY' DOERING

Government to Take Mail Truck Robbery Case Off Hands of New District Attorney.

The Government will employ special counsel for the prosecution of William F. (Whitey) Doering, Egan gangster and paroled burglar, in connection with the downtown robbery of an armored mail truck April 2. This was announced yesterday by Assistant Attorney-General Rush Holland, who has come on from Washington to assist the new District Attorney, Allen Curry, to organize his staff.

"Mr. Curry, being a new man on the job, with his hands full of routine work and only one assistant, the Department of Justice has decided to take the mail truck robbery prosecution off his hands," said Holland. "Ordinarily the District Attorney here has four assistants, but three have resigned. I also will help the new United States Marshal, T. W. Hukriede, to organize his force."

Doering, in whose bungalow at 23 Sunset avenue, Richmond Heights, postoffice inspectors and detectives found securities which had been stolen in the mail truck holdup, has been charged in Federal warrants with having entered a United States mail truck for purpose of robbery, assault upon a postal messenger, threatening postoffice employes with deadly weapon, theft of mail and possession of stolen mail. Miss Helen Gratz to Become Bride of Godfrey Rockefeller of New York on June 26

Four Nuptial Ceremonies Set for the Evening of June 2—Many St. Louisans to Attend Wedding of Miss Sue Williams at Boonville, Mo., to Scott Wilson—Miss Irene Loeb to Be Married on June 4.

SOCIETY'S spotlight, ever turning in quest of some new object to engage its fickle fancy, turns on the June bride, and her parties, her trousseau and her wedding, are topics of interest.

And though June is the time-honored favorite for weddings, rarely has there been a month when such an attractive array of them crowd the social calendar. Some days have two and these important ceremonies and only a difference in the hour will make it possible for friends of all the brides to witness their marriages.

Beginning with the second day of the month, until June 26 when Miss Helen Gratz will become the bride of Godfrey Rockefeller of New York there are many important weddings and even in the last few days, when the warmth of spring has become the heat of summer, a few weddings have served to arouse society from its summer lethargy.

Miss Gratz has not planned the details of her wedding, but it will take place at the home of her father, Benjamin Gratz, 5155 Lindell boulevard, at 5:30 p. m. and will be witnessed only by relatives and close friends. A large reception will follow.

On June 2, Miss Irene Smith will marry Sidney Y. West of Little Rock, at the Second Presbyterian Church at 6 o'clock; Miss Eleanore Meyer will become the bride of David Burruss Jr., in Pilgrim Congregational Church at 8 o'clock, while at the same time Miss Sue Williams will be married at Boonville, Mo., to Scott Wilson. A car of St. Louisans, including relatives of Mr. Wilson, will go to Boonville for the ceremony. Miss Marceline Alexander and Eugene Long Crutcher of Nashville will be married the same evening at the home of the bride's father, 6603 Clemens avenue.

Miss Irene Loeb, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hanau W. Loeb, has chosen June 4 as the date of her wedding to Julius B. Cohn. It will take place at Hotel Chase at 8 p. m. Miss Loeb and her parents recently returned from an extended tour of the Orient.

Miss Frances Hays will be married to Charles Marquis Merrell in Grace Episcopal Church at 5 o'clock the afternoon of June 5. The wedding will be followed by an informal reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Hays, parents of the bride, 5065 Waterman avenue. Mr. Merrell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Merrell.

On June 6, Miss Mildred Hadley will become the bride of Dr. Clarence Kelly Canelo, and in New York the wedding of Miss Harriet King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. King, formerly of St. Louis, and Roger Coolidge will take place.

The marriage of Miss Mary Willie Woodward and Frank C. Merker will take place at 6 p. m., June 7, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Woodward in Forest Ridge.

On June 12, Miss Elizabeth Chapin will be married to William Glasgow Bruce Carson of the faculty of Washington University, and two days later, in a brilliant ceremony at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Miss Gloria Geisinger will be married to Donald Church Bixby. The ceremony will be performed at 5:30 p. m., and a reception will follow at the Geisinger home in Kingsbury place. Mr. Bixby and his bride will spend their honeymoon in Europe. On the same day Miss Alice Wiedmer will be married to Harry Weurtenbaecher in Tyler Place Presbyterian Church.

Two weddings of June 16 will claim attention. Miss Janavince Kerens of New York will become the bride of Walter Bryant Pierce, and because her parents are former St. Louisans and her grandfather, Richard C. Kerens, lived for so many years in Vandeventer place, the wedding is of particular interest here. Miss Margaret Ogle will become the bride of Thomas A. Cleveland on the same day.

The New Cathedral will be the scene of the wedding, June 19, of Miss Olivia Harbaugh and J. Edward Vaughn of Pittsburg, formerly of St. Louis.

Miss Wilma Robinson will be married Wednesday, June 27, to Robert James Moffatt of Toronto, Canada. The Rev. J. Courtney Jones will perform the ceremony at 8:30 p. m. in Emanuel Episcopal Church of Webster Groves, and a reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. John O. Robinson, 135 Jefferson road.

The first warm days hasten the plans of St. Louisans for spending the summer at various resorts. Several families have already taken cottages and will depart early in June.

"Debs" Will Give Party to Escorts on Friday, June 14

Committees Already Chosen for Annual "Leap Year" Dance, at St. Louis Country Club, to Wind Up Season.

EACH year, after the regular routine of formal parties has run the gamut of popularity and most of the gaieties subsided, the debutantes, whose activities start the season in September, end it in the most informal way, with a "Leap Year" dance, which they give, whatever the year, to a favored few of their escorts of the last few months.

Committees are chosen to provide entertainment, music, invitations and decorations, and on the appointed evening the "buds" and "second year" girls call for the men in leap year fashion and motor them to the St. Louis Country Club where these affairs are usually given. Awaiting them are perhaps two or three dozen young matrons, without their husbands, who act as "stags," "cutting in" on dances and assisting the "hosts" in entertaining their guests.

The evening Friday, June 1, has been chosen as the date for the affair this year, and some of the committees comprise Misses Margaret Turner and Margaret Chandler, invitations which, by the way, are printed on elaborate lace paper, such as is found in candy boxes, with a rhyme suitable for the occasion; Misses Alice Scott and Mary Etta Randolph, decorations, and Miss Elizabeth Boeckeler, entertainment.

Miss Georgette Madill, daughter of Mrs. Edward S. Robert, is giving a house party over this week-end at her mother's country home in Pike County, Mo. The St. Louis guests are Mr. and Mrs. Theron E. Catlin, Mr. and Mrs. Irr A. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Harold McK. Bixby, Miss Anne Lionberger and Frederick Pittman.

Following the party Mrs. Catlin and her children will go to visit her mother, Mrs. Edward Caswell Dameron at Clarksville, Mo., for two weeks.

The Secret of Having Beautiful Hair

Beautiful hair—hair that is soft and silky—adds more than anything else to your attractiveness and charm.

Beautiful hair is not a matter of luck, it is simply a matter of care.

You can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly. Proper shampooing is what brings out all the real life and lustre, the natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant.

Your hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali, in ordinary soap, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why leading motion picture stars and millions of women, everywhere, use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo.

This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive and a four ounce bottle lasts for months.

UNITED SHOE WORKERS TO MOVE HEADQUARTERS TO ST. LOUIS

Annual Convention to Be Held Here In June, Instead of September.

The United Shoe Workers of America, embracing all organized shoe workers' unions, with the exception of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, will move its national headquarters to St. Louis next month, and the annual convention of the United Shoe Workers of America, which was scheduled to be held here in September, will be held in June instead.

The recent merger of three national unions of shoe workers independent of the American Federation of Labor left the United Shoe Workers of America without any membership in Eastern cities, as the members from Lynn and Salem, Mass., and Brooklyn and Rochester, N. Y., all joined the amalgamation.

The national headquarters of the United Shoe Workers of America at present are at Lynn. The local branch of the union is at Garrison avenue and Olive street.

How to Bathe Face to Remove Wrinkles

Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the country have been using the saxolite face bath to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly all over the face, thus reducing lines and sagginess. The formula is: Powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. These ingredients are, of course, perfectly harmless and there is no difficulty in obtaining them at any drug store or toilet counter.

Superfluous HAIR

DIPLOMATIC COLONY AT WASHINGTON HORSE SHOW

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—King Horse reigns in the national capital and everyone from the President down has paid tribute to His Majesty. Below the historic slopes of Arlington the contenders for blue ribbons among equine aristocrats struggle for place in the sawdust arena daily before an audience that represents the bon ton of American society. The diplomatic colony is present practically en masse.

Gen. Pershing, who is an ardent horse show fan, appeared not only as a spectator, but as an exhibitor as well, his two jumpers, Jeff and Prominent Tom, winning a handful of blue ribbons.

Among the St. Louis folk having boxes at the show are the Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis, while Rear Admiral and Mrs. Coontz are among the frequent visitors at the afternoon performances.

Two other generals are vieing with Pershing for honors for their entries. These are Brigadier-General William Mitchell, of the Army Air Service, and Major-General H. K. B. Theil, military attache of the British Embassy.

The Missouri Colony in Washington was shocked to learn of the sudden death of one of its most prominent members, the Rev. Dr. Robert Talbot, brother of Bishop Talbot, of Bethlehem, Pa., and head of a prominent Episcopal parish in this city. Dr. Talbot was a native of Fayette, Mo. He formerly served in the Cathedral at St. Louis, and was married to Miss Mary Stella Glaze of Macon, Mo. For years he was rector of Trinity Church, Kansas City.

President and Mrs. Harding are entertaining the ambassador to Great Britain and Mrs. George Harvey at the White House. The Ambassador will spend some weeks here. After concluding his White House visit with Mrs. Harvey, he will occupy a suite at the Hamilton Hotel. After all the speculation as to the reason for their return to America, which ranged all the way from resignation to rest, it is now reported that the trip home was made on Mrs. Harvey's account. She has never found the English climate suitable for her frail health.

Many visitors from St. Louis and other cities in Missouri came to Washington to attend the sessions of the National Conference of Social Work, which has 5000 accredited delegates on its lists. Miss Edith Baker, director of the St. Louis Hospital Social Service, told the delegates that physicians need social workers to help them acquire the information on which to base accurate diagnosis. She said:

"Doctors are reluctant to advise patients in dispensaries when there is no assurance of their recommendations being carried out, or to care for patients in hospital wards whose further treatment or post-operative care after discharge cannot be assured. With an adequate corps of social workers to help them, doctors are more apt to do their best work. Hospital social service has contributed to health conservation by aiding in the early diagnosis and adequate treatment of tuberculosis."

Among the Missourians serving on the various Conference Committees is Charles M. Hubbard, St. Louis, who is a member of the Resolutions Committee.

A dinner of the Little Cabinet, as the members of the group of assistant secretaries and other executive heads are called, was held on Monday. Robert Woods Bliss, the retiring Under Secretary of State, presiding. As a surprise, President Harding and Ambassador Harvey appeared at the function.

The latest reports from Atlantic City, where former Governor and Mrs. Joseph Folk are staying, is that Mr. Folk is recovering steadily from his recent illness. They will return to Washington and re-open their home in Woodland Drive.

Memorial services for Jewish service men who lost their lives in the world war will be held next Sunday at 2 p. m. at Temple Israel under the direction of the Jerome L. Goldman Post, American Legion, and the Order B'nai Brith. An address by Senator Reed will conclude the services, which will be attended by representatives of all local Legion Posts and the families of Jewish soldiers who lost their lives while in service.

WOMEN'S CLUBS AND THEIR ACTIVITIES OF THE WEEK

The last meeting of the St. Louis Dante Club was held at the home of Mrs. William Watt Spear, 5146 Washington boulevard, Thursday. Preceding the luncheon, a program was given by some of the members, including a history of the club read by its chroniclers. There were several guests.

St. Louis Circle No. 37, Ladies of the G. A. R., will hold its annual memorial service May 30, 10 a. m., on the Municipal bridge. The U. S. Navy with Commander Kays; the U. S. marines under Lieut. Inman; all ex-navy men and other patriotic orders will join in the strewing of flowers on the waters. Dr. Homer Hall will be the speaker of the day. Perfection Chapter, Order DeMolays, with patrol, bugle and drum corps will participate.

The May meeting of the Delta Rho Beta Society was held Saturday at the home of Miss Adele Dieselhorst, 1337A Marcus avenue.

The discussion section of the Tercentenary Shakspeare Society will meet Tuesday at 2 o'clock in the Art League rooms of the Chamber of Commerce Building. The "Winter's Tale" will be discussed under the leadership of Miss Agnes Ruth Hoffinger.

At the meeting of the Executive Board of the Republican Woman's Club, held Friday morning at 11 o'clock in the private dining room of the Town Club, a full attendance was had, all being present with the exception of Mrs. Philip N. Moore, Mrs. Henry Caulfield, Mrs. Gilbert Fox and Mrs. Henry Butler, who were at Joplin, where they were sent as delegates to the meeting of the State Federation of Woman's Clubs.

It was decided at this meeting that the present headquarters at 409 Century Building be maintained permanently.

The rooms will be open all through the summer for any Republican woman to use as headquarters or for any work the club may decide to do.

The second open forum meeting of the club will be held at the Gatesworth Hotel the third week in June. At these open forum meetings it is the privilege of any woman to have the floor for two minutes when she may discuss any topic which occurs to her as pertinent.

Questions of national policies will be discussed at these meetings in order that the women may become conversant with presidential platforms when the 1924 campaign arrives.

The St. Louis Council, National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Association held their regular meeting Thursday afternoon in the assembly room, Board of Education. Mrs. E. P. Walsh, president, presided. Reports from the various school circles and committees were read. The following officers were elected: First vice president, Mrs. A. J. Burr; second vice president, Mrs. John Kiburtz; third vice president, Mrs. Robert Ecoff; recording secretary, Mrs. E. H Brewer; treasurer, Mrs. L. Haeger; auditor, Mrs. L. Diesel.

The Webster Groves Chapter D. A. R. met May 15 at the home of Mrs. William Stoecker, 450 West Jackson road. Assisting hostesses were Mmes. T. R. Pullis, S. Mitchell, Louis Wolf, George Shepardson and E. C. Stuart.

Mrs. E. C. Stuart was elected delegate to the State D. A. R. Convention to be held at Sedalia in October with Mrs. F. H. Whitis as first alternate. A Decoration Day Committee was appointed to meet with the Community Council to arrange the exercises for May 30. Besides the usual services, a special tribute is planned in memory of Richard Copeland. The regent, Mrs. C. M. Skinner, then gave a very complete and interesting account of the National D. A. R. Convention which she recently attended in Washington, D. C., and Mrs. W. L. Greenhalgh added some of her impressions of the same trip.

The regent requests that all members of the Chapter meet at the Boulder at 10 a. m. on May 30.

Margaret McLure Chapter, United Daughters Confederacy, held their meeting on Monday, May 16, in Kirkwood, at the home of Mrs. L. D. LeGear, Miss Morie LeGear, Miss Minna Harris, and Mrs. W. A. Vivian, assisting hostesses. Mrs. H F. Brey, president, presiding.

WOMEN'S CLUB NOTES

on the "Merging of the City and County." Last Sunday the Chapter entertained the St. Louis Camp, Confederate Veterans at the Jefferson Memorial. A program was given consisting of a piano solo by Miss Margaret Byrd, vocal solos by T. Firman and Mrs. Lulu Rader Chapman, accompanied by Mrs. George Dunford; a number of readings by Miss Wyola Taylor and a group of southern melodies by Mrs. Paul Guerard.

Margaret McLure Chapter supports a scolarship at the University of Missouri and also has a Benevolence Committee that brings cheer to homes, and furnishes entertainments for some of the meetings of the veterans.

The Twentieth Century Art Club met at Jefferson Memorial on May 14. Fine Arts, Legislative and Conservation committees of the Eighth District gave reports of their work during the last year. Paintings from the Pittsburg Art Gallery now are on exhibition at the Art Museum. Japan was a study subject with Mrs. G. F. Bergfeld, who spoke on "Idealistic Art and the Early History of Japan," as leader of the day. Mrs. J. G. Delaplaine spoke on "Ceramics" and Enamels."

The club voted to become a chapter of the American Art Federation, which will hold its convention in St. Louis May 23 to 25. Several members of the club have joined the federation. The last meeting of the season will be held at the Jefferson Memorial May 28, at 12:30 o'clock. Box lunch will be followed by a trip to the Art Museum. The meeting adjourned for the social hour in the Library, where tea was served by Mrs. S. J. Keiffer, hostess, assisted by Mrs. W. M. Weatherford and Mrs. J. T. McAdoo.

A Shakspearean evening was given at the eWdnesday Club Auditorium by the Stock Company of The St. Louis Tercentenary Shakspeare Society on Monday, May 14, under the direction of Mrs. O. S. Ledman. Robert Hall, Atchison's interpretation of Leontes, proclaimed him the scholarly Shakspeare student and actor, and the parts taken by Hayden Parks and Percy Ramsey were most pleasing and forceful; Alice Martens and Mignon Rosenthal lent an air of youth, grace and understanding that was most satisfying; Leota Diesel made a charmingly girlish Perdita and Agnes Ruth Hoffinger told the stories leading up to the various scenes in a most interesting and effective way. The more matronly parts taken by Mrs. Harry Wagoner, Mrs. L. M. Tully and Mrs. W. H. Williams were well interpreted. During the intermission, a picturesque scene from Romeo and Juliet given by Master Lawrence Spencer and Little Doris Rhodes, who had been trained by Mrs. Ledman, was proof of the worth-while training of children in study and plays of Shakspeare. The good, even work of the players was greeted throughout by rounds of applause and curtain calls. The stage setting and costumes were attractive. In fact, everything was happy but the weather.

The regular weekly meeting in the rooms of the St. Louis Art League of the Chamber of Commerce Building, 511 Locust street, was held Tuesday, May 15, at 2 p. m., with the president, Mrs. Wagoner, in the chair for the short business session. Miss Frank as representative of the Committee for Devastated France, spoke in the interest of the Good-Will candidates especially that of the authoress, Jane A. Pierson, who is a valuable member of the Tercentenary Society, and asked that the members interest themselves in Mrs. Pierson's behalf. An honered guest of the day was Carleton Everett Knox, who read poems of nature and sentiment from his book, "The Human Touch." The lesson of the day, led by Miss Hoffigner, was a series of questions compounded by various members of the society from "Winter's Tale," the final lesson on which will be on Tuesday, May 2, at 2 p. m., in the Art League roms, with Miss Hiffinger as leader.

Forest Park College Commencement.

The sixty-second commencement exercises of Forest Park College will take place May 27, 28 and 29 at the college group, Oakland and Billon avenues. Thirteen will receive diplomas. The Rev. Dr. Bayne will deliver the baccalaureate sermon in the gymnasium hall May 27 at 3 p. m. The Artists' Recital will be given May 28 at 3 p. m. by Ernest R. Kroeger, Edgar G. McFadden and Miss Louise Kroeger. The graduating exercises will be held in the McKee gymnasium of the college May 29 at 3 p. m.

The annual benefit ball game of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis will take place Thursday, June 14 at Sportsman's Park.

In addition to the athletic features, there will be a health pageant presented by about 1000 St. Louis school children. The annual junior marathon for school boys and a shuttle relay race for school girls also will be on the program, with the final event a ball game between the Cardinals and Boston. An invitation has been sent to Christy Mathewson, former pitcher of the Giants, now president of the Boston club, to pitch the first ball. Mathewson has replied that if his health permits he will.

Headquarters have been opened at 1002 Olive street, and the 25,000 presents to be given away with the educational program score cards, to be sold on the grounds, will be on display there.

Thousands of articles have been donated by business concerns to be given away with the souvenir programs. Among these are a Chevrolet sedan, a long-distance radio receiving set, piano, phonograph, round trip tickets to Niagara Falls and Colorado Springs, pearl necklaces, thoroughbred puppies, vacuum cleaners and groceries.

ST. LOUIS TO ENTERTAIN FEDERATION OF ARTS

Annual Convention of American Association Will Open at Hotel Chase Wednesday.

The annual convention of the American Federation of Arts, which has as its purpose the carrying on of "the eternal propaganda of beauty," will be held at Hotel Chase next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The membership of the federation comprises men and women who are artists, art teachers, directors and dealers; members on state and municipal art commissions, members of art clubs and individuals whose interest in the subjects aids in the diffusion of art appreciation and knowledge. It was organized in 1909 with the support of Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root and others. Its president for the last 10 years has been Robert W. De Forest of the Metropolitan Museum, New York.

Among subjects to be discussed in papers, each of which will require no more than 20 minutes, are: Use of a national art organization, propaganda for art, meaning of "modernism," a picture service for schools, textbooks and art exhibitions for colleges, publicity art service, the federation as a channel for constructive recreation, art in rural districts, international representation in art, art in industry and banking.

Out-of-Town Speakers.

Among speakers expected from out of the city are: Homer St. Gaudens, fine arts director, Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg; Oscar B. Jacobson, director, art department, University of Oklahoma; Mrs. Rose V. S. Barry, chairman, Fine Arts Committee, General Federation of Women's Clubs; Dudley Crafts Watson, director, Milwaukee Art Institute; Charles R. Richards, Cooper Union, New York, and Paul A. E. Walter, editor, El Palacio, Santa Fe, N. M.

St. Louis speakers expected to appear are: Edmund H. Wuerpel, director, school of fine arts, Washington University; Holmes Smith, professor of the history of art of the same school, and Harland Bartholomew, engineer of the City Plan Commission.

William K. Bixby, a director of the City Art Museum and a vice president of the Federation, will entertain the delegates in the picture gallery at his home Wednesday afternoon. That evening there will be a reception for them at the museum, with a special exhibition of paintings from Carnegie Institute. Thursday afternoon the delegates will be entertained in the galleries at the homes of Edward Mallinckrodt and Edward A. Faust.

Auto Drive and "Stunts."

An automobile drive of the city will follow, ending with tea outdoors at Shaw's Garden as the guests of Dr. George T. Moore, director. That evening the Artists' Guild will entertain with characteristic "stunts" and refreshments, and a collection of works of local artists will be displayed. A banquet at Hotel Chase Friday evening will end the convention.

The federation maintains traveling exhibitions and provides lectures. In 1921-22 its exhibitions were shown 270 times, in 152 places, in 38 states. The lectures were given 127 times in 60 places. The federation publishes the American Magazine of Art and the American Art Annual, a reference work.

The Federal Commissioner of Education has called a national conference of artists, educators and other interested persons to meet in advance of the federation convention, at a dinner at Hotel Chase Tuesday evening.

The Artists Guild has arranged a special entertainment for the delegates, consisting of special exhibitions of the paintings of local artists and a play by Lord Dunsany. A buffet supper will follow the performance.

The purpose of the preliminary meeting is to ascertain the conditions under which young people may look forward to careers in the field of art. Dr. William T. Bawden will represent the Commissioner of Education. Director Edmund H. Wuerpel of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, Grant R. Schaeffer, advertising manager for Marshall Field & Co., Chicago; Director Ellsworth Woodward of Newcomb Memorial College, New Orleans, and Prof. Charles A. Bennett, editor of the Manual Arts Press, Peoria, Ill., will discuss various phases of the situation.

COLLINSVILLE CHURCH 100 YEARS OLD TODAY

Five-Day Celebration Will Mark Founding of First Presbyterian Church.

The hundredth anniversary of the organization of the First Presbyterian Church of Collinsville, Ill., which occupied the first frame meeting house built in Illinois, the oldest church in continuous existence in Madison County and the sixth oldest Presbyterian church in Illinois, will be observed with a five-day celebration, starting today and lasting through to a banquet Thursday night.

The Rev. Howard Billman, D. D., of East St. Louis, assistant secretary of the Church Federation of St. Louis, will speak at the 10:30 a. m. service today and the Rev. Chester E. Jenny, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church of St. Louis, will preach at 7:30 p. m. service.

The original members of the Collinsville Church were the founders of the city and established its earliest industries.

Tomorrow the Ladies' Aid Society will present a record of its work since the circle's founding, almost 30 years ago. Old times will be brought to the fore on Tuesday night, when the Young Ladies' Auxiliary opens an "Old Curiosity Shop." The young people of the church are to depict its history from the founding to the present day on Thursday night. Sunday-school night. The meetings on these three nights will start at 8 o'clock. The celebration will reach its climax at the banquet Thursday at 6 p. m.

The church was organized May 3, 1823, by Rev. Salmon Giddings. The original members were: William Collins, Esther Collins, Augustus Collins, Elizabeth Collins, Eliza Collins, Almira Collins, Frederick Collins, Oriel Wilcox, Susan Wilcox, Horace Look and Emma C. Look. First elders were William Collins and Oriel Wilcox.

In 1818, the year Illinois entered the Union, they built the first frame meeting house in the State. "The meeting house in the grove," as it was called, was afterward moved from its original location and now, in a state of splendid preservation, is a dwelling. "The meeting house in the grove" served as a place of worship for the church until 1842.

List of Its Pastors.

The following ministers have served the church: Charles E. Blood, 1840; Thomas Lippincott, 1848; Lemuel Grosvenor, 1848; David Dimond, 1850; Gideon C. Clark, 1856; Charles T. Halsey, 1864; John D. Jones, 1867; J. B. Barnes, 1870; George W. Colt, 1874; Joseph G. Reaser, D. D., 1878; John R. Reasoner, 1880; Henry D. Gardner, 1885; Edwin Lord, 1890; Albert S. Leonard, Ph. D., 1893; Charles H. Hardin Branch, 1899; John M. McBride, 1904; Edwin M. Page, D. D., 1905; Henry D. Gardner, 1908; Frank Lonsdale, 1909; Harry Heinecke, 1912; Williamson D. Vater, 1916; Aaron T. James, 1918; Daniel Breeze, Ph. D., 1920. Since his coming to the Collinsville church 101 new members have been received into the church, 52 baptisms conducted and 51 funerals held.

By 1843 the church had grown too large for the meeting house and a frame building was erected on the present site at a cost of $1800.

In 1883, the congregation again too large for the place of worship, the present brick church was built at an expenditure of $8054.51. The old frame church sold for $100, the session house for $51 and the church stove for $3. The edifice was dedicated on Jan. 29, 1884, at which service the offering was $11.90.

Annex Built in 1909.

By 1910 the need for larger quarters was again felt, with the erection of a $14,000 annex, containing a gymnasium, a Sunday school and auditorium room and a church parlor the result. The annex was dedicated on May 3, 1914, the ninety-first anniversary of the church's organization.

The energetic societies have done much towards the upbuilding of the church. Both the Ladies' Aid and Young Ladies' Auxiliary have been forces for the carrying forward of the work commenced a hundred years ago. There are over 400 students and 20 teachers enrolled in the Sunday school, of which 68 received pins for perfect attendance last year.

WARRANTS CHARGE 7 MEN NOW IN JAIL WITH LIQUOR THEFT

Police Announce Belief That Band That Robbed Garrett & Co. Warehouse Has Been Identified.

With the issuance yesterday of first degree robbery warrants against seven men under arrest, and a general order for the arrest of two other men, police officials announced they believed they have established the identity of the gang that stole 52 barrels of bonded whisky April 25 from the Federal storeroom in the flavoring extract plant of Garrett & Co., 4116 North Union boulevard, although none of the stolen whisky has been recovered.

The whisky, if sold for medicinal purposes, was valued at $9152, or, if sold at bootleg price, $10 a quart, was worth about $83,000.

The men under arrest, against whom warrents have been issued, are Joseph and Edward Carroll, proprietors of the Carroll Bros. Express Co., 2000 Chestnut street; their watchman, William Warren; John Kinealy and James (Red) Cloud, chauffeur; Arthur McCleane, East St. Louis saloonkeeper, and John Cuddy.

Confession by Cloud.

Six of the men were arrested Friday night, following a written confession by Cloud that he helped haul the whisky from the Government storeroom and later hauled five barrels to the saloon of McCleane. He named the Carroll brothers as having planned the robbery. Cloud was arrested Tuesday in connection with th shooting and wounding of Patrolman Lawrence Treinen when the latter surprised truck burglars in the rear of 503 North Eighteenth street.

Cloud, in his confession, asserted he was employed by Joseph Carroll, a former patrolman, to haul part of the stolen whisky on one of the trucks of the express company, and that Edward Carroll superintended the selling of the whisky. He said he received $200 from Edward Carroll for his work. The confession, made in writing, was as follows:

"Joe Carroll asked me to drive a truck to the Garrett plant. Jack Kinealy drove another. Kinealy loaded 15 barrels on his truck and I loaded 19 barrels on mine. John Cuddy helped me load. I took my load to Carroll's express office, and Kinealy returned to the warehouse and got a second load of 18 barrels. Ed Carroll and William Warren helped unload my truck at the express office.

"Ed Carroll and two others (named in the confession but not yet arrested) sold the whisky and after dinner we began delivering. I delivered five barrels to McClean's saloon and put them in a garage there. Ed Carroll paid me $200 for driving the truck."

The prisoners named in Cloud's confession denied being implicated in the whisky theft. In a raid on the saloon of McClean, which is in Washington Park, East St. Louis, the police found no whisky, but confiscated a case of Virginia Dare wine, manufactured by the Garrett company, which had not been dealcoholized.

Cloud also confessed the part he took in the attempted burglary of the warehouse of the Aaron Wein Pants Co., when Patrolman Treinen was shot. He said he hired the truck used in that job. The burglary was planned by Claude Smith he said, and Joseph Friedman and Joseph Bouman shot at the patrolman. Warrants charging burglary and assault to kill have been issued in this case against Cloud, Smith, Friedman and Bouman.

SECOND SERIES OF PUBLIC SCHOOL CONCERTS TO BE HELD

Entertainments to Be Held in Cleveland High Auditorium Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The second trio of concerts in the annual public school musical program of six will be given in the auditorium of Cleveland High School on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings of this week, beginning at 8:15 o'clock.

The Wednesday program is to be given by a chorus of 750 from the seventh and eighth grades; Thursday's concert is by the advanced elementary school orchestra; and Friday, the music clubs of the five high schools will offer selections separately and in chorus.

The program is under the direction of Eugene M. Hahnel, supervisor of music. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings of last week, similar programs were given by less advanced students, including a demonstration of rudimentary music by representatives from 35 kindergarten bands.

The spring concert series is a comparatively recent addition to the musical education now being given in the public schools.

FUNERAL OF NAVY MAN TODAY

Joseph Tape Wentz, Drowned in Chinese Harbor, to be Buried Here.

The funeral of Joseph Tape Wentz, chief radio operator of the U. S. S. Helena, who was drowned in the harbor of Canton, China, on Feb. 10 last, will be held from an undertaking chapel at 3846 Lindell boulevard at 2 p. m. today with interment in Valhalla Cemetery. The body arrived from China yesterday via San Francisco.

Wentz, who was 27 years old, resided with his aunt, Mrs. Mamie E. Grass, of 3625a Forest Park boulevard, since the death of his parents 15 years ago. He is survived by two brothers and a sister. Details of his death have not yet been received.

PARK DEVELOPMENT ALONG RIVER FRONT BEING PLANNED

A fund of approximately $25,000 to $30,000 is being raised by the City Improvement Association to carry on civic development work in which the association is interested, including selection of a location for the new $4,000,000 Courthouse. George J. Breaker, counsel for the association, said yesterday. One of the projects the association favors is park development along the river front.

Appointment of a committee of five aldermen to consider sites for the Courthouse is directed in a resolution passed Friday by the Board of Aldermen. Designation of the site will be through ordinance, to be passed by the Board of Aldermen. The Courthouse is to be built from bond issue proceeds.

Two sites have been advocated, one at Twelfth boulevard and Market street, adjacent to the proposed Memorial Plaza, and the other near the present Courthouse, Broadway and Market street. The City Improvement Association favors the latter.

The board passed an ordinance authorizing sale of $175,372,500 of the public improvement bonds, and fixing the maximum issue for this year at $3,000,000.

THE POST-DISPAT... BABIES' MILK ... OPEN NINE...

Contributions This Year to Go Exclusively to Purchase of Ice and Milk for Poor Children Will Be Distributed by St. Louis Pure Milk Commission Financed Through the Community Chest.

SEVERAL CONTRIBUTIONS TO AID IN LAUNCHING ICE FUND. ALREADY RECEIVED CONTRIBUTIONS.

Total	$47 25

ALTHOUGH the Post-Dispatch Free Ice For Babies' Milk Fund will not begin the active work of its nineteenth season until tomorrow, several contributions have been received in the last few weeks to aid in launching the work for the babies.

The first contribution of the season was $25, received from the Ben Akiba Aid Society, through its treasurer, Mrs. Mary Adelberg. This organization has always been actively interested in the progress of the Ice Fund and is always numbered among the first contributors to the fund each year.

THE Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund will formally open its nineteenth season tomorrow and the work of raising a minimum sum of $8000 to provide ice for the little ones of the tenement districts will begin.

As usual, the distribution of ice to poor families in which there are babies or small children will be carried on under the direction of an agent of the Ice Fund who will personally investigate the merits of each application for hot weather relief. During the period from May 15 to Oct. 1 last year a total of 871 families were supplied with ice and those who are in touch with the families dependent upon the charitably inclined citizens of St. Louis for this summer necessary, estimate that approximately 700 families will need ice this season.

Ice at Reduced Price.

The Polar Wave Ice & Fuel Co. will again furnish the greater portion of the ice distributed by the fund at approximately 20 per cent less than the regular consumer's rate. It makes many deliveries in districts which are not considered a part of their customary routes and accommodatingly handles smaller portions of ice than is the custom with regular customers. Attention is called to the fact that it makes no charge for ice to anyone whom the fund recommends, provided that such persons can arrange to call at one of the Polar Wave's regular stations for the ice.

Distribution of pure milk to poor families with babies will be carried on through the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission, but this work will be financed through the Community Chest and the activities of the Post-Dispatch League will be concentrated on the dispensing of ice. The fund will be known hereafter as the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund.

Reduction in Infant Mortality.

According to statistics from the office of the Health Commissioner, the infant mortality rate for 1922 was 56.5 a thousand among the children less than one year old, a reduction of 4.92 from the previous year when the rate was 61 deaths a thousand. This was the lowest mortality rate of any metropolitan city in the United States during 1922. Dr. Max C. Starkloff, Health Commissioner, commenting on the low figures, attributes the gratifying report in large measure to the earnest work of friends of the babies. "All the large cities have been striving to bring their infant mortality down to the 50-a-thousand mark," said Dr. Starkloff, "and we are getting nearer to it each year."

Primarily the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies Milk Fund belongs to the children, who have chiefly supported it by money which they earn through giving amateur entertainments and conducting lemonade stands and similar benefits. From a fund of $4749 in 1905 it has increased gradually as the need for it has grown, and the last four years several organizations of adults have been of great assistance in making up the needed total. A notable instance last year was the Vaudeville Revue at the Orpheum Theater, staged under the auspices of the Fred W. Stockham Post, No. 245, American Legion.

The First Large Benefit.

This year the first large benefit of the season for the Ice Fund will be given by a group of grown-ups. The members of the Council on Motion Pictures, an organization composed of representatives of women's civic clubs in St. Louis, are sponsoring a

THE Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund will formally open its nineteenth season tomorrow and the work of raising a minimum sum of $6000 to provide ice for the little ones of the tenement districts will begin.

As usual, the distribution of ice to poor families in which there are babies or small children will be carried on under the direction of an agent of the Ice Fund who will personally investigate the merits of each application for hot weather relief. Reduction in Infant Mortality.

According to statistics from the office of the Health Commissioner, the infant mortality rate for 1922 was 56.8 a thousand among the children less than one year old, a reduction of 4.92 from the previous year when the rate was 61 deaths a thousand. This was the lowest mortality rate of any metropolitan city in the United States during 1922. Dr. Max C. Starkloff, Health Commissioner, commenting on the low figures, attributes the gratifying report in large measure to the earnest work of friends of the babies. A notable instance last year was the Vaudeville Revue at the Orpheum Theater, staged under the auspices of the Fred W. Stockham Post, No. 245, American Legion.

The First Large Benefit.

This year the first large benefit of the season for the Ice Fund will be given by a group of grown-ups. The members of the Council on Motion Pictures, an organization composed of representatives of women's civic clubs in St. Louis, are sponsoring a three-weeks run of the film "Nanook of the North," at the Pershing Theater, beginning next Saturday matinee, May 26. A generous percentage of the proceeds will accrue to the fund for the babies. Mrs. Ira L. Bretzfelder is president of the Motion Picture Council.

Preliminary work for the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund has been going on for some time. A general letter to all workers of whom the Fund has the names and addresses was sent out last week. The list is by no means complete, since full lists of workers and complete addresses are not always sent in when reporting benefits. Then, too, in the addressing of hundreds of envelopes some mistakes are naturally made, so that some workers whose names and addresses the Fund has may not have received their leters. This explanation is made that every worker may know that it was the intention to send letters to all, and that this was done as fast as possible.

General Letter Sent Out.

For those who did not receive letters, and also for the information of the readers of the Post-Dispatch, the general letter, addressed to the "Members of the Free Ice for Babies' Milk League" is quoted herewith:

The activities of the Post-Dispatch League for work among the destitute babies and small children of St. Louis will be concentrated this summer on the distribution of ice to those families having little ones whose breadwinners are unable to purchase this vital summer necessity. The work of supplying pure milk to these poor children will be financed through the Community Chest.

At least $6000 is needed to furnish ice to all the families whose tiny members are dependent upon the efforts of league members in their behalf. A few hours' labor—a handful of pennies—may mean life itself to some little fighter of the tenements who is already heavily handicapped in its battle for existence.

Will you do your share again this year in raising a fund to provide hot weather relief for these little ones in the city's tenement districts?

We feel sure that the babies can again count upon your enthusiastic help.

Yours for a record year,

THE POST-DISPATCH FREE ICE FOR BABIES' MILK FUND.

(Nineteenth Year.)

Circular of Information.

A circular of information to workers accompanied each letter. One of the most important parts relating to cash collections appears in connection with this article and other quotations from the circular follow:

NEW NAME OF FUND—Attention is called to the change in the name of the Fund for the Babies, which will be known hereafter as the POST-DISPATCH FREE ICE FOR BABIES' MILK FUND. Work of supplying pure milk to tenement babies will be financed through the Community Chest, and the activities of the Post-Dispatch League will be concentrated on the distribution of ICE to place of entertainment, admission price and date of entertainment, will be supplied free upon application to workers giving benefit entertainments this year as last. The use of these tickets is not compulsory, but they will be supplied to all who wish to save the expense of having special tickets printed. Any number likely to be used can be obtained, and unused ones returned.

Buttons and Membership Cards—New buttons of revised design and membership cards dated 1923 will be presented to all children who take part in affairs to help the poor babies, when reports of affairs are made. All additions to the fund will be acknowledged with names of workers, in the columns of the Post-Dispatch.

Placards—Workers desiring to conduct lemonade stands or ice cream sales can obtain printed placards upon application. A written request will bring the required number by mail.

No War Tax—The law placing a tax on amusement tickets provides that it shall not be charged when an entertainment is entirely for the purpose of raising money to be put to purely charitable uses by a bona fide charitable organization. Persons giving entertainments, all of the receipts of which, less necessary expenses, go to the Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund need not, therefore, charge a war tax on admissions. This statement is approved by the Collector of Internal Revenu in St. Louis as being a correct interpretation of the law so far as it applies to Free Ice Fund entertainments.

An exception would be in the case of a theater proprietor giving an "Ice Fund Night," sharing the receipts of the night with the fund. The usual war tax would then be charged, because only a portion of the receipts would go for charitable purposes and the remainder to a private individual, the theater owner.

The Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund does not approve amateur entertainments in its name unless the entire receipts, less necessary expenses, go to help the babies.

Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund Employs No Paid Solicitors

THE Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund again wishes to call to the attention of the public that it has no solicitors of cash contributions, and requests that it be notified immediately by telephone of any attempts at street or house-to-house collections of money in the fund's name. Cash donations properly should be sent direct to the fund in care of the cashier of the Post-Dispatch. All will be acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch.

To prevent any possibility of dishonesty in the fund's name, the public is asked to give no money in any way or to donate any supplies to anyone claiming to be working for the fund who is a stranger. It is desired that as far as possible workers sell tickest and solicit supplies for carnivals, bazars and refreshment stands among persons with whom they are acquainted.

Amateur entertainments in the name of the fund for the babies are no longer approved unless the entire receipts, less necessary expenses, go to help the babies.

Undertaking to Raise About $6000 for the Charity Primarily Belongs to the Children of the City Who Have Supported It by Giving Amateur Entertainments and Other Benefits.

FASHION SHOW BALLET TRIALS

Ballet dancers from various studios in St. Louis are competing for places in the ballet of the annual St. Louis Fashion Pageant, which will be held in the Municipal Open-Air Theater, Aug. 5 to 25 inclusive, every night except Sundays. Miss Adeline Rotty is coaching them. They will be finally trained by Constantin Kobeleff, graduate of the Imperial Ballet of Russia. There are now about 100 girls rehearsing twice a week for the final try-out.

The Styles Committee will select models for the Style Show Monday evening, May 28, in the assembly room of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

The models are required to be tall, graceful, with perfect poise and carriage. They must have the ability to wear clothes with distinction and have a face which will form well in millinery, and perfectly formed feet and shapely ankles.

NEW YORK RECTOR TO PREACH ANNUAL FLOWER SERMON HERE

The Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie to Give Discourse at Christ Church Cathedral Next Sunday.

The annual Flower Sermon will be preached in Christ Church Cathedral next Sunday morning, May 27, by the Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie, rector of Grace Church, New York. There will be special music by the Cathedral choir and the Cathedral will be decorated with flowers.

The annual Flower Sermon was provided for in the will of the late Henry Shaw, who directed that $200 be paid each year to the Bishop of Missouri to secure a preacher for a sermon "on the wisdom and goodness of God, as shown in the growth of flowers, fruits and other products of the vegetable kingdom." The Rev. Dr. Bowie was invited last summer, by the late Bishop Tuttle, to preach this year's sermon.

RADIO FOR THE AMATUER AND EXPERT

A SIMPLIFIED THREE-CIRCUIT RECEIVING SET

Easily Constructed and Combines Numerous Desirable Features.

The general cry of the radio enthusiast is for greater selectivity. Interference from amateur as well as broadcasting stations, not to mention improperly adjusted and operated receiving sets which "transmit interference," has, indeed, offered a serious problem to be solved.

With the popular type of single circuit regenerative set it is possible to obtain very good volume, but unfortunately the selectivity of such apparatus is very low and the amount of disturbance it can pick up as well as radiate if improperly operated with the tube oscillating is far more potent than that of a coupled circuit tuner.

On the other hand, the fine selectivity of a three-circuit tuner has undoubtedly hurt the popularity of this type with the less experienced members of the family. However, the advantages of the coupled circuit set should not be passed up simply because it is more difficult to tune. The correct solution of the problem is the use of a coupled circuit in a more feasible form.

In a recent issue of The Radio World, C. White, a consulting engineer, describes a unique arrangement of tuning inductances which results in simplicity equal to that of a straight single-circuit set, with the selectivity of a usual three-circuit tuner.

The construction of the set is quite simple and requires very little expenditure of money for expensive vario-couplers and variometers.

The main tuning unit, E, F and G, is a tube with a rotor ball in each end. The coil E is wound with No. 22 double cotton-covered magnet wire on a molded bakelite or formica tube. It should have from 40 to 50 turns. Coil F (the secondary) is stationary and is wound on a bakelite, fiber or formica tube, four inches long. It should have about 50 turns of No. 22 d. c. c. wire, and should be wound with a piece of cord wound between each turn in order to keep the turns apart. After the coil is finished it may be coated with shellac, and the string removed. This arrangement spreads the coil and decreases the distributed capacity, a factor of selectivity. The coil G is wound on the same type of rotor ball as coil E, and with No. 22 d. c. c. magnet wire, but has only between 30 and 35 turns.

Care should be taken in the mechanical construction to see that the two coils do not touch when turned in a horizontal plane. The tube should be not only long enough to prevent this, but also for ample fastening of the rotor shafts on the tube at each end.

A potentiometer of 200 or 300 ohms resistance is provided in order to furnish a still finer adjustment of regeneration.

The switch across the 23-plate variable condenser in the aerial circuit permits the primary circuit to be operated untuned if such is more desirable and secures better results, or if more selectivity is wanted both circuits can be operated tuned.

In construction see to it that the movable plates on the condenser across the secondary are the ones connected to the ground side of the circuit. By careful observation of these little construction details much more capacity effect can be removed and sharper tuned signals will result. This circuit functions very well indeed, with the W.D.-11, W.D.-12, UV-199, UV-201A, or any good "bootleg" tube. But if the UV-201A is employed, be sure to keep the plate voltage very low, because this tube easily oscillates if a high plate potential is supplied.

Municipal Radio.

Dundee, a little farming village of less than 1000 inhabitants, in Michigan, is distinguished as having the first working system of a municipal radio in the United States. Many of the farms are merely equipped with loud speakers, from which messages are received from all parts of the country.

A Simplified Three-Circuit Tuner

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Writer

Q. (1) Are molded variometers and variocouplers better than those having wooden forms? (2) Is the W.D-11 a hard tube? M. F.

A. (1) No. The chief advantages are the neater appearance they present, and the fact that they will not warp. (2) Yes.

Q. (1) Is it advisable to use a series-parallel switch without 11-plate variable condenser. (2) How can I eleminate the "howl" when tuning in distant stations? Would larger coils help? (3) I am using a Cunningham tube with 90 volts on the plate. By reducing the voltage to 22½ I can tune in local stations very clearly but cannot hear distant stations with 22½ volts. How can I remedy this? G. N. W.

A. (1) It is all right, but the capacity is too small for very efficient work. (2) It may be due to several causes, but the principal one is lack of experience in tuning a set. Ability to quickly tune any set, like anything else, only comes with practice. (3) Use a detector or "soften" the filament of the "hard" one you are now using.

Q. For use with a crystal set which kind of receivers would give best results, those having 2000 ohms or 4400 ohms resistance? V. W.

A. This depends entirely on the make of the telephone receiver.

Q. What causes the surge and lag in storage batteries during the operation of a tube set? (2) In the Kopprash set the antenna inductance consists of only 40 turns. Is this sufficient for the set to respond to signals transmitted on 550-600 meters? If not, how much wire should be added? (3) My home-made Flewelling set brings local stations very loud but squeals and whistles on distant stations. How can this be prevented? H. P.

A. (1) This is due to impurities or a run-down condition. The battery should be charged. (2) This will depend upon the size of the aerial to which the set is attached. If your aerial is not large enough it may be necessary to to add a loading coil or connect a variable condenser in parallel with the aerial and ground or else add more wire to the 40-turn coil. (3) Shield your Flewelling set and connect the wire from the shield either the negative or the positive terminal of your storage battery. The right one can be determined by experiment.

Q. Using an electric light socket aerial, is it dangerous to listen-in during an electrical storm? S. F.

A. There is no great danger, but it would not be advisable, and static would make it impossible to hear signals with any degree of satisfaction.

Q. I have a standard make of receiving set operating with one dry cell and a "B" battery. Its wave-length range is 180-600 meters. What will be necessary to add in order to hear KSD as loud as before the wavelength was increased? H. E.

A. Connect a loading-coil in series with the aerial, add about 15 more feet to the antenna, or connect a variable condenser across the aerial and the ground terminals of the set.

Q. I have a single-circuit set. When I tune in a station it is very weak until I place one hand on the condenser dial and the other hand on the binding posts leading to the amplifier. Then the signals are twice as loud. What can I do to keep the signals strong, yet eliminate the howling which results from placing my hands near the apparatus? R. G. W.

A. Shield the set by placing a metal sheet directly behind it, next to the panel and groundbog.

Q. Does the applicant for an amateur license have to apply in person at the radio inspector's office, if not, what are the necessary steps to secure the blanks? G. J. G.

A. The radio inspector for the Ninth District is located in Chicago. Communicate with him, care Federal Building, and blanks will be sent to you. When these blanks are properly filled out and returned, a temporary license will be issued. When the inspector makes his next visit to this city you will be notified and an examination must be taken in order to obtain a permanent license.

Q. What characterizes a "regenerative" receiver? M. B.

A. Regeneration is the feeding back of the plate current into the grid circuit by means of the capacity between the elements of the tube itself. It becomes a counterpart of the incoming current impressed on the grid circuit and reamplified, the resultant output being stepped up immeasurably.

Q. Does the UV 201-A tube require a special rheostat? I have an ordinary rheostat but it seems to have little effect on the brilliancy of the tube as it is as bright when it is first turned on as it is with the entire resistance out of the circuit. Would you advise a special rheostat? L. R. M.

A. For use in a regenerative set a rheostat of 30 ohms will probably give best results, but in a reflex circuit the 25-ohm type will give very good results.

34 CLASS 'B' AND THE 13 NEW 'A' STATIONS

"B" Stations Now Operating on Wave Lengths Assigned to Their Zones.

Thirty-four Class B stations, each with a territorial zone, were licensed by the Department of Commerce and began operating on the new wave lengths May 15.

The zone waves originally designated for Seattle and Portland have been transferred; Seattle has been assigned the 455-meter wave on 660 kilocycles, and Portland, 492 meters, or 610 kilocycles.

A special wave for Class B stations in Madison, Wis., and vicinity may be designated as 345 meters if a station qualifies.

Direction of Antenna.

An outdoor aerial does not necessarily have to run in any particular direction to pick up a certain station. Run the wires the way that gives the most "open view," unobstructed by houses, trees, etc.

HOW TWO AMATEURS SOLVED NEW WAVE-LENGTH PROBLEM

One Changed to a Longer Aerial; Another Improvised a Loading Coil of 30 Turns of Wire on a Cardboard Tube.

The following letters may be of interest to those who have had difficulty in hearing KSD since the wave-length change on May 15:

"May 15, 1923.

"Radio Editor, Post-Dispatch:

"Dear Sir: I have a standard make of receiving set and before last Tuesday had good results with a three-wire aerial 40 festaioning with a 40-foot lead-in. When you changed your wave length I was entirely 'cut off.' I connected a 23-plate variable condenser across the aerial and ground, but still could not get anything. Then I changed to another aerial 100 feet long with a 60-foot lead-in and got your signals perfectly. This may help someone else.

"E. H. BURMAN,
"Bunker Hill, Ill."

"May 18, 1923.

"Radio Editor, Post-Dispatch:

"Dear Sir: I have just finished listening to your market reports at 12:30 p. m. on the new wave length. I have a set consisting of two variometers, a crystal detector, 2000-ohm phones and a phone condenser. I have been receiving concerts regularly for two months and your market reports for a month. I had to hook in a cardboard tube with 30 turns of wire on it when you changed to 546 meters, but then your signals came in 200 per cent louder than before the change. Keep it going.

"E. REYNOLDS,
"Roodhouse, Ill."

The above described changes which remedied the trouble for these enthusiasts will probably help many others out of the same difficulty.

PRESIDENT OF CHINA SKEPTICAL WHEN VOICES COME BY RADIO

Calls Family via Telephone to Have Conversation Verified.

A private broadcasting demonstration was conducted before President Li recently at the presidential mansion at Pekin, using a 500 watt transmitter there and at Tientsin. An antenna was strung between two gables of the presidential palace about 25 feet from the ground.

The President became quite agitated and started to talk into the receiver. He then left the chamber.

It is said that he immediately called his Tientsin residence by telephone to learn if his family had really been talking over the wireless.

"The time seems ripe for radio broadcasting in China," says Mr. Van Tubergen of the International Western Electric Co., who has just returned from that country. Radio should prove a distinct advantage to the Chinese people, as those living in the small cities and villages, even though only a few hundred miles from the larger cities are shut off from all direct contact with the larger life of their own country, to say nothing of international happenings. Communication between villages is very restricted. It is literally by oxcart. And it is said that these places make up 80 per cent of China.

A Suggestion.

Wooden rotor balls, wooden panels and paper tubes should be boiled in paraffin before winding to prevent shrinkage and to further improve their insulating properties.

ENFORCED QUIET PERIOD THOUGHT UNNECESSARY

Government Regulation Might Prevent Valuable Assistance of Amateurs in Emergencies.

Enforcement of a quiet period for amateur radio operators between the hours of 7:30 and 10:30 p. m., as proposed by the Department of Commerce, might prevent the valuable assistance of amateur stations in emergencies such as storms, floods and wrecks, arising during those hours, according to the American Radio Relay League Board of Direction, which has submitted recommendations to the department through its secretary, Kenneth B. Warner. A special meeting of the A. R. R. L. Board was held in New York recently to consider amateur regulations originally discussed by A. R. R. L. representatives and the chief supervisor of radio.

Since the period of quiet hours between 7:30 and 10 p. m. is now being adhered to voluntarily by amateur operators throughout the country and has been extended in some instances to the hours between 7:30 and 10:30 through a definite local agreement, the board considers it unnecessary for the department to enforce this regulation. "It is our conviction," the recommendations state, "that if transmission is prohibited between certain hours, it will destroy, rather than create, amateur co-operation with the department; whereas if voluntary quiet hours are permitted, the past records show that we can count upon nearly perfect observance of the plan."

The board went on record as being in favor of a practical subdivision of the amateur wave band between 150 and 220 meters, recommending that this band be available for special license continuous wave transmitters; that wave lengths between 150 and 200 meters be open to continuous wave general transmitters; that all modulated services, including spark, AC, CW, ICW, unfiltered CW, and phone be restricted to the band from 176 to 200 meters; and "that all types of transmitters be permitted "to operate at will on any wave length within the band to which that type is eligible.

It was requested by the board that the department establish an additional grade of amateur operator's license, an extra first grade amateur operator, the holding of such a license being necessary for an operator to transmit on wave lengths above 200 meters. With reference to requirements for this special license, the board contends that a knowledge of radio "theory" should be held secondary to a minimum of two years' experience under a Government amateur license and the ability to transmit and receive the code at a speed of 20 words per minute. It was urged that the department do its utmost to effect elimination of spark transmitters.

Millinery Radio.

At a recent millinery show in Cincinnati, there was a hat trimmed with a radio receiving set. It had two aerials running up a few inches on either side with the usual arrangement of wires strung across the top.

Worth Remembering.

Never use nails or tacks when making up panels for a set. Holes in bakelite or hard rubber or fiber must be made with a drill.

NEW WAVE LENGTHS AID DISTANCE FANS

It Is Now Possible to Pick Up Out-of-Town Stations While Local Stations Broadcast.

When the Post-Dispatch radio station, KSD, last Tuesday began operating on its new wave length of 546 meters there was quick and convincing verification of the prediction that this change would make it possible for owners of good selective sets in St. Louis and its vicinity to pick up distant stations and hear them clearly while KSD was broadcasting.

Under the old system of wave-length assignments all Class B stations broadcast on 400 meters. Under those conditions, no matter how selective the set, it was impossible for a St. Louis listener to tune in an out-of-town stations while the Post-Dispatch was on the air. The KSD signals drowned those of the same wave length which came from a distance.

With different wave lengths assigned to broadcasting stations in different cities conditions for radio reception have undergone a radical change. One of the KSD operators, off duty Tuesday night, easily picked up Detroit, Chicago, Fort Worth and other stations while the Post-Dispatch broadcasting was in full swing.

Another advantage of the new wave-length system which will be appreciated by many listeners-in at a distance from St. Louis is that they can receive the KSD broadcasting without interference from stations closer to them.

For the Notebook.

A short aerial gives a sharper tuning than a long one.

Never listen in during an electric storm. The antenna should be grounded.

When winding a loose coupler be sure that both coils are wound in the same direction.

For covering a radio set never use oilcloth.

A vernier condenser should be connected in shunt to a larger one and not in series.

When figuring the cost of a vario-coupler, also include a switch, contacts and dial; they are extra.

A steady hum in the headphones is not always caused by "alternating currents." It is sometimes due to an open circuit somewhere.

ATCHISON RADIO ORDINANCE CANNOT AFFECT AMATEURS

Federal Statute Licensing Radio Fans Can Hardly Be Superseded by Local Regulations.

Several cities in the Middle West, which have been agitating radio control by city ordinance, can learn something from the experience of the city of Atchison, Kan., as outlined in a communication received by the American Radio Relay League. The City Attorney of Atchison makes the following statement:

"The American Radio Relay League, Attention. Mr. K. B. Warner, Secretary, Hartford, Conn.

"Gentlemen: The Atchison radio ordinance does not prohibit the operation of licensed amateur telegraph transmitting stations. In the first place, a city ordinance cannot supersede a Federal statute; and secondly, the ordinance itself as enacted by the Atchison City Commissioners does not aply to same.

"Trust that this covers your inquiry. Remaining yours very truly,

"ORLIN W. WEEDE,
"City Attorney."

This makes clear the fact that the only power which can limit the operation of the enthusiast's radio transmitter is the Federal Government.

For the Vacuum Tube Set.

When planning a vacuum tube set, place the electron tubes in a vertical position, or so that the filament lies in a vertical plane. A tungsten filament will lengthen when heated, and the filament must be placed in such a position that the sag will not cause it to touch the grid of the tube.

LIBERAL RADIO REGULATIONS IN NEW ZEALAND, LICENSE REQUIRED

Five Radio Districts Now, Broadcasting Regulations Being Outlined Before Interference Begins.

Although the radio regulations for New Zealand have been extended to apply to Samoa it is reported that more latitude is given the amateurs, and that an effort to regulate broadcasting stations is being made before interference begins. Samoa is designated as the Fifth New Zealand Radio District, with the officer in charge of the Apia Radio station as inspector of local reception and transmission.

Except that it is necessary to secure a license and pay a small license fee, amateurs are unrestricted in radio reception, but licenses are not to be issued for circuits which cause interference. Amateur transmitting stations in Grade I require the supervision of a licensed operator and are assigned on wave lengths between 150 meters and 180 meters, the power being limited to 50 watts. Grade II operators are restricted to a 140-meter wave and five watts in power. All amateur transmission is prohibited between 7 and 8 p. m.

CONTEMPLATED RADIO CONTROL IN ENGLAND

Effort Will Be Made to Prevent Passage of More Stringent Regulations.

Recent developments in England indicate that a strong effort will soon be made to relieve the amateur radio operator in that country from having to pay a proposed increase in license and buy his apparatus from the British Broadcasting Co. Radical steps to break the alleged monopoly are predicted, although they may not remove the bar against radio telephone sets of foreign manufacture. If development is to be permitted, the whole situation must be simplified, many believe.

The new Postmaster-General is said not to be especially sympathetic toward the present arrangement, but it is felt he will insist that apparatus be of United Kingdom manufacture. Many fans in Great Britain want to make their own receiving sets and utilize some manufactured parts. Today these radio fans can only secure in experimenter's license, but after receiving their permits, they can use any kind of a set or part they desire, and listen-in on all stations. These licenses, it is reported, remove them from the control of the British Broadcasting Co. It is assumed that they are engaged in experimental work, but they undoubtedly listen in on all broadcasting concerts.

The Radio Manufacturers' Association has suggested abandoning of the present method of securing revenue for the broadcasting company by license fees and royalties, and collecting the amount necessary for adequate revenue from the license fee. Restrictions against the so-called "pirate" would then be tightened.

According to a statement in Parliament, 35,383 experimental licenses have been issued, while as many more applications are on file. It is estimated that 200,000 individuals are using sets without licenses because they cannot secure the licenses they desire.

Radio Situation in Ireland.

No definite policy has been announced by the Irish Government up to April 1 regarding its position with respect to wireless broadcasting or the operation of private receiving sets. There is a small market for this class of equipment, which, since the regulations of the British Postoffice and the British Broadcasting Co. do not apply in Ireland, is open to foreign manufacturers.

BUREAU OF STANDARDS TESTING ELECTROLYTES

Results May Show Cause of Short Life of Some Storage Batteries.

Owners of automobiles, radio sets, and home lighting and power plants who have lost time and temper by the failure of batteries at critical times may be encouraged by a research now in progress at the Bureau of Standards under the direction of Dr. G. W. Vinal to determine how the batteries get that way. The trouble is frequently due to small impurities in the acid used and specifications, easily maintained, will be prepared which are expected to prevent difficulties due to this cause.

One part of platinum in a million of the acid will greatly shorten the active life of the battery. Iron also has a bad effect. Platinum used to be a common impurity when sulphuric acid manufacturers distilled the product in platinum stills. These have become so enormously expensive that silica stills are being used, avoiding this minute impurity. Small amounts of iron are still a problem.

Studies are also being made on the efficiency of commercial electrolytes sold under trade names and frequently colored attractive and gaudy hues. Some of these are quite damaging to batteries because of impurities present in them, Dr. Vinal said.

Tests are also being made of commercial batteries of common use, only about half of which came up to the standards set by the Bureau of Standards for performance of the batteries used in the various branches of the military and civil service.

RADIOGRAMS.

Throughout the United States there are nearly 600 incorporated manufacturers of radio apparatus.

The Department of Agriculture has 41 stations throughout the United States for broadcasting weather, crop and market news.

A radio set was recently installed in the Assembly in Albany, N. Y., so that members can listen in on concerts and other entertainments during their dull periods.

The Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs broadcasts, through station WGI, talks and instructions in housekeeping, cooking, marketing and domestic science.

Conferences are to be held at Paris, London, Berlin and other centres in Europe for the development of an international radio service. Representatives from the United States, France, England, Germany and South American countries are to attend.

Ex-President Wilson has a supersensitive radio receiving set installed in his home in Washington, D. C.

Radio music picked up by wheeled carriers is now taking the place of the hurdy-gurdy in the streets of London.

With 59 broadcasting stations in the State, California leads in the greatest number of radiophone stations. Texas is next with 36 stations and Ohio third with 31.

The French steamship line plans to equip all its passenger ships sailing out of New York with radio receivers and amplifiers for the reception of broadcast prog. . .s.

Capacity of Storage Batteries.

Storage battery capacities are rated by their manufacturers in ampere hours. Thus, theoretically, a 60-ampere-hour cell will supply six amperes of current for about 10 hours; three amperes for about 20 hours or one ampere for about 60 hours. In practice, however, as the discharge rate is increased the capacity of a single charge is reduced, and a 60-ampere-hour battery would deliver 10 amperes for approximately only five hours instead of six.

Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art

ANNA MATTHEWS BRYANT, the well-known sculptor and painter of Boston, is exhibiting a number of her statues in bronze and marble at the Kocian gallery for two weeks.

Knowledge of Mrs. Bryant's method of workmanship may assist in better understanding for finished objects, for its is quickly apparent that the thing striven for is not line nor form so much as the expression of a feeling of richness. It all began by the artist being a painter—a colorful painter—and feeling the flatness of depicting a solid object on a single surface.

"Why," said Mrs. Bryant to herself, "could not the sense of color be transmitted to bronze and marble? The inspiration aroused by vivid and harmonious colors might be revealed in a piece of sculpture as easily as in a painting." And soon she found herself with modeling clay before her. Her pleasure in the objects that formed themselves beneath her fingers increased to great delight when she discovered that by means of arranging harmonious shadows in the curves and draperies of her figures, the feeling of color was creeping in. Instead of the cold and almost repellant aspect with which white marble figures had formerly impressed her, a vibrating sense of life now inhabited her own works. Accordingly, we see in her sculpture graceful arrangements of masses designed to produce harmonious effects in light and shadow. "Painting in marble" is her ambition, and one which is fast being realized. Despite her excellent progress thus far, she is not yet satisfied with her achievement, always having in her mind some further idea yet to be accomplished.

A GREAT many art lovers who follow the art-affairs of their communities are familiar with the name "American Federation of Arts," and with many of the splendid activities of that organization, yet do not associate it in their minds as concerning others than those already highly identified with national matters of art. While the American Federation does include in its membership many illustrious persons and the majority of those most prominent in national art affairs, its purpose is democratic and its influence far-reaching. It is the only existing national art organization in America, and by means of its some 800 chapters to be found all over the country, the art-loving individuals in a great many communities are reached as well as the organized institutions already established. Eligibility for membership in the federation consists of the possession of a sincere interest in art; the federation invites as members "those people who know the joy that beauty gives and who want to know it more abundantly and to share it with others." Personal advantages of membership, aside from the satisfaction derived from thus helping perform the public service the federation renders through its traveling exhibitions and circulating lectures, include free admission to art museums throughout the country, subscription to "The American Magazine of Art," published by the federation, and access to the federation as an information bureau on all matters concerning art.

During the convention of the American Federation which will be held at Hotel Chase Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, both morning and afternoon sessions of the first day, and the morning sessions only, of the two following days, will be devoted to addresses by nationally known museum directors and other prominent persons. The list of speakers includes Homer Saint Gaudens, director of the fine arts department of the Carnegie Institute; William H. Holmes, director of the National Galledy; Leila Mechlin, secretary of the federation; W. K. Bixby, president of our City Art Museum and vice president of the federation; Lorado Taft, president of the Art Extension Committee of Illinois, and others. The subjects will include "International Representation in Art," "The National Gallery," "The Use of a National Art Organization" and other phases of the application of art to daily living. To these addresses, all person interested are invited.

WITH the recent death of Sir James J. Shannon, portrait painter, the painting of Mrs. Johnathan Rice by this artist, which was presented a few months ago to the City Art Museum where it now hangs, has acquired a new significance. It is now not only an excellent likeness and an intrinsically fine painting, but has the added value of being a splendid record of the past work of one of America's greatest portrait painters. Although Shannon became a British citizen, spent the greater part of his career in England and was made a Royal Academician and knighted by the King, he was born an American, spending his boyhood in Auburn, N. Y. It is gratifying that an example of this painter's work be permanently placed in this city.

MR. AND MRS. WADDECK and Mr. and Mrs. Goetsch intend leaving soon for the East, where they will spend the summer. The two families have taken a house together in Rockport, Mass., a quaint little New England village recently become popular as an artists' colony. Mr. Waldeck intends to take his automobile with him, in order that they can easily visit Provincetown, Gloucester and other neighboring art colonies, at random. The artists are anticipating a summer of serious work, and will doubtless return in the fall with not only a number of interesting canvases, but plenty of "impressions" to keep them busy in their studios through the winter months.

DAWSON DAWSON-WATSON has left for Hartford, Conn., and other New England cities, where exhibitions of his work are being held. His collection of pictures, which is entitled "The Grand Canyon, En Route and Other Motifs," numbering 64 in all, goes on display at the Old State House in Hartford, May 22, and remains until June 2, after which it will be sent to Boston. The eastern exhibitions of Mr. Watson's work have been arranged by several of his earliest pupils.

After leaving the East, Mr. Dawson-Watson will return West, continuing on to Colorado where he will remain for a time, making new notes of the canyon. Later he will visit California and the Pacific coast where the brilliancy of the landscape holds much attraction for him.

Lost 23 Years and Much Money

After 23 Years Mrs. Miller Regains Health

"For 23 years I suffered from stomach trouble. After taking only one-half bottle of Adlerika I began feeling better. If I had known of Adlerika 23 years sooner, I would have saved much money and would have had good health." (Signed) F. Miller.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleaner ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long-standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. F. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by WOLFF-WILSON DRUG CO., Seventh and Washington; ENDERLE DRUG CO., and other leading druggists.

EXPLAINS PECULIAR SOUND OF AUTO HORN

Klaxon Engineer Compares Warning Noise to Terror-Stricken Cries of Animals.

"The note of a genuinely good automobile horn is a note of warning—dominating, penetrating, commanding attention," says H. W. Henry, chief engineer of the Klaxon Co. "It is not made to be pleasant to the ear. It should at once express, and be instinctively understood, as standing for danger.

"Dr. Miller Reese Hutchinson, scientist-inventor and originator of the Klaxon horn, worked on the theory that an automobile horn should contain something of the quality of an animal sound or human voice sound, in danger. When in distress or danger, an animal or even a human being, gives out a terrifying sound.

"An animal's shriek in the night or even a woman's shriek when in danger or when those dear to her are in danger is a terrifying sound. Hudson Maxim, the inventor, verified the theory held by Dr. Hutchinson by making a study of monkeys, lions and tigers, and noting the various sounds made by them when pleased or angered or terrified.

"It is an interesting fact that the peculiar low growl of our own horn is called around the factory the "tiger," reminiscent of the origin of the horn's sound.

"Every kind of tone has been tried to obtain for an automobile horn a quality of sound that will startle—that will command attention—that will cut through all other noises and will be heeded instantly. The sound must not only command but must dominate all other sounds.

"The usual horn sound is produced by the rapid vibration of a thin metallic disk or diaphragm. The vibration creates sound waves in the air—sound waves which are concentrated and directed by a horn-shaped projector attached to a collar in front of the diaphragm. A projector amplifies and projects the sound. If the vibrating diaphragm or metallic disc did not have a column of air resting on it through the projector, a metallic sound would be given off instead of the resonant noise.

"Now a diaphragm, like a pendulum vibrates freely at a certain, definite fixed natural period of vibration or "frequency." Use is made of this phenomenon in our horns, for instance, by having the speed of the electric motor, which revolves the motor, adjusted to the diaphragm vibrator. The effect of this phenomenon is so pronounced that, within certain limits, the diaphragm vibrations practically control the motor speed."

MAXWELL DRILLS A SALT WATER WELL

The lengths to which the Maxwell Motor Corporation has gone, to make certain that its automobiles are built in the most efficient way, are well illustrated in a recent announcement received by S. B. Ward, of the Ward Motor Car Co., local Maxwell dealers, stating that a salt-water well has just been drilled at the Detroit plants of the company and is now in use. The water from it assures improved heat-treating of the necessary materials entering Maxwell cars.

"For all intensive heat-treating purposes tests have proved that salt water is more desirable than fresh," says Ward. 'This fact, as well as the need for cold water that would remain at a constant temperature, prompted the corporation to drill the well, after advice from geologists that salt water underlies a considerable section about Detroit.

"Natural salt water, of the exact solution and temperature wanted was struck at 851 feet below the surface. Its constant temperature is 55 degrees Fahrenheit, the correct coolness for best heat-treating.

Cadillac Breaks Record.

Shipments of cars from the factory of the Cadillac Motor Car Co. during April were more than 26 per cent greater than the best previous month the company has experienced. Deliveries of cars to owners throughout the country also eclipsed all previous monthly records, according to information received by J. James McGregor, president of the local Cadillac distributing company.

This Boy is Worth a Million

Theodore Roosevelt Said:

"IT WAS this summer that I got my first gun, and it puzzled me to find that my boy companions seemed to see things to shoot at which I could not see at all. One day they read aloud an advertisement in huge letters on a distant billboard, and I then realized that something was the matter, for not only was I unable to read the sign, but I could not even see the letters. I spoke of this to my father, and soon afterwards got my first pair of spectacles, which literally opened an entirely new world to me.".....

"I had no idea how beautiful the world was until I got those spectacles."

....."I had been a clumsy and awkward little boy, and while much of my clumsiness and awkwardness was doubtless due to general characteristics, a good deal of it was due to the fact that I could not see, and yet was wholly ignorant that I was not seeing. The recollection of this experience gives me a keen sympathy and desire to remove the physical causes of deficiency in children, who are often unjustly blamed for being obstinate or unambitious or mentally stupid."

Things That Count in Moderate Priced Closed Cars

The Coach is a Hudson-Essex invention. It was created to provide closed car comforts at little more than open car cost.

Closed cars, on high-grade chassis, were too costly for most buyers. So a revolutionary thing was done.

An entirely new closed body design that eliminated all the old, costly manufacturing methods was invented. And production on a scale unknown in the closed car field was started. It brought closed car comforts within reach of all.

The Coach is durable. More than 40,000 owners are proud of it. It has a simple and sturdy beauty. There is ample and comfortable carrying space for passengers and luggage. Body rumbling noises are totally absent. Doors and windows stay tight fitting.

The Coach is built for service. On either the Hudson or Essex chassis it is ready always for any use.

These are the essentials of a moderate priced closed car.

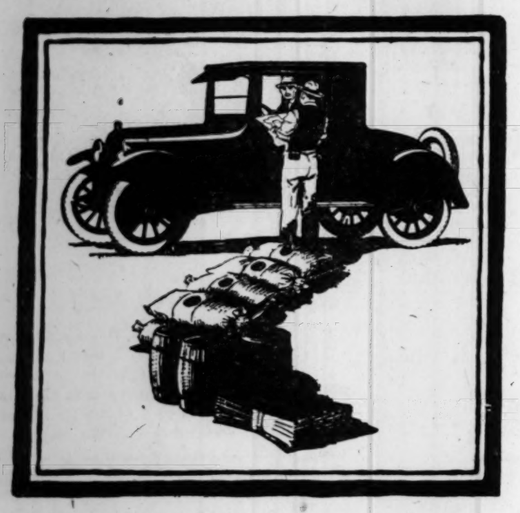
What About Costs the Second and Third Year?



It is the second and third and fourth years that either bring mounting costs or demonstrate the real economy of a motor car.

It is a fact, proved over and over again by fleet owners, that the Hupmobile costs less to maintain over a period of three years, or longer, than any other car built today.

Their carefully kept costs record the cold hard fact that Hupmobile gives lowest-cost service in the long run.

Hupmobile economy goes straight to the things hidden away in the motor, transmission and the rear axle,—things that account for the extremely low upkeep cost, and the long life for which the Hupmobile is noted.

THREE NEW PROCESSES IN TIRE MANUFACTURE

United States Tire Co. Announces Developments of Interest to Motorists.

Because of certain advantages which it will be hard to overcome, England may remain the largest producer of crude rubber for a long time to come, but America is emphasizing daily her prominence in the field of rubber manufacture.

Crude rubber is grown largely under the British flag, but the United States is the great rubber manufacturer of the world and her position as leader is becoming more assured as the years go by. Nearly 75 per cent of all rubber articles made in the world are produced in the United States.

The most recent development in the field of rubber manufacture is the announcement by the United States Rubber Co. of three remarkable new processes of manufacture.

President Charles B. Seger of the United States Rubber Co. in a recent letter to the stockholders of the company announcing these discoveries, expressed the belief that these three developments mean more to the rubber manufacturer and the user of rubber products than anything that has been been accomplished in the rubber industry since vulcanization was discovered in 1839.

The three new developments are: (1) Sprayed rubber, for use in the manufacture of all rubber products; (2) Web cord, an addition to the art of cord tire making; and (3) a new method of building and vulcanizing cord tires.

Sprayed rubber is produced by a new method which is said to eliminate lack of uniformity. This process extracts from the liquid rubber—latex, as it is called in rubber circles—every atom of rubber. If the latex is rich and full of rubber, the spray process extracts it all. But if the latex is diluted and "thin," the spray process is just as effective and takes out every particle of rubber the liquid contains. The spray rubber is absolutely pure and of full strength.

Web cord is the name of a new cord fabric for tires in which each individual cord has ben immersed in rubber latex until it is literally impregnated. In making Web cord, the cords are given a latex bath. Cotton absorbs rubber quickly, so that by the time the bath is completed each cord and every thread in each cord has been saturated with liquid rubber.

The third development—a new method of building and vulcanizing cord tires—has a wide significance in tire manufacture.

The new process is called the "flat-band" process of tire building, the name being derived from the fact that under this method tires are built flat and then fashioned into normal tire shape by special machinery, instead of being built to tire shape around a metal core.

ROUTE TO SHELBY AND DEMPSEY-GIBBONS BOUT

For tourists desiring to go via automobile to the Dempsey-Gibbons fight at Shelby, Mont., July 4, the Glacier Trail is said to be a good route. This road is marked with the Goat emblem all the way from St. Louis to Shelby. A trip by automobile will enable the tourist to visit Glacier National Park which is not far from the scene of the fight.

The route goes northwest from St. Louis, through St. Charles, Moberly, Macon and Kirksville, Mo.; Bloomfield, Ottumwa and Mason City, Ia., north to Minneapolis, then west and north through Fargo, N. D., the northern part of that State and of Montana, until it gets to Shelby. Glacier National Park is but 87 miles from Shelby.

MARMON INCREASES SALE OF MACHINES

Recent large increases in Marmon sales are cited by H. H. Brooks, sales manager of the Nordyke & Marmon Co. of Indianapolis, in a letter to E. A. More of the More Automobile Co., Marmon dealers, as indicative of the current tendency in motor car buying.

In reviewing Marmon sales for the past month Mr. Brooks points out that sales show an increase of 66 per cent over the same period a year ago and 104 per cent over 1921. Moreover, he indicates that sales have steadily climbed since the first of the year, each month showing a substantial gain over that preceding.

TWENTY-SEVEN IN STUTZ RACE PARTY

L. F. Jalagreas, manager of the Supreme Motor Car Co., Stutz distributers, has arranged for a party of 27 to drive to Indianapolis for the Decoration day 500-mile race. The party will go in six Stutz cars. They will leave on Monday, May 28.

Jalagreas also announces that he has received word from the factory that Charles M. Schwab will be the principal speaker at the Stutz dealers' meeting to be held in Indianapolis while the dealers are there for the race.

Newburg Installing Busses.

After experimentation with motor busses, the citizens of Newburg, a New York State city of 35,000 population, have decided to install a complete system of bus transportation. In December, 1922, busses carried a total of 106,000 passengers, as compared with 47,000 carried by the trolley cars on the same lines in December, 1921. In addition to the increased traffic, there has been a reduction of about 37 per cent in the cost of operation.

FAHRENKROG PRAISED AT DEALERS' DINNER

Mayor Kiel and Other Speakers Honor New Member of Board of Education.

More than a hundred automobile dealers and their ladies and invited guests attended a dinner given at the Gatesworth Hotel last Thursday evening to honor Henry F. Fahrenkrog, secretary-treasurer of the Kardell Motor Car Co. and president of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association.

The dinner was given by the dealers' organization in testimony to Fahrenkrog's recent election to the Board of Education.

Among the speakers were Harry A. Rosskopf, president of the board, Mayor Henry W. Kiel, Philip H. Brockman, President of the St. Louis Police Board, and also head of the De Luxe Automobile Co.; Superintendent of Instruction John J. Maddox, Joseph A. Schlecht, president of the Mound City Auto Co.; George Weber, president of the Weber Implement and Automobile Co.; Daniel F. Hyland, president of the Motor Accessories Trade Association and manager of the St. Louis Stewart-Warner branch.

Capt. Robert E. Lee, secretary of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, presided.

Speakers told of Fahrenkrog's connection with the automobile business since 1908 and of his handling of the Reo car since that time. Both President Rosskopf of the Board of Education and Prof. Maddox told of the workings of the board and school system.

A telegram was read, from R. C. Rueschaw, general sales manager of the Reo Motor Co. at Lansing, Mich., which contained much of the sentiment expressed by other speakers. The contents of this wire follow:

"Just got back and find your invitation. Regret more than I can tell you that it was impossible for me to attend dinenr given in honor of our mutual good friend, H. F. Fahrenkrog. I want to take this opportunity of extending my congratulations to your association on having one of your members elected as a member of the Board of Education and if our business relations during the past 15 years with Mr. Fahrenkrog is any criterion to go by, no one will ever regret having backed him up or the office on your local board. Everyone in our organization is strong for Henry Fahrenkrog. He is one of the best-liked men in our entire organization and never made a promise that he did not fulfill. We extend our heartiest congratulations and best wishes to your association and Mr. Fahrenkrog and wish him all the success he deserves."

DEALERS PLEASED WITH COLE SELLING PLAN

E. C. Eads, president of the Cole-Eads Motor Car Co., has returned from a trip to the Cole factory at Indianapolis. During his visit there several other dealers happened to be present and they discussed the new Cole merchandising plan, which eliminates trading of cars. Every dealer expressed himself as being more than pleased with the working out of the new Cole idea. Everyone of them stated that he had been unusually successful in selling Coles since the new plan came into being.

The local Cole dealer also told on his return of the wonderful drive back from Indianapolis. "The road is just like a city street, that is the best kind of city street," he said, "and it is almost as congested. I really believe we passed 500 cars or more on our trip."

Mrs. Eads and two buyers of Cole cars made the jaunt with Eads, and they drove three cars back from the factory.

CROWDS SEE THE NEW OVERLAND RED BIRD

An extremely enthusiastic reception was given the Overland Red Bird, the newest addition to the Overland family, according to William H. Taylor, St. Louis branch manager for Willys-Overland, when it was first shown to the public last week.

Everywhere this latest creation of the engineering and designing departments of the Willys-Overland organization has met with favor and reports from salesrooms received by Taylor indicate that this car has attracted great crowds of interested motorists.

Dealers are clamoring vociferously for large allotments to satisfy the demand already noticeable in every section of the country. This demand typifies the insistent call of the present day automobile.

A BUICK SALE IN ONLY 3 MINUTES

IT was raining pitchforks. Yes, it happened to do that several days last week. Suddenly a Ford coupe stopped in front of the Vesper-Buick showroom, at Grand and Lindell boulevards. An excited individual, stepped out and hurried inside. "Quick," he said to the salesman, "I haven't much time. Let me look at that Buick." He referred to the 54 sport roadster, six-cylinder car, which was on a platform in the window. "I want that car," he proclaimed; "how much will you give me for mine?"

The salesman called for the appraiser. They went out and looked over the Ford. In three minutes and five seconds by a stop watch they had the Ford owner's check and a Buick sport roadster was his. Vesper-Buick believes this is a record.

5 Bearings to Harness Power

Automotive engineers have long been searching for a way to conquer vibration—that deadliest enemy of efficiency and long life in a motor car.

The answer when found was simple. It is embodied today in the five-bearing crankshaft of the Gardner Four—an exclusive feature of this improved motor.

Five main crankshaft bearings instead of three mean that the shaft, whirling at great speed and subject to strains and stresses from many angles, is evenly supported throughout its length—that it is held straight and true, without whip or sideplay.

The result is a totally different and vastly superior performance—a smoothness of well harnessed power, a swiftness of acceleration and a flexibility of operation such as you never knew four cylinders could give.

The Gardner Four delivers mileage economically, and is distinctly a long-lived automobile in which no element of dependability has been sacrificed to exceptional performance and no detail of the balanced value that extends through chassis, body and equipment slighted to make low price possible.

A simple test—a ride in the car itself—will demonstrate the very great difference between the performance of this greater Gardner and that which you expect to find in cars of its type and price.

The Gardner 5 Bearing Crankshaft

A feature found in no other make of four cylinder motor at any price.

DORT SIX

Drive the others—then the Dort Six! The minute your foot touches the starter you notice the difference. There is an almost inaudible purr-r-r of the motor, a quiet, easy shifting of gears—and then a more delightful and more thrilling enjoyment of motor travel than you have ever yet experienced. A slight pressure on the accelerator is immediately followed by a hearty response. Speed changes in high gear are made with that peculiar sensation of latent power so much desired by drivers. No car within hundreds of dollars of its price can match the brilliant performance of the Dort Six oil cushioned, overhead valve motor.

Fleer of the Fleer-Petty Auto Accessories Co.; H. W. Kruse of the Beck & Corbitt Iron Co. and J. F. Quan of the Fred Campbell Auto Supply Co., are the directors.

A. V. Cummings, a traveling representative for the Chilton Publications, spoke on "What the Other Fellow Is Doing to Increase Business." He gave some very interesting figures showing the increase in business for big accessory houses as well as the small wayside garages due to better merchandising methods.

Tuesday, July 24, was chosen for the annual boat excursion.

GOOD AUTOMOBILES BRING GOOD MANNERS

"We hear a great deal about good manners on the road these days," writes a local Haynes owner to Claude Merry of the Wilson Motor Car Co., Haynes distributers. "By good manners, I mean the observance of the right-of-way, the proper signaling, the application, in other words, of the golden rule. I find myself treating my fellow motorist with greater consideration, now that I drive a Haynes sport touring car.

"Perhaps that sounds far-fetched and all that, but good manners is a matter of psychology after all. Finger bowls and flannel shirts, for instance, do not go together at all. I do not mean to say that fine clothes make a lady or a gentleman, but I do say that the feeling that you are making a good appearance serves to bring out traits of well breeding.

"So, on the road, when I am behind the wheel of my Haynes, unconsciously I am a more courteous driver. If a speeder whizzes past me, nearly crowds me off the road, I do not have that feeling to 'get even.' Perhaps it is because I know that my car is the master of the road if I wish it to be—that I could overtake that racing car and leave it far behind, if I wished. Other owners of these fine Haynes 57 sport touring cars tell me they have the same feeling."

ESSEX CABS USED BY BUSINESS MEN

"The placing of the Essex cab on the market by the Hudson Motor Car Co. has stimulated a desire for this type of car for commercial purposes," says R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton company, local Hudson-Essex dealers.

"We are making an effort to interest the business man with our proposition of economical transportation. It is particularly useful for salesmen. The Sun Maid Raisin Growers of Fresno, Cal., one of the most progressive business organizations in the country, recently bought a single fleet of 60 Essex cabriolets, to be shipped to its salesmen throughout the country. A New York State public utility has a fleet of Essex cars."

REMY CO-OPERATES WITH HIGH SCHOOL

ANDERSON, Ind., May 19.—The Remy Electric Co., makers of starting, lighting and ignition systems, have inaugurated a unique co-operative system whereby the advanced students of the Anderson High School vocational course will be given an opportunity to perform their shop work under actual manufacturing conditions in the factory of the Remy company.

Students who enter the Anderson High School and elect vocational work will be permitted to take any one of four courses—machine shop, patternmaking, drafting or printing. The first two years of the course will be spent entirely in the high school, and the next two years may be spent in the high school and the Remy factory, the time being equally divided.

The time spent in the Remy factory will be paid for at the regular factory scale of wages, while the studies pursued in the high school will bring the necessary academic credits.

PULLMAN CO. MAKES BODIES FOR MOON

PRESIDENT E. C. This was the first official announcement that the Pullman company was making automobile bodies. President Carry also stated that many other contracts were pending.

'HOUSE ON WHEELS" BUILT ON A FORD

Literally a "house on wheels" was on exhibition at the showroom of the Walsh Motor Car Co., Delmar and Euclid avenues, during the past week.

Passers-by were very much interested in seeing in the showroom an unusual job. Looking at the wheels, back and front of the car they saw an ordinary Ford chassis. But mounted on that chassis was an object of interest.

Closer inspection revealed a miniature house as the body walls of stucco and brick, roof of roofing paper, glass windows, dome light in the vestibule of the front door, plants around the house, chimney of brick, even house hardware on the door. A two-story miniature home, it was, built on a skeleton of a Ford coupe body by Henry Koehler & Co. of Louisville. The car and another exactly like it are for use of the Goodfellow Lumber Co. of St. Louis.

The names of those making the trip are William Barbe, Jacob Goldberg, Julius Turtletraub and J. J. Shanahan.

ENGLISHMAN PRAISES PAIGE-DETROIT CAR

Motor Editor of London Daily Mail Writes of American Car After Long Trip.

England's motorists like a high-powered automobile and showed a tendency toward the purchase of more American-made cars during the past year, according to H. M. Jewett, president of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co.

"Only half of the motor cars now driven in England are made by the British," he recently informed James E. Newell of the Newell Motor Car Co., Paige-Detroit distibuters. "The majority of the other half are made in the United States."

Jewett gave his St. Louis dealer a copy of an article in the London Daily Mail, written by the newspaper's motoring correspondent following a trip through England in a late model Paige 6-70. The clipping shows how the Briton grudgingly admits the superiorities of the American-made automobile."

Following are excerpts:

"The engine of this car I found similar to many United States engines. Its main feature is flexibility, a quality which I have emphasized a great deal in descriptions of modern big cars in these articles. This flexibility is indeed one of the best qualities of the modern car.

"Bottom gear on the 80 miles trip was used only in starting the car. Second gear was used exactly six times, once each on Titsey and Westerham hills. I have not yet discovered a car which will take these hills on top—and the other four times in traffic stops. There was a time when gear change on such a journey would run well into the hundreds.

"These results were obtained without slipping the clutch. With the slightest touch of the accelerator the car will steal away without any protest. It will also slow down to dead stop on top gear without the least jerk. You can then declutch, get into second for a yard or two, then slip into top again.

"The greatest fascination I found in drivin' this car was in letting her out a bit on the hills of moderate size. These she simply soared up.

"It is often said about cars designed in the United States that they are not altogether beautiful in their outlines. Perhaps some of our own cars are not pleasing to the American eyes. But the Paige coach work is modeled on British lines and to my mind is very pleasing in appearance.

"And the equipment is indeed lavish for an American-built car."

MOON NOW OCCUPIES NEW SERVICE HOME

The rapid increase in the number of Moon cars in use in St. Louis has necessitated the city sales department of the Moon Motor Co. enlarging its maintenance and service department. As a result they have had a large new building erected at 3114-16 Washington boulevard.

This service station was opened recently. It is thoroughly modern and fireproof and was designed and equipped especially for automobile service work.

In the front of the new building is a beautiful showroom finished in old ivory, with large plate glass windows, tiled floor and diffused lighting fixtures. On a balcony at the rear is the office of the manager, George H. Shelp, and his office staff.

A fully stocked parts department, thoroughly modern in its equipment, is a feature of the enlarged maintenance department. The Moon Co.'s city sales department and main showroom will continue to be maintained at 3115 Locust st.

Stop Carbon troubles

This is the CRAVEROILR ATTACHMENT (ACTUAL SIZE)

The Craverolr Attachment serves Craveroil to the moving parts of the combustion chamber in the form of an oily vapor. A copper tube runs to the intake manifold.

Crystallized or hardened Carbon is responsible for 80% of your motor troubles. It is the cause of that sluggish, lack of power condition of your engine—that distressing knock so noticeable on the hills—the backfiring, spitting and overheating. What would you give to overcome the trouble forever?

The temporary remedy is to scrape out the carbon and grind the valves. This is a continual expense and it doesn't stop the carbon from collecting again.

The sure, permanent and inexpensive way is to install a Craverolr attachment and banish carbon troubles forever. The Craverolr is a simple little attachment that goes on the dash under the hood. It sprays a fine vapor of Craveroil into the combustion chamber, preventing the collecting and hardening of carbon and scientifically lubricating all the moving parts of the combustion chamber.

Craveroil is guaranteed to do the work. It is not an experiment. It is heartily endorsed by leading automobile companies and by thousands of enthusiastic users. The Craveroilr attachment can be installed on any car in 10 minutes without in any way changing the present adjustment. Its cost is small and its performance positively marvelous. It will Stop Carbon Troubles, save you money and give you a smoother running, more powerful motor.

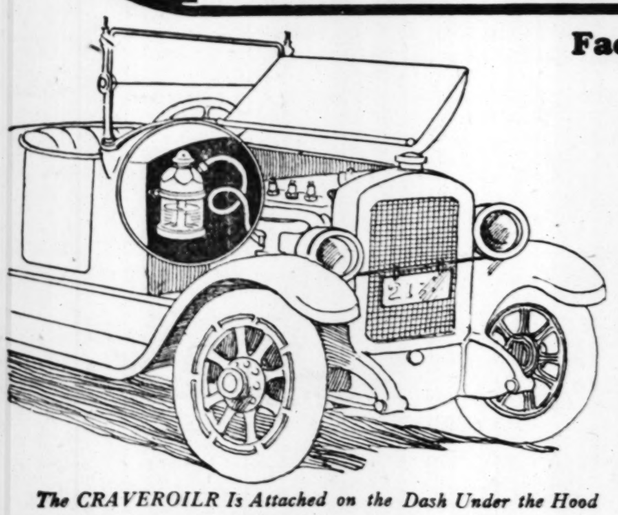
The Manufacturer's Guarantee

The Craveroil Company of America guarantees that genuine Craveroil is a harmless compound of pure essential oils and that it will not in any way injure your motor. Craveroil is so pure that a person could drink it without harm. Our guarantee covers the use of Craveroil on any make of motor.

CRAVEROIL

THE OIL THE MOTOR CRAVES



The CRAVEROILR Is Attached on the Dash Under the Hood

Facts That You Want to Know

More than three years ago Mr. J. E. Craver, President of the Craveroil Company, discovered that a compound of certain pure essential oils when combined with air and gasoline and properly introduced into the combustion chamber, created an oily gas that prevented the crystalization or hardening of carbon and supplied the lubrication so necessary to the moving parts of the combustion chamber. It is a well known fact that for years automobile engineers have sought a scientific means of lubricating the upper cylinder walls, valves, valve seats, stems, guides, etc. This problem as well as the problem of Carbon Troubles has been definitely solved by the introduction of Craveroil.

The Craveroilr attachment through which Craveroil is served, is a trifle larger than the average size carburetor. It attaches on the dash under the hood. A copper tube leads into the intake manifold. With every intake stroke of the pistons a small amount of Craveroil vapor is drawn into the combustion chamber. This vapor permeates every crevice in the cylinder head, keeping the carbon soft and permitting it to be eliminated out the exhaust. Craveroil scientifically lubricates every moving part in the combustion chamber reducing friction and vibration. It acts as a seal against unseen power leaks, effecting a 30% saving in gasoline. Craveroil gives your motor an almost unbelievable smoothness of operation, a quick get-away and pulling power to spare.

10 Days Free Trial Without Payment or Deposit!

We offer you an astonishing opportunity to prove our statements regarding Craveroil. You can test it on your own car for ten days, without payment or deposit and without in any way obligating yourself to keep it. Simply drive your car to the Craveroil Service Station. It will take us about 10 minutes to install the Craverolr. Use it for 10 days and if at the end of that time you are not firmly convinced, we will remove the attachment and the trial has cost you nothing. You are to be the sole judge uninfluenced. Drive in today and test Craveroil.

Opportunity For Live Distributors

Some very choice territory is now open for the distribution of Craveroil and Craverolr attachments. To the men we select the Craveroil Company of America offers every cooperation for profitable business. INDIAN RAJAH BUYS KAMPRITE TRAILER

St. Louis products frequently are shipped to India, so it is not at all strange that the Lippman Kamprite Trailer Co. should receive an order for one of their standard equipped Kamprite trailers for export to Madras, India. Nevertheless this concern is very proud of the fact that the Maharajah of Madras, one of the great Indion officials, should have selected the camp trailer made in St. Louis for his own personal use during big game hunting trips in the wild mountain regions of that far away country.

Following the use made of the Lippman trailer by a big game hunting expedition now in the heart of Africa, headed by a well known Englishman, this camp device is finding a market opening wherever automobiles travel—the recent Snow pictures taken in Africa, during which a Ford car was used extensively, has proven the feasibility of using motors even in lands where roads are still in their infancy.

OLDSMOBILE MAKES ANOTHER NEW RECORD

Driven by "Cannonball" Baker, the former race driver, an Oldsmobile four-cylinder car has just completed one of the most remarkable runs ever recorded for a stock automobile, in making a run from Indianapolis to French Lick, Ind., and return without shifting gears.

Some of the worst hills in the Middle West, with grades ranging as high as 22 per cent, are encountered on this road and nearly all of the long hills are marked by sharp curves. In addition to the driver the car carried three passengers, including William C. Buser, official observer for the American Automobile Association.

HIGHEST SPEED MOTORS IN INDIANAPOLIS RACE

Never before in the history of automobile building in the United States have motors been driven with such speed as now is being shown during tests of power plants for cars entered in the Indianapolis races.

Motors built by the Packard Motor Car Co. for the three cars which it has entered in this year's big international speed contest have been operated in tests at 5000 revolutions a minute. This is expected to be the motor speed of most of the cars in the race. Such speed has been developed as a result of the size of the motors being cut down to 122 cubic inches of piston displacement.

Michigan Roads Are Paved.

Automobile tourists all over the country are getting the benefits of the Connelly $50,000,000 road bill passed by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, since two great roads of Michigan, M-11 and M-13, are now paved from the State line to Mackinaw. Both are trunk lines connecting with the Dixie Highway from the south.

Mr. B. Milburn of Chicago has invented a new puncture-proof inner tube, which, in actual test, was punctured 500 times without the loss of any air. Increase your mileage from 10,000 to 12,000 miles without removing this wonderful tube from the wheel, and the beauty of it all is that this new puncture-proof tube costs no more than the ordinary tube, and makes riding a real pleasure. You can write Mr. B. Milburn at 333 West 47th st., Chicago, as he wants them introduced everywhere. Wonderful opportunity for agents. If interested, write him today.

PAIGE behavior bespeaks the engineering genius and experience behind the car. Never will you find a car more delightful in handling ease than the Paige—the achievement of 14 years' intensive effort.

Swiftly and smoothly over the open road at 70 miles an hour or crawling through the traffic crush at 2—gear shifting is rarely necessary. Then a bare 3-inch movement does it, and the docile Paige clutch engages without stalling or jerking. No clash or missing mar the driving of the veriest novice.

The silent Paige 70 H.P. motor, kept youthful and eager by the Paige high-pressure oiling system, gives you confidence in your ability to meet all road conditions. The silent timing chain is automatically adjusted to maintain accurate timing, indefinitely.

Paige bodies are substantial. Body squeaks and rattles are prevented by double stripes of patent leather that keep metal from touching metal or wood. Richness of finish throughout—not a piece of imitation leather in the car. Ample foot room—and deeply cushioned seats, set comfortably low, make restful riding. Rear springs more than 5 feet long, turn bad roads to good. Easy travel is further assured by 131 inch wheelbase.

Completely equipped—two extra cord tires, rims, tubes, covers, mounted forward on the running boards; stop light; front and rear bumpers; automatic windshield wiper; rear-view mirror; cigar lighter—are a few of the usual extras, that are standard equipment on the Paige.

It is possible to offer this value to Paige buyers since the tremendous volume on the Paige-built Jewett has reduced overhead on Paige by hundreds of dollars a car. And it is a value unexcelled. Test it for yourself by seeing and driving this car of fine workmanship. Phone us or call, for a demonstration of unusual car performance.

DRAMA AND THE MOVIES

PART SIX. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 20, 1923. PAGES 13—20

"Who's Who" of Cast for Municipal Opera, Opening Tomorrow Week

Six Out of Ten Principals Newcomers in Organization—"Naughty Marietta" and "Wang" Have Already Been Rehearsed.

IT is expected that the first three of the 10 works listed for 1923 will be virtually ready for performance when the fifth season of the Municipal Theater Assoication begins a week from tomorrow night, at the open-air theater in Forest Park. The initial operetta, "Naughty Marietta," could have been put on a week ago, assurance is given. Rehearsals of "Wang," second of the series, proceeded during last week, and the company will turn its attention to "The Fencing Master" this week.

A decision as to whether the organization will purchase the loud-speaker, which was tested last Sunday before an audience of 8000, waits on further experiments. It is hoped that certain readjustments may obviate the more flagrant impairments of tone which attended the first trial.

This season witnesses a drastic house-cleaning in the department of principal roles. Out of 10 members of the cast, two were members of last year's company, two have not sung at the municipal opera since its first season, and six are newcomers. Frank Moulan and William J. McCarthy, first and second comedians, were the only ones re-engaged out of the last summer's cast. Craig Campbell, tenor, and Miss Blanche Duffield, soprano, were members of the 1919 troupe.

The strangers are Miss Dorothy Maynard, ingenue; Miss Helena Morrill, soprano; Thomas Conkey, baritone; Miss Flavia Arcaro, contralto; Detmar Poppen, bass; and Roland Woodruff, juvenile. As in former seasons, Miss Fannie Block and Miss Elva Magnus, graduates of the chorus, will have minor parts. There is also a new stage director, Fred Palmer. Frank Rainger and Charles Previn hold over from last year as general stage manager and musical director.

Three Prima Donnas Engaged.

IN order to avert mishaps of casting, such as have sometimes handed, the management this year has engaged three prima donnas of different types, in Misses Duffield, Maynard and Morsil. Of the newcomers, Miss Maynard and Messrs. Conkey and Poppen were heard briefly durin gthe amplification tests a week ago.

The publicity department has issued the following account of the singers of the 1923 cast:

Blanche Duffield, prima donna soprano—Miss Duffield was born in Philadelphia and reared in New York. She sang in public at the age of 8. Her vocal studies were under Luckstone and Bertrain Fox; she coached for grand opera with Mme. Baskerville. At 16 she appeared in concert; and later toured as soloist with the bands of Lieut. Sousa and Victor Herbert. Her debut in grand opera was in a production of "Faust," made in Boston during 1911, by the Aborn English Opera Company. Her first light opera part was in a Viennese operetta, "Baron Trenk," in New York, during 1912. Later she sang in "Sari" and "Princess Pat." In 1918 she joined the American Society of Singers, which for two years presented Gilbert and Sullivan operettas at the Park Theater, New York. During the last three years she has studied abroad.

Thomas Conkey, baritone.—Thomas Conkey, who takes the place of James Stevens in the cast, will be recollected as a member of the Park Opera Company, which held forth at the old Park Theater, now the Pershing, in 1916. He is a native of Cleveland and a graduate of the University of Cleveland. He began as a choir singer, and then sang small parts with the Joseph Sheehan Grand Opera Company. He was later a member of a minor grand opera company in Chicago. He created the baritone parts in "The Springmaid" and Sweethearts"—roles which he is to sing here this summer. He toured in "The Springmaid" for three years, and later was seen in "Pretty Mrs. Smith," "Molly O," "Fiddlers Three" and "Maytime."

Started as Choir Singer.

CRAIG CAMPBELL, tenor.—Mr. Campbell began his career as soloist in achurch choir and advanced into the concert field. He was one of the most prominent members of the American Society of Singers, during its production of Gilbert and Sullivan operas at the Park Theater, New York. His light opera experience includes engagements with Emma Trentini in "The Firefly," "The Love Cure" and "The Red Rose."

Miss Helena Morrill, soprano.—Miss Morrill, a native of New Hampshire, began her career as a pianist, but, thanks to an unusual voice, won a scholarship in singing at the New England Conservatory of Music. She first appeared on the stage in light opera, succeeding Eleanor Painter in the leading role of "The Lilac Domino." She was also member of an all-star company which presented "Robin Hood," with the late Bessie Abbott in the part of Maid Marian. As a member of the American Society of Singers, she earned remark in "Ruddigore" and other Gilbert and Sullivan pieces.

Pupil of Marchesi.

MISS DOROTHY MAYNARD, ingenue prima donna.—Miss Maynard is a French-Canadian, daughter of Jeanette de Longpre, a French church singer of repute. She studied for grand opera in Italy and France, and was a pupil of the late Mme. Marchesi at the time of the famous teacher's death. She is said to have a repertory of six grand operas. Her American debut was in "The Red Feather," a light opera made popular by Grace Van Studdiford. Other appearances have been in "Robin Hood," "The Sho Gun," "The Springmaid," "The Rose Maid," and "The Chocolate Soldier." Miss Maynard sang opposite Joseph Santley in "When Dreams Come True," "Oh, Boy," and "She's a Good Fellow."

Miss Flavia Arcaro, contralto.—Miss Arcaro is said to have appeared with success in light opera and musical comedy, on the speaking stage, and as a headliner in big-time vaudeville.

Detmar Poppen, bass.—Mr. Poppen comes directly to St. Louis from the New York run of "The Lady in Ermine," one of last year's popular operettas on Broadway. He spent several seasons in "The Chocolate Soldier," sang with Mitzi in "Pom Pom," and was a member of Fortune Gallo's English Grand Opera Company.

Roland Woodruff.—The new juvenile is said to have had considerable experience in musical comedy and to be a well qualified dancer.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

Hope Hampton will be featured in the screen version of David Belasco's play, "The Gold Diggers."

Pat Carr has replaced Harry Myers in the role of the chauffeur in the picturization of George M. Cohan's play, "Little Johnny Jones," featuring Johnny Hines. Myers will be co-starred in one of the new series of pictures to be made by the Warners this season.

Clyde Fitch's "Beau Brummel," in which John Barrymore will be starred is being adapted for the screen.

Molly Malone has been engaged to play the feminine lead opposite Johnny Hines in the Warner Brothers film version of George M. Cohan's stage play. "Little Johnny Jones." Harry Myers has also been added to the cast.

The Warner Brothers have completed one of the largest studios in Los Angeles at an approximate expenditure of $250,000. The new studio covers nine and half acres of ground, has all the latest lighting and stage equipment, 100 dressing rooms, 30 executive offices, library and all other modern appliances in addition to a stage 300 feet long.

Monte Blue and Irene Rich will be co-starred in the picturization of Kathleen Norris' novel, "Lucretia Lombard."

Production of Wesley Barry's latest picture, "The Printer's Devil," has been held up at the Warner Brothers Coast studios due to a complete revision of the story.

Maude Turner Gordon, who played the mother role with Thomas Meighan in "Back Home and Broke," will have a similar part in "Homeward Bound," Meighan's latest picture.

Anita Stewart, famous cinema star; Irene Dalton, also well known on the screen, and some 300 bathing girls, worked recently in scenes for "Hollywood," being produced by James Cruze, who made "The Covered Wagon" for Paramount. A California beach was employed for the background. Many men were also in the crowd of beach revelers who took part in the ensemble.

Lew Cody, who for several months has been playing old-clothes parts, with the exception of "Rupert of Hentzau," a costume picture, essays his first dressed-up part of the season in "Lawful Larceny." In this picture he appears with Hope Hampton, Nita Naldi and Conrad Nagel.

Thomas Meighan is back at work after a month's vacation and is making "Homeward Bound" at the Paramount Long Island Studio. This is an adaptation of Peter B. Kyne's novel, "The Light to Leeward." Lila Lee will be Meighan's leading woman in this sea story. Other members of the cast are Charles Abbe, who was with Meighan in "Cappy Ricks" and "Back Home and Broke." Hugh

Orpheum Announces Irene Franklin and Joe Cook

THE Orpheum's bill this week includes both Irene Franklin, singer, comedienne and former St. Louisan; and Joe Cook, with the "one-man" show in which he mimics an entire vaudeville personnel—orchestra leader, magician, songster, dancer, tragedian, comedian and acrobat. Miss Franklin brings a roster of songs, some new, for which she wrote the lyrics and her husband, the late Burton Green, composed the music. Others on the list are Nelson Snow and Charles Columbus, St. Louisans, who give songs and dances, with Harriet Hoctor; Harry J. Conley and Naomi Ray, in "Rice and Old Shoes;" the Pearsons and Newport, acrobatic dancers; James and Etta Mitchell, aerial gymnasts; the Alexanders and John Smith, in "Bits of Everything;" and Clifford and Cross.

Kerman Cripps, new leading man of the Woodward Players, will make his first appearance with that company today at the Empress in Jules Eckert Goodman's melodrama, "The Man Who Came Back." He succeeds John Warner, who is retiring on account of ill-health after playing 34 weeks with the Woodward troupe in this city. Cripps is 32 years old, and comes here from a stock company in Des Moines. Maurice Franklin rejoins the cast this week.

The story concerns a rich man's son who is sent into the world to make his own way, and finds redemption and success in an opium den in China. The play was given at the Shubert-Jefferson theater in September, 1920. In the present cast are Hazel Whitmore, Caroline Morrison, J. Raymond Brown, Edward Schilling, Virginia Springer, Laura Lovett, Bobby Green, Mack Linn, Mae Green and others.

Vaudeville Announcements.

THE Sandell sisters, Nan and Pauline, dancers and impersonators, are featured at the Columbia; other acts are those of Frank Berry, Harry McWilliams and Carl Carrier, old-time minstrels; Rawles and Gilman, in songs and foolishment; Al Grant and Ben Wallace, and Fred Hagen and a company. The film feature is "The Kingdom

Estelle Taylor and Wallace Beery, in "Bavu"—Rivoli

"The Hottentot," "Rustle of Silk," "Bavu" on Screen

"The Last Moment," "When Dawn Came" and Film Version of "Eangeline" Are Also Among Current Week's Offerings.

The film version of "The Hottentot," Willie Collier's famous farce, is the feature at the Grand Central, West End Lyric, Lyric Skydome and Capitol theaters this week. Louise Fazenda in "Cold Chills" is the comedy at all four houses. Grand Central stage specialties include new selections by Larry Conley, trombone soloist, and violin solos by Michel Gustkoff, concert master of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

"The Hottentot" is the name of a steeplechase racehorse. There never was a more disagreeable horse. He runs away with a pretty girl and a youth who has a horror of horses saves her, purely by accident. He tells his name, which happens to be that of a famous jockey, and he is mistaken for the daredevil rider and forced to ride "The Hottentot" in a steeplechase.

Douglas MacLean is cast as the impostor, while Madge Bellamy plays the heroine. Raymond Hatton has a character part.

Ethel Clayton in "Can a Woman Love Twice" is to be the offering the last half of the week at the Lyric Skydome and West End Lyric, starting Wednesday.

"The Rustle of Silk," with Betty Compson and Conway Tearle is the Missouri's attraction. The story deals with life in the highest circles of English society, giving an opportunity for marvelous sets and gowns.

Supporting Miss Compson and Tearle are Cyril Chadwick, Anna Q. Nilsson, Leo White, Charles Stevenson and Tempe Piggot. The surprise of the picture is it's climax. It ends as real life stories often end—in happiness achieved through personal sacrifice. The story is that of a lady's maid who wins the love of a great statesman.

Cliff Nazarro, comedian, is held over for another week. He is supported by George Hall and his Society Orchestra.

Henry Hull, stage actor, who made his debut as a movie star in "One Exciting Night," is the star in "The Last Moment," the feature attraction at the Delmonte Theater this week. Harold Lloyd in a revival of one of his famous old comedies, is also on the bill, and West and Wyse, singers and dancers, are the stage feature.

"The Last Moment" is a tale of adventure on a schooner commanded by a brutal Captain known as "The Finn." On board are three persons of culture and good breeding—"Nap" Cameron, a timorous youth, whose adventures have always been found in books; Alice Winthrop, wilful and charming, with whom he is in love, and Harry Gainer, his rival. They had been shanghaied when visiting a waterfront grog-shop on an errand of mercy. Alice is disguised as a boy. Doris Keane plays this part.

Wallace Beery, noted "bad man" of the screen, heads the cast in "Bavu," a Universal production in eight reels, showing this week at the Rivoli.

The story of "Bavu" is laid in a foreign country at a period of tremendous upheaval. Bavu, as portrayed by Beery, is an illiterate peasant, a National leader, a brute with the might of the mob behind him.

The hero is a romantic young fellow with humanitarian ideals, battling against the willfulness and murderousness of the mob spirit. The heroine is an aristocratic princess.

The Liberty has a double-feature program for the week. "When Dawn Came" and Longfellow's classic, "Evangeline," recently put in motion picture form.

"When Dawn Came" opens in the slums and moves rapidly to the walks of high society, changing quickly to the haunts of the dwellers of the underworld, then shifting suddenly to the beautiful mission of San Juan Capistrano and including scenes of the early settlers' life in California. In the cast are Colleen Moore, L. F. Shumway and William Conklin.

Barton's Inspired Dancing Hit of Newest Show

NEW YORK, May 19.

A NEW musical comedy, "Dew Drop Inn," was presented Thursday night at the Astor Theater. James Barton is in the cast. He does a number of things well and one thing better than anybody else in musical comedy. When he begins to dance even a cautious reviewer should begin to consider using the word "genius." In his medium, Barton creates a superb and final beauty, and so "genius" will have to be the word.

He is sublime and grotesque at the same time. He proves that the body can be made absolutely subservient to the will. The job is anatomically thorough. Nor is any emotion neglected. Broad strokes and infinitely subtle ones are combined in this complete interpretation of the cosmos. One felt the curse of Adam slipping from one's shoulders while watching Barton move. No very heavy doom can possibly have been placed upon man if one of us can bounce about in this fashion. Even stock-still and speaking, Barton manages to be more than usually amusing.

The rest of the show averages up to about pretty good. The producers have been shrewd enough to remember that good singing helps a song, and both Mabel Withee and Robert Halliday sing very well. There is spirited dancing by Evelyn Cavanaugh and Richard Dore, and a good piece of acting by Harry Clark.

Great Nobilities.

THE music—Alfred Goodman and Sugmund Romberg—is not bad; but the book—Walter de Leon and Edward Delaney Dunn—is. Still, the hero has a scene in which he says he wants to earn an honest living even if his father is a millionaire, and the heroine refuses to take $20,000 as a bribe for never seeing the hero again.

The production of "The Comedy of Errors" Tuesday night by the Ethiopian Art Theater was tiresome—at least as dull as the American National Theater's production of "As You Like It." The company undertook to enliven the piece with occasional outbursts of jazz music, but even "I'm Just Wild About Harry" could not stir the exceedingly dead Elizabethan bones. There was no evidence of acting. Charles Olden worked exceedingly hard as the two Dromios, and there was a good performance by Edna Morgan as Lucinia. The rest merely struggled valiantly. Raymond O'Neil, who directs the company, seems to be making indifferent use of his material.

Cyril Maude's New Play, "Aren't We All?" Opens Tomorrow Evening.

THREE new productions are listed for next week, including "Aren't We All?" by Frederick Lonsdale and starring Cyril Maude, which is to open Monday night at the Gaiety. In the company are Alma Tell, Mabel Terry-Lewis, Leslie Howard and Harry Ashford. "Cold Feet," a comedy by Fred Jackson and Pierre Gendron, will also be launched Monday evening, at the Fulton, with May Vokes, Glenn Anders and others in the company. On Tuesday night, at the Moscow Theater, will be presented Conrad Westervelt's play, "Not So Fast," with Taylor Holmes. It was seen earlier this season in Chicago, under the title of "The Blimp."

For the first time in the history of the New York stage, two companies will be found playing the same show under the same management, when the Philadelphia troupe and one of the road companies of "Blossom Time" return simultaneously Monday night. They will appear in playhouses in the same street, directly opposite each other—namely, the Shubert and Forty-fourth Street theaters; and tickets at one house will be interchangeable at the other. A third company is now in its ninth week at the Great Northern, in Chicago. The Philadelphia company closed last Saturday night after breaking all records in the somnolent city by playing 29 consecutive weeks—more than 200 performances.

Why Fred Stone Preached.

FRED STONE had no idea of making a talk on religion at the Metropolitan Opera House last Sunday night, during the National Vaudeville Artists' benefit. He went on to do a buck and wing dance just before the finale. This was a pageant, with Julia Arthur surrounded by some 200 soldiers, sailors and girl scouts.

Some hitch occurred in erecting the set, and Stone was sent back to repeat his dance. He did so, and again was waved on by gestures from the wings. The third time he was exhausted. He could dance no longer, but still was directed to try to hold the crowd. He had an inspiration. So he returned to the stage and told the story of his conversion, simply and well, and the people out front sat motionless while he talked.

"Sally" closes tonght in Milwaukee, and Marilyn Miller will return to New York for a rest and then to rehearse the next piece in which Mr. Ziegfeld will star her. . . . George S. Kauffman is said to be collaborating with Edna Ferber in a play based on one of her stories. . . . Ernest Truex will do "Six-Cylinder Love" for the movies. "The First Year" and "The Boomerang," with Martha Hedman, are also destined for the films.

It is said that Raymond O'Neil, palefaced director of the Ethiopian Art Theater, used to be a police reporter in Cleveland. . . . "The Dancing Girl," which recently vacated the Winter Garden, is playing two weeks in Detroit, preparatory to moving on Chicago for the summer. . . . Word comes that in San Francisco Margaret Anglin is about to make trial of her long-promised play about Lady Dedlock of "Bleak House." . . . Arthur Richman's bitter-flavored and sharp-edged play of American suburbia, "Ambush," is to be produced in London.

"Peer Gynt" Ends Its Run.

TWO Theater Guild productions were withdrawn tonight—"The Adding Machine," at the Comedy, and "Peer Gynt," at the Shubert. . . . First prize of $250, in the Orpheum Circuit's contest for a design of a memorial to be placed at the tomb of Sarah Bernhardt, has been awarded to Fred P. Humphrey, sculptor, of Minneapolis. The second prize, of $100, went to William Bloom, a Chicago newspaper artist. Prizes of $50 each were awarded to Marie H. Myers, a student at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts; O. F. Sterling, newspaper artist, Oak Park, Ill.; and Miss Edith Cooper, Wilmette, Ill. The judges were Mrs. Harold McCormick, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Lorado Taft and Antonin Barthelemy.

It now seems assured that Max Reinhardt will have the Hippodrome next season for mounting two of his famous spectacles—"The Miracle," produced of old in Berlin and London on the largest possible scale; and "The Great World Theater," set on the steps of the cathedral of Salzburg last summer. Morris Gest, backed by Otto H. Kahn, is to control the Hippodrome for a year, with an option upon it for a season or so thereafter. Where Reinhardt will house his less spacious plays remains to be decided.

"Follies" Enlists a Singer.

AT last the Ziegfeld "Follies" promises a singer as a member of its cast. She is Mlle. Helena d'Algy, soprano, formerly of the Opera Comique in Paris and recently of the Spanish Grand Opera Company, which has been touring in South America. . . . Clarke and McCullough, comedians of the second "Music Box Revue," will go into vaudeville next season. Their act will, of course, be entitled "Tut, Tut."

Helen Menken is studying French, Italian and Spanish, as it is the intention to present her in "Seventh Heaven" in Paris, Rome and Madrid. . . . Hatcher Hughes, who wrote "Wake Up, Jonathan," has made a play about the mountaineers of North Carolina, which he calls "The Runt." It is on the books for production next season. . . . Peggy Hopkins Joyce was engaged as an expert to select 24 dashing young chorus men for the forthcoming "Vanities of 1923."

Elsie Thiede, a member of the St. Louis summer opera cast last year, is prima donna of a musical stock company which will open Monday night in Newark with "The Chocolate Soldier." . . . Walker Whiteside and his stock company are planning to spend the summer at the Studebaker Theater in Chicago, presenting a mixed bill of Shakspeare and modern drama. . . . John Drew was summoned to appear at Dartmouth College today, and undergo the imposition of a degree of doctor of literature. . . . Lou Tellegan is expected to tour next season in Wilson Collison's "The Sheik," hitherto known as "Desert Sands."

McKay Morris will have one of the leading parts in Mary Roberts Rinehart's new play, "The Breaking Point." . . . A manager has accepted a full-length play by F. Scott Fitzgerald. It is called "The Vegetable," and has as a subtitle, "From Postman to President." . . . William Collier and Sam Bernard will open their "fun shop" at the Fulton next fall, under the title "Bernard and Collier's Nifties of 1923."

Voice of Union Labor and the Radical Press

The Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorial or other articles in organs of the labor unions and the Communist and Socialist Parties, showing the tendency of thought on public questions among those bodies of citizens and indicating causes of social unrest.

BY ALL MEANS RECOGNIZE MEXICO.

(From Labor, organ of Railway Unions.)

It is to be hoped that nothing will be permitted to interfere with the negotiations now in progress looking to the recognition of Mexico.

Obregon has established a stable government. The people of Mexico are enjoying a larger measure of political and industrial freedom than has fallen to their lot during any previous period in the history of our southern neighbor. Life and property are as safe in the City of Mexico as in the City of Washington.

Recognition by this country has been postponed because Mexico has refused to grant certain financiers all they demanded.

The attempt of our State Department to sustain the claims of these speculators has not reflected credit on our Government.

So far as the American people are concerned, they are willing to recognize any government which truly represents the people of Mexico. Of course, they want Mexico to treat American citizens decently, but they do not demand special privileges for American investors. They feel that when an American takes his dollar across the border he should be prepared to subject himself and his dollar to the laws of Mexico. That is what they would expect of any Mexican who might come into this country seking investments, and the policy which is good enough for Mexicans in the United States should be good enough for Americans in Mexico.

GARY'S LATEST 'BULL' DURHAM.

(From Industrial Solidarity, I. W. W. Organ.)

What's this Judge Gary is bellyaching about? He, the greatest American, the 100 per cent purest American of them all, denounces immigration laws! Presiding at the board of directors' meeting of the United States Steel Corporation at Hoboken, N. J., Gary, who has just returned from a trip abroad, said there is an abundance of labor on the other side of the ocean.

"Laborers would be glad to come here and work, but they are restricted by our laws," Gary said. "And labor is scarce."

This is not true. There is plenty of labor to be had in this country. The labor shortage is most largely a myth. It is created for the purpose of securing an excessive labor supply wherewith to force down wages.

The revolution in farming is forcing millions of farmers into the factories, mines and mills. In addition, millions of Mexicans are lured across the border into this country as in the Bethlehem and other steel strikes. Further, the colored population, which is excessive in the South, is moving northward. All told, there's labor in abundance.

In a few months, possibly another year or so, when the usual depression follows this present "prosperity," and millions are unemployed, this same Gary will talk in another strain. Then he'll see the nightmare of the French Revolution again. Then he'll fulminate against the "foreign agitation" his profits would fain import here now.

He's consistent, though—looking out for himself and his class, through profits, at all times.

WELFARE WORKERS.

(From the New Majority, Farmer Labor.)

The reason for labor's distrust of welfare workers was illustrated last week when Amelia Sears and Florence Nesbit of the United Charities of Chicago worked up and made public a budget indicating that a working class family of six can live on $110.85 a month. According to their figures, a living wage is $1330 a year or $25.50 a week. For the 12-hour-a-day steel workers this is 30 cents an hour, 10 cents less than the Steel Trust is now paying day labor.

It is almost exactly the wage now paid to the average worker in Illinois manufacturing industries (meaning, of course, that many get considerably less). Leland Olds, the economist industrial editor of the Federated Press, said in a recent article:

"The attempt to rear a family on average earnings of such meager proportions has a distinct effect. * * * Children growing up under such conditions are affected not only by undernourishment but also by chronic inability to satisfy natural desires for things which the world dangles before their eyes."

Why and how, do you suppose, did these two welfare workers arrive at a "sufficient" family budget exactly matching the average wage paid workers in industry? We would like to see them try to support a family of six on $25.50 a week.

The Sugar Boycott.

(Fro mthe New York Call, Socialist.)

Some people believe that the way to strike back at the food gougers is to restrict our rations. A few years ago high prices of meat brought a boycott of meat. Now it is proposed to go without sugar. A Congressman a few years ago wore blue denim as a protest against the high price of clothing and he only followed the example of many others at that time.

The human mind works at a low ebb when its only method of striking back at those who skin us is to eat less and wear less. If a bandit deprived us of our valuables on the highway and we sought to punish him by going on short rations for a week or two the action would be similar. It would also be no more intelligent or effective.

In the first place, the skinners have already gathered in millions of loot by their skinning before the skinned get the idea of striking back. The skinners can afford to watch the amusing spectacle of millions reducing their rations. Even if prices are brought down this only means that the victims will resume eating and thus give the skinners another opportunity to skin.

It does not occur to the skinned that we should own the sugar industry and other great industries and thus throw the skinners off our backs forever. If that is suggested the organs of the skinners yelp that the skinned would disturb the "foundations of society." That puts them to sleep and prepares them for another skinning. So the skinning will go on until we have sense enough to take over the industries of the nation and operate them for the common good of all.

Wool Trust and Wages.

(From the Seattle Union Record, Union Labor.)

Increases in the wages of the Wool Trust's employes are to be pyramided and passed along to consumers, including these same workers.

The wage advance (granted to the operatives in the woolen mills) has been figured to amount to 10 cents a yard (on worsted and other fabrics), but the rise in raw wool is said to work out to a larger sum than this. The information is given that advances in the prices of woolens are in prospect and that one concern has named increases ranging from 25 to 37½ cents a yard.

It appears that the Wool Trust is to do with this raise of 12½ per cent in wages as it did with the boost in the tariff on wool—that is to say, make the public pay it and a good deal more besides. Far from being a new charge, this increase in wages promises to become a fine investment for the Wool Trust.

One thing worth remembering is this: Wages represent on the average only 15¾ cents of every dollar's worth of woolen goods produced in this country. The profiteers' tariff on each dolar's worth of product is 68 cents. The Wool Trust and all the other manufacturers of woolens can afford to give their employes a bigger share of this 68 cents than they have given and still not gouge consumers to make them foot the bill.

TWO WAYS OF MAKING MONEY.

(From the Reading Labor Advocate, Socialist.)

There are two ways of manufacturing money; one way legal, the other illegal. If you want to keep out of jail, increase your capitalization. Don't make the mistake of buying some cheap bullion and casting what may have the same appearance of good hard money. That's counterfeiting and will get you in bad. Better try the legal method and issue stock.

That is what the directors of five railroads did when they consolidated the Chicago & St. Louis, Lake Erie & Western, Toledo, St. Louis & Western; Fort Wayne, Cincinnati & Louisville and the Chicago & State Line railroads. The total capitalization of these five roads was $78,000,000. By a decree of the directors of the consolidation new stock was issued to increase this capitalization to $105,000,000. Just a mere matter of $27,000,000.

What does this mean to the working class? Well, for one thing, it means that the workers who are employed for those lines will have to earn dividends on that much money. To do this it may be necessary to keep the wages down to the lowest point. Or it may be necessary at some future time to increase freight rates, in which case all of us will help to pay the dividends whenever we use articles which were shipped over these lines.

To the railroad owners it means that they are richer by $27,000,000. That is how much money they will receive for pretty little slips of paper called stock certificates.

No wonder the stockholding class doesn't like those of us who see their little skin game and urge the public ownership of railroads. If the people of the United States ever decide to own the industries and operate them without paying tribute to grafters the dividend collectors and stockholders may yet have to take up counterfeiting as the only way to make money without working for it.

Spoonful for a Penny Brings Quick Relief

Proves splendid laxative properties of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin by test

A SCIENTIFIC test has now proven what Dr. Caldwell of Monticello asserted many years ago, that constipation will slow you up fully 25 per cent. The test was made by Dr. Donaldson of Loma Linda upon four men in the prime of life who deliberately went without a bowel movement for four days. Within 48 hours the men had coated tongue and foul breath, cankers in the mouth, no appetite, restless sleep, indigestion, headache, depression, nervousness, cramps. The blood pressure was up 28 per cent. It is just this that Dr. Caldwell has preached to his patients in private and to the public through the printed word ever since he began the practice of his specialty, diseases of the stomach and bowels, back in 1875.

After observing for years the satisfactory effect of his prescription for constipation, he placed it in drug stores in 1892, a simple vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. That was 30 years ago, and today over 10 million bottles are bought annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world. You will find it in any drug store you enter, a generous-size bottle costing you less than a cent a dose.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I hope you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Every member of the family from the infants to the grandparents can use it with safety. It is gentle and mild. The formula is on the package. Mrs. Roy Cook of Bellefontaine, O., has been giving it to her 5-months old baby, who now weighs 19 pounds; and Mr. J. B. Dawson of Brinson, Ga., declares it the best laxative his family has ever found. Try a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for constipation or any of its symptoms. The results will delight you. And the cost is only one cent a dose.

What makes this clean blue flame?

You can see for yourself at a furniture or hardware store

WHEN you see the Florence Oil Cook Stove at work you will say, "It's the same sort of heat that is produced by a gas stove."

It is the same sort of flame, but a different kind of gas.

Kerosene when heated is changed into gas or vapor.

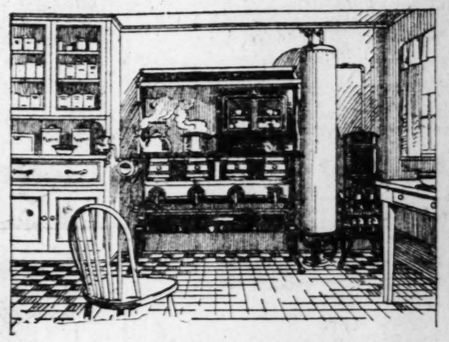
It is this gas of vaporized kerosene that burns with such an intense blue flame in the wickless Florence Oil Range.

The Florence Oil Stove has a clean, blue flame, from vaporized kerosene. It burns like gas—but at the cost of kerosene.

Simply strike a match

Touch a match to the asbestos kindler, and you have a steady blue flame that can be turned high or low as you need it. It is easy to regulate, and makes cooking much simpler.

When your cooking is done, you turn off the heat and no fuel is wasted.



Kerosene is the cheapest fuel you can use, and when burned in the Florence it gives odorless, smokeless heat. The Florence is so economical that it pays for itself in a short time.

The Florence Leveler

Any stove, to give the best results, must stand level. The Florence Oil Range is equipped with the Florence Leveler. By turning this the Florence is easily and quickly made to stand firm and level, no matter how uneven the kitchen floor.

A thing of beauty

The Florence Oil Range is an adornment to any kitchen. The mantel back and chimneys are of lustrous porcelain enamel, and the rest of the stove is finished in durable, baked-on enamel with nickel trimmings.

It's no trouble at all to keep a kitchen spick and span when you cook with a Florence, because the stove itself is so easily cleaned. It is neat and good-looking, as well as a great convenience.

Ask your furniture or hardware dealer to show you a Florence Oil Range and see if it isn't just the stove you have longed to own. Realize what it will mean to have one in your kitchen.

HOW TO JUDGE AN ELECTRIC WASHER

Large seven sheet, 16-oz. Copper Tub Oscillator.

DO YOU KNOW—

THAT THE HAAG Oscillator is equipped with noting but standard make ¼-horse power motors. Some washers use 1-6 horsepower. EXAMINE the MOTOR.

THAT THE wringer used on the HAAG Oscillator has 12-inch Hercules Rolls. The highest grade rolls made. Some washers use 10 or 11 inch cheaper rolls. Our wringer is supported by a heavy angle iron which extends all the way across underneath the wringer, allowing the wringing of heavy pieces without sag.

THAT THE most important considerations in purchasing an Oscillating Washer are the swing speed and size of tub. For you must have these to get clean clothes.

THAT EVERY piece and part on the HAAG Oscillator is made from the best of materials. And that the HAAG Oscillator is better built.

THAT THE HAAG copper tub oscillates about one-third faster than other makes. All water in tub is thrown completely from one side of tub to the other. This extra long swing gives more force to the water and assures greater cleaning power. It forces the water through the clothes three times every two seconds. In some washers only about half the water crosses from one side of the tub to the other. This gives only half cleaning force. IF A HAAG WON'T CLEAN IT NO WASHER CAN.

THAT THE HAAG has no belt to stretch and break, and no spiral gears to cause trouble, but is driven by a universal construction.

THAT THE HAAG is equipped with overload switch to stop machine in case of trouble. DEMAND THIS.

THAT YOU will do yourself an injustice if you buy a washer without seeing the HAAG.

McMonnies' "Venus Choicest Work I Exhibition, Pro

Fact That Great Nude Piec Publicly Also Proof of P ination as to What Is Mora

THIS is the last of a series of articl American sculpture in New York, Prof. Victor S. Holm of the Washi Arts. Photographs of some of the famo may be seen on the second page of th Post-Dispatch.

By Victor S. Holm,
Professor of Sculpture in the School of Fine Arts of Washington University.

FROM the terrace and the work thereon described in my last article, two stairs lead down into the sunken gardens. Here an abundance of trees and plants and no end of flowers were planted temporarily so as to form suitable settings for the works displayed in the out-door exhibit.

Along the stairway which leads down into the garden, the visitors' attention is first held by Edward McCartan's large monument to Eugene Field, placed in Lincoln Park, and of which this is a colored plaster replica. The monument represents two children grouped, in sleep, while above and behind them stands a fairy who waves her wand of dreams over their heads. It is a charming thing, full of imagination and suggestion and very well done.

At the east end of the garden is a large white model of a memorial by Adolph Weinman, executed with this artist's usual skill, but another work by this same man was, to me, far more interesting. It is a life-size figure in marble of a little Satyr reclining on a rock. He calls it "Narcissus" and this playful, decorative little piece of artist's fancy is one of the most successful garden decorations I have seen.

Notable Bronzes of Animals.

One of the largest pieces of decoration in this garden is the very interesting group of "Polar Bears" by Frederick Roth who has, besides this, a number of smaller bronzes of animals, notably a Highland bull. Among our other very successful animal sculptures must be mentioned Albert Laeslee bronze goat, handled with amazing skill in discovering artistic design in nature; a Great Dane in marble, conventionalized in a very interesting manner without any attempt to make it Egyptian, by Edward Sanford. A group of "Stampeding Elephants" by Carl Akeley and a "Young Gorilla" by Eli Harvey.

In the garden naturally has been placed as many things as possible coming under the heading of Garden Sculpture and outstanding among these must be mentioned a fragment of a fountain by Isadore Konti; a fountain figure by Ernest Keyser; "A Glint of the Sea" by Chester Beech; "Goose Girl" Fountain by Amelio Angela; "A Nymph" by Vincent Salereno and some beautiful marble figures by Attilio Piccirill, among which must be noted "Fraglina."

Other notable pieces of sculpture in the garden are a bronze figure by Oscil Howard and a life-sized figure by Nellie Walker, called "Benediction." A life-size female torso by Arthur Lee, carved in some beautiful warm-toned stone, some decorative panels by Philip Martin and Stirling Calder, and in the center of the lawn the famous, life-sized group of "Venus and Adonis" by Frederick McMonnies.

Choicest Work of All.

This beautiful group, carved in a dark-colored Italian marble, is to me the choicest thing in the whole exhibit. It is done in the spirit of the early masters of the Renaissance, a study of nature, frank and honest without being realistic; decorative and playful without losing that dignity which always should characterize sculpture. It is the warm, living flesh and yet, over and above all, it is a piece of sculpture.

I went through the exhibit together with Mr. McMonnies and had the great pleasure and benefit of hearing this distinguished artist's comment on the various works; and like all truly great artists his comments and criticisms were sympathetic and appreciative, for no one knows better than the man who has made a great name how terribly hard is the road of art. When we came to his group of "Venus and Adonis" my enthusiasm as a sculptor overflowed at this beautiful work, which our Main-Street propriety forbids to reproduce with this article.

Some Progress Indicated.

The sculptor looked at it musingly and said with a little smile: "Good Lord, have they at last got so far in America that this can be exhibited publicly?" I agreed with him that we certainly are making some progress—though slowly. The group is one of the treasured possessions of the Brooklyn Museum of Fine Arts.

The exhibition abounds with statues in the nude, for naturally the nude is the most beautiful thing in nature, as well as the greatest test of the artist's ability. A sculptor who cannot do a good nude is not a real sculptor, and exhibitions such as this should exercise a great influence on the attitude of our public mind in regard to works of art and help to shape a healthy and sane conception of what is moral and what is not.

An amusing incident occurred when a well-dressed young woman approached the lady in charge of the exhibition and whispered in her ear that she had heard that there were some very indecent works of art exhibited, and would the attendant kindly show her where they were placed. I personally overheard a lady say to her husband, as she guided him toward the entrance, that Fact That Great Nude Piece Is Being Exhibited Publicly Also Proof of Progress in Discrimination as to What Is Moral in Art, He Declares.

I personally overheard a lady say to her husband, as she guided him toward the entrance, that "this is no place for decent married people to be seen." Alas!

A Wide Field Covered.

Within the galleries of the buildings is gathered a great collection of works by older men and younger; by men with American names and by men with unpronounceable foreign names; works that run the entire length of the scale from the most sickening and insipid Neo-greek; the sturdy and healthy school of sculpture inspired and instructed by the great masters of the Re-renaissance in France during the latter part of the nineteenth century to the modern and ultra-modern expressions of the art, some of which are as compact in composition as a brickbat, and some which are as scriptural as a sieve; for an example of the latter should be mentioned Paul Manship's "Diana," which is a piece of flying sculpture, a collection of holes rather than a composition of form, which contrasts very unfavorably with Edward MacCartan's beautiful rendering of the same subject.

Among the works of the now living older men should be mentioned some very beautiful heads by Herbert Adams, especially the one called "A Nordic Type;" Paul Bartlett's Michael Angelo; "A Nude," by Janet Scudder; MacNeil's "Into the Unknown" and two large, very much-discussed marble heads of "Abraham Lincoln," by George Gray Barnard. One of these the artist calls "Lincoln, the Martyr," and the other "Lincoln, the Prophet." I must frankly confess that, though I am an admirer of some of Mr. Barnard's great sculptures, these two heads are beyond me. I cannot see what is to be gained artistically by such an over-development of realistic detail as he shows in these heads. One of the strongest words in the language of sculpture is Suggestion, but Mr. Barnard leaves nothing to the imagination. It has been well said that an artist is great not by what he includes in a work of art, but rather by what he eliminates; and this is true, for sculpture is not an imitation of life, but its illusion and interpretation. All, and more, than Mr. Barnard has said in these two heads was expressed by Saint-Gaudens in his great statue of Lincoln in Chicago.

Paul Manship's Influence.

The most dominant influence on our younger men in recent years has been the works of Paul Manship. It has been an influence even greater than that of Saint-Gaudens for this reason, that a distinct style lends itself more easily to imitation than the works of a man who arduously studies nature, the greatest teacher of all, during his whole life, and lays down the chisel at the end, realizing that, in spite of his greatness as an artist, life is yet greater. The archaistic style of design which in Mr. Manship's hands has resulted in a great number of exquisite and interesting smaller works in bronze and marble, has, with his imitators, become a mere formula.

The archaistic and Indo-Chinese flavor of Mr. Manship's beautiful bronzes has become popular with the buying public; Herbert Spencer said somewhere that all things ultimately become a matter of money. Our younger men, or nearly all of them, are now doing archaic; it sells!

Among the works of the younger men who have fallen under this spell, though not so badly, are some very beautiful bronzes by Jannewein, notably his "Comedy" and his "Darlington Memorial Fountain." These figures show study from life and are very well done, but there are others among the followers of Manship's style whose works are rather incongruous with combinations of stiff Egyptian attitudes, spaghetti hair, washboard drapery and thoroughly modern faces and figures.

Italian Influence.

It is a curious thing that it is, almost without exception, American-born artists who have gone to Italy to study that bring this new phase of art to our shores. Nearly all the young Italian-born artists who have come to abide amongst us show a healthy devotion to the study of life and a realization that the true meaning of style is not a formula into which you cast all you do, but that it is your own personality and your own interpretation of life, as you see it, that constitutes a style. The only original thing in art, the only thing that makes art ever new and divergent is the artist's soul.

Great transcendent geniuses like Michael Angelo, like Rodin, may burst asunder all bonds and all traditions in their terrible strength and venture far beyond the beaten path. Yet in doing so they are supremely themselves. Imitators always fall because they try to be someone else rather than themselves.

Of interest to our readers is the circumstance that several St. Louisans are represented in the exhibition. In the garden a beautiful little "Fountain Figure" of a baby, by Caroline Risque, was shown. In the gallery I found a little group by Adele Schulenburg called "The Fugitives"; a little bronze called "Lioness and Cubs," by Paul Herzel, and a splendid little bronze figure of a boy called "The Seaweed Fountain," by Walker Hancock. There were also three things by the writer.

Altogether, I was quite thrilled by this great exhibition of American art. There are main currents, side currents and cross currents. There are wide differences in points of view and technique. You may not like everything you see exhibited, but that is good. There is lots of room in art for everyone who tries to do something serious.

American sculpture lives!

Put An End To Neuritis

Neuritis is an inflammation of the nerves, brought on by colds, injuries, bruises, malaria or infectious diseases. As a rule it settles in the shoulder, neck, forearm, thigh, leg, or small of the back, causing merciless, stabbing pains that are often mistaken for rheumatism, sciatica or neuralgia.

Regardless of what caused your neuritis or where the pains are located, it is possible to obtain quick relief without taking narcotics or other dangerous drugs. An application of Tyamol over the pain that hurts usually stops the misery. Tyamol is absorbed through the pores of the skin and has a soothing, healing effect upon the diseased nerves.

MOST PITIFUL SIGHT IN LIFE is a man or woman who has no "will-power" as a result of nerve force exhaustion.

All the physical suffering which may be caused by nervous irritability, headaches, backaches, indigestion, heart palpitation, etc., as a result of nerve force exhaustion, are nothing as compared with its awful effects upon the mind and "will power."

The most pitiful sight in life is a man or woman who has "no will"—who has noble impulses and desires but not enough "will power" to carry them through. The memory also fails, the judgment is bad and everything therefore seems to go wrong.

In such cases, do not take mere stimulating medicines nor narcotic drugs (which only further injure your delicate nervous system), but what you need is something to put more nerve force into your nerves and more iron into your blood to help make new nerve force with which to feed your starving nerve cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. It also contains strength-giving organic iron for the blood and may therefore be said to be both a blood and a nerve food. Over 4,000,000 people are using it annually. Satisfactory results are guaranteed to every purchaser of the manufacturers will refund your money. Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

LONDON, May 18.

IT is true that Elizabethan actors wore Elizabethan costumes, and that in the early days of Italian opera Alexander the Great appeared in periwig and small clothes, and Caesar in a cocked hat and buckled shoes. But the critics look askance upon a similar experiment made by the Birmingham Repertory Theater, which celebrated the tercentenary of Shakspeare's birth by presenting "Cymbeline" in modern costume.

Princess Imogen, said the Manchester Guardian, was reduced to a sensible and homely young woman as unobtrusively gowned as Princess Mary—the sort of girl one might meet in a nice suburban tennis club any lucky day. When she took to men's clothing in pursuit of her lover, it was a discreet and wholly unremarkable knickerbocker suit. Leonatus, Iachimo and the other young men in society wore, of course, dinner packets of an evening, and by day either lounge suits or flannels with sports coats. The court physician had the garb and bedside manner of Harley street, and Cymbeline's courtiers, in their morning coats, looked quite grievously like minor members of Mr. Law's unimportant ministry.

The King alternated between full-dress military uniform—khaki after war had been declared by Italy—and a crown and ermine cape for state occasions. Sometimes he reminded one of Ferdinand of Bulgaria, sometimes of a peer in "Iolanthe." The Queen had a scarlet wig and affected the tight-fitting and sinuous gowns that are the sure mark of a "vamp" in the movies. The feebly forcible Cloten lacked a monocle, but in all other respects was the idiotic dandy to whom Mr. Huntley and Mr. Grossmith have accustomed us.

Like Elderly Scoutmaster.

THERE was a touch of the picturesque in the menage of Belarius in the cave, for that banished hero had all the appearance of a mature scoutmaster, or even of a Boer General. In the final tableau, where he yielded (in knickers, sombrero and bandolier) to British authority (in khaki and red hat) our thoughts flew to Paardeburg. The First Jailer went into battle in a tin hat. The ancient British forces were all dressed like Tommy Atkins, and the Roman Legionaries mostly as Bersaglieri.

It was curious to note the things in "Cymbeline" which survived this test. The wager scene came through remarkably well. The conversation of those dinner-jacketed young men over cocktails in Rome was racy and exciting, and the clinching of the preposterous wager lost nothing for lack of doublet and hose to back it. The bedroom scene, again, was no loser. The cockney chatter of the Tommy in a shell helmet, with the familiar M. P. on his red armlet, was the chatter of all time.

It is hardly needful to say that the sheer beauty of the requiem of the young men over Fidele had the same exquisite thrill as it would even if an enterprising manager put the whole cast in kilts or kimonos. But for the most part the effect of this experiment was to stress in "Cymbeline" those tracts of fustian, empty rhetoric and artificial complexity which a romantic setting comfortably conceals. The experiment was a doubtful compliment to the bard, and on his birthday, too!

"South Wind" Is Staged.

READERS of Norman Douglas' brilliant and witty novel, "South Wind," smiled, but affably, at a stage version recently put on by the Repertory Players. The adaptation was made by Isabel C. Trippett. According to the story, as rearranged, the Bishop, when he arrived at Ragu the Bishop, when he arrived at Ragusa, was a thirsty man. He survived it creditably, and same away without disaster from the luncheon given in his honor. Hugh Lawrence, however, thought it well to see him home to Arthur Cornish's house, where he was staying. They chose a path overlooking a cliff, and, as they went, both saw Mrs. Cornish push her husband over the edge.

Should the Bishop tell? He knew, as did every one else, that Cornish was more than an unpleasant fellow, who come home drunk and bullied Mrs. Cornish and the child. He had, moreover, loved Mrs. Cornish before he was even a curate. So he decided to say nothing, and had, for his decision, the vehement support of his daughter Mary, who, having taken a degree in hisory, had a short way with her elders, clerical or lay.

This would have been a simple solution if an unhappy Ragusan named Pietro had not been charged with the crime. This compelled the Bishop to admit having witnessed Cornish's death, and Mary had to fight and lie and cajole before the episcopal conscience could be brought to a statement that Cornish had been alone.

However, after great heart-searching, the statement was signed, Mrs. Cornish was free to send her son to the Bishop's school, Pietro was presumably released, and Mary, protesting with voluble modernism that she wasn't engaged, was nevertheless happily kissed.

"Music Box Revue" a Hit.

IRVING BERLIN'S "Music Box Revue" opened here Wednesday night to the delight of a brilliant audience. It proved one of the most spectacular revues produced in London for many years. The beautiful scenic effects, culminating in "The Legend of the Pearls," drew round after round of applause.

The show began for the gallery before the curtain went up, when Elsie Janis walked down the aisle to her seat to the accompaniment of prolonged handclapping. William Collier's skit, "Nothing But Guts," was the only part of the show not received with unqualified approval. At the end of the performance there were loud but unavailing shouts for Berlin.

Cameron, William T. Carlton, Gus Weinberg, who played in "The Ne'er Do Well;" Cyril Ring and Alva McGill.

During the filming of scenes for "The Exciters," Bebe Daniels was called upon, for the first time in her life, to drive a speed boat. It so happened that Bebe was the favorite picture star of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Steadman Wheeler of Boston, who were wintering at their Miami Beach home, and they insisted that she use their 150-horsepower speed boat, "Live Wire," in the picture.

Lois Wilson Acts as Technical Director.

A new kind of technical director has come to the motion picture industry. When William de Mille was preparing for scenes of "Only Thirty Eight," his Paramount production featuring Lois Wilson, May McAvoy, Elliott Dexter and George Fawcett, he foresaw that the opening shots, showing the condition of a house on moving day, must be absolutely correct to pass the critical eyes of millions of women who will see the picture. Lois Wilson filled the position of technical director for these scenes. She had just helped a friend move into a new home in Hollywood and was well versed on the appearance of a house on moving day. So, in addition to being a featured member of the cast of "Only Thirty Eight," Miss Wilson was also credited as an "assistant technical director" and received an additional check.

Ralph Ince has completed Dorothy Dalton's latest Paramount picture, an adaptation of "Leah Kleschna," at the Long Island Studio. The picture, which deals with Paris crook life, tells a story of love and intrigue. James Rennie plays the leading male role. Other members of the cast are Alphonse Ethier, Frederick Lewis, W. I. Percival, Paul McAllister and Florence Fair. William Miller was cameraman.

William de Mille introduced something new to the Paramount West Coast Studio recently. He had real grass around a house which had been built for scenes in his new production, "Only 38," and found it necessary to employ a gardener to keep it trimmed and watered. He is believed to be the first studio gardener.

The list at the Grand Opera House comprises Warr's Jazz Symphonists, with Buster Brown and Patsy Allen, dancer and singer; Charlie Wilson, "nut" violinist; Neil Mack and Vera Velmar, Walter Ward and Ethel Dooley, Murphy and Clark, Austin and Delaney, Delorto and Richards, and Denyle, Don and Everett.

With today's matinee and evening performances, the Rialto will close until August.

On next Friday evening piano pupils of Miss Clara Meyer and violin students of Arno Waechtler, will give recitals, respectively, at Sheldon Auditorium, and the Wednesday Club Auditorium.

The Skeleton That Has Come Back to Haunt Northwestern University And Arraign Student Body for Hazing Madness

STORY OF THE FATE OF LEIGHTON MOUNT AS REVEALED BY BONES FOUND UNDER EVANSTON PIER

Long Search for 17-Year-Old Freshman Who Disappeared on Night of Class Fight in September, 1921, Ended by Small Boy's Discovery of Ghastly Form Carefully Hidden on Lake Front—Inquiry Reveals He Took Part in Battle in Which Several Youths Were Ducked Repeatedly in Lake or Bound, Head Downward, to Pier Supports, Where Some Came Near Drowning.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

EVANSTON, Ill., May 19.

SHADOWS were deepening along Evanston's lake front and the desertion which the long piers experience at this time of day had invested them with the atmosphere of lonely island reefs. The waves of Lake Michigan rolling up and lapping at the stone foundations drowned out other sounds, increasing the eeriness of the place and making more realistic the setting as two small boys with wooden dirk knives prowled in an imaginary world of pirates and phantom ships. They were searching for buried treasure.

Running along the sand on the dark side of the pier Henry Warren, aged 12, came to a stop at a huge rock. He consulted a mystic map and put a smudgy finger on a point marked X. From the stone at his feet he measured back six paces then clambered up the side of the pier. A loose board moved under the grip of his fingers. Cautiously he lifted it, just as though he had not already known it was there.

He thrust his head into the dark hole beneath the walk. Toward the lake, breathing, groaning waves came in rhythmic gasps through the green slimy boulders. Toward the land he looked into a dark tunnel ribbed with gray rifts of light sifting through the cracks of the board walk.

Halted by Hand of a Skeleton

The map stated that the treasure lay in the rocky hollows of the tunnel in a direction he never before had explored. He lowered himself through the hole and crept on hands and knees over the stones.

It was growing darker. Suddenly he was halted by a ghastly hand. His imagination had been vivid, but this was not imagination. His eyes told him beyond dispute he was looking at the fleshless fingers of a human hand. Yes and there was a foot, leg bones and ribs washed white by far-reaching storm waves—a human skull.

Henry proved that he was as brave a fortune hunter as he had pretended. He did not run. Instead he made sure of discovery by comparing the leg bone with his own knickerbockered leg. No doubt about it.

Calmly and quietly he abandoned other pursuits and returned to his home to think about what he had seen. After deliberating through dinner hour he solemnly asked his mother if the body of Leighton Mount ever had been discovered. She replied that she did not recall that it had.

"Then I have found it under the pier at the end of Lake street," Henry informed her.

The mother could not at first comprehend him. Henry explained further and finally she was convinced that he was telling the truth, and thereupon called the Evanston police station.

PRESIDENT WALTER DILL SCOTT

Of Northwestern University, who denies the report, widely circulated after Mount's disappearance, that he and other faculty members encouraged a policy of silence among students concerning the case in order to block the investigation and deflect unpleasant odium attached to the affair. President Scott declares that all the surrounding facts indicate that Mount killed himself, but he has placed a permanent ban on hazing and all other violent class demonstrations as a result of the notoriety brought to the institution by the case.

LEIGHTON MOUNT.

The student of Northwestern University the mystery of whose disappearance is supposed to have been solved by the finding of a skeleton believed to be his under a pier near the university campus.

Unfolding of Death Mystery

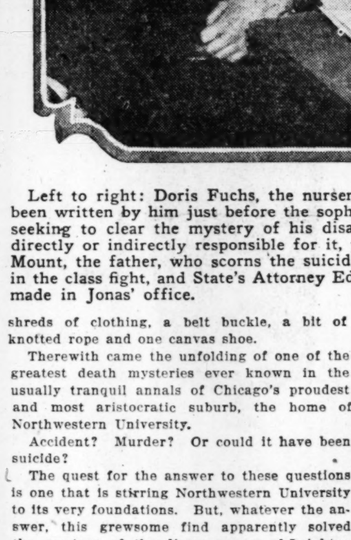
Henry accompanied policemen to the pier, but refused to enter again, because it had grown entirely dark. However, the policemen, with electric flash lamps, crawled through the small opening and in a very short time found the bones reported by the small pirate chaser. They discovered other things, including a few shreds of clothing, a belt buckle, a bit of knotted rope and one canvas shoe.

Therewith came the unfolding of one of the greatest death mysteries ever known in the usually tranquil annals of Chicago's proudest and most aristocratic suburb, the home of Northwestern University.

Accident? Murder? Or could it have been suicide?

The quest for the answer to these questions is one that is stirring Northwestern University to its very foundations. But, whatever the answer, this grewsome find apparently solved the mystery of the disappearance of Leighton Mount, Northwestern freshman, for whom 18 months' search proved unavailing, and has served to reveal, in its most reprehensible light, the form of madness which students of most large American colleges, especially first and second year men, engage in under the name of "hazing" and class "fights."

The case bore all the earmarks of a casualty that well might result when students, in a frenzy of class rivalry, pummel each other with fists and knotted ropes, bind each other head downward to pier supports and duck each other to the point of drowning in the waters of the lake. It is generally accepted as the first of two recent instances of fatalities growing out of class rivalry.



ALLEN MILLS,

Former Northwestern student and fraternity member, who left school after the scandal growing out of the class fight arose, and was taken back to Chicago from a rubber factory at Akron, O., to tell what he knew about it. He was "voted out" of the fraternity.

Left to right: Doris Fuchs, the nursemaid sweetheart of Leighton Mount, who received the suicide letter, supposed to have been written by him just before the sophomore-freshman class fight; Mrs. J. L. Mount, Leighton's mother, who says she is seeking to clear the mystery of his disappearance, not because she wishes any of his fellow-students, who may have been directly or indirectly responsible for it, prosecuted, but to end the terrible suspense she has been under for 18 months; J. L. Mount, the father, who scorns the suicide theory as ridiculous and believes his son died as the result of some student prank in the class fight, and State's Attorney Edgar Jonas, who has been in charge of the Grand Jury inquiry. This photograph was made in Jonas' office.

Class Demonstration Forbidden

The second and latest was the death only two weeks ago of Louis Aubere, another Northwestern freshman and also a resident of Evanston, who was killed when an automobile to which he was clinging in a mad chase after a group of sophomores was struck by another machine. Though his death was directly due to an accident rather than student violence, the university officials and an irate public feel that it is only another indictment against the class "fight" practice and that the accident probably would not have happened under other circumstances.

As a result of these tragedies and the swarm of letters from indignant parents, President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern has forbidden class demonstrations permanently, has ordered that all freshman and sophomore entertainments be stopped at once and that none be planned for the balance of the year and has even abolished the time-honored "freshman cap" custom practiced at most universities.

The Northwestern authorities, who reject the murder or accident theory and lean to that of suicide, have offered a reward of $10,000 for any information that will lead to a solution of the mystery or will give a clew to the present whereabouts of Mount, if he is still alive, as many members of the faculty believe.

A rigid investigation in both cases has been ordered by Coroner Wolff of Chicago and a grand jury inquiry into Mount's death is now under way. It has revealed the story of the tragedy as follows:

On the night of Sept. 21, 1921, there had been an especially violent clash between the freshmen and sophomores of the university. Student hazing, supposed to have been abolished along with other "barbarous relics of the dark ages," had broken out on the campus with unusual brutality. It had been forbidden sternly and without compromise.

Leighton Mount was a 17-year-old "frosh," a term of contempt applied by sophomores to freshmen. He was a graduate of the Evanston High School and lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Mount, not far from the campus. He had scarcely outgrown adolescence. He adored his mother and lived in an atmosphere of chivalrous romance.

Yes, there was a girl. He had met her as she convoyed a neighbor's perambulator. She had been hired to attend the whims and fancies of the infant passenger.

As she passed the first time Leighton noted the beauty of her face. The next time he met her she looked up and he saw her attractive dark eyes. And the third time he met her she smiled. After that they met frequently and other affairs became less important.

Mrs. Mount discovered the infatuation of her son with alarm. First, she did not think Doris Fuchs exactly suitable for a match, and, finally and above all, Leighton certainly was altogether too young. So she took measures to terminate the affair and it was decided Doris would return to Chicago and in all probability not see her campus lover, Leighton Mount, again.

There began an exchange of farewell notes. It all arrived closely preceding the night of the great scrap—the renewal of ancient hostilities between the freshmen and sophomores.

Doris received a note from Leighton worded as follows:

Dear Angel:

My arrangements are made and I am ready to leave for the big scrap.

First, sweetness, I swear I am haunted. "Mom" remarked tonight, "It seems that almost every young person wants to [illegible] Continued on Next Page

The limit of silly rivalry between sophomores and freshmen—the annual "mud rush" held at Cornell University a few days ago. The meeting place had been flooded daily for several days so that on the morning of the rush there was mud 6 to 8 inches deep. For hours sophomores and freshmen pelted each other with gobs of mud and rolled around in the loblolly until they were thoroughly saturated from head to foot. "It encourages class and college spirit," is the reason given for such a weird frolic.

Prospect of Oil Riches Brings No Thrills to Lowly Tonkawa Indians

"MEBBE WE GET 'UM, MEBBE NOT—ALL SAME," THEIR ATTITUDE AS BIG STRIKES ARE MADE ALL AROUND THEM

Boring Has Begun on Their Allotment in the Three Sands Region, but They Seem Indifferent to What Happens, Though Fortunes Are Being Made Daily All Around Them—a Curious Tribe That Doesn't Concern Itself About Civilization and Its Way and Is Happiest When Most Primitive.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
TONKAWA, Ok., May 19.

THE sun of the Tonkawas, the only American Indians who ever practiced cannibalism, is fast sinking in the West, but against its waning glow are silhouetted the oil rigs of the white man and there is a very good chance that the last of the Tonkawas will wallow in wealth and go down to extinction in a blaze of oil-bought glory.

Wallow is the word, for the Tonkawa is an incorrigible wallower and it will take more than sudden wealth to change him. If riches come to him he will exchange his forlorn, ill-fed pony for an automobile and drive to town and fill it with meat and return to his shack and eat and drink and be merry, in his mirthless Tonkawa way, and sleep and wake to eat and drink again, for to the Tonkawa eating and drinking are the ends of all living.

There are not more than 50 families of them on the scattered holdings allotted to them when the Government, failing after long effort to raise their standard of living, abolished their reservation and abandoned them to their wallows. For that abandonment, the Tonkawas were profoundly grateful, the only thing they ever were grateful for, as nearly as anybody can recall, and it is not at all certain that they do not view with a certain resentment the coming of oil, which threatens to disturb, in a measure, their prized indolence.

He Lives for the Day Only

It is certain, at least, that the prospect of great wealth awakens in them no sort of enthusiasm. They take no interest in the hundreds of rigs, raking the horizon like great upturned harrow teeth at Three Sands, across the plain. They stand at the doors of their miserable homes and gaze with wooden faces at the rig that is boring on their own land and if a stranger drives up on a rainy Sunday afternoon and stops and asks one of them if he is going to be "heap rich," he says "Me dunno" with a don't-give-a-damn tonelessness which no white man could ever hope to achieve.

There is no gainsaying the exactness of his appraisal of his prospects, for there is nothing in all the world so equivocal as oil well promises, but with millions flowing from the earth a few miles away even a Tonkawa might be forgiven a touch of exuberance. That is not the Tonkawa's way. Counting your chickens before they are hatched is one of the several pastimes which he is willing to leave to the white brother.

For the Tonkawa there is no time but the present. If the present provides him with the meat of his desire he is well content. His philosophy is "Forget it." Too indolent to remember his past, he has no history and no traditions. Too indifferent to anticipate, he has no future. Grotesque fate may bring him wealth, but he will not take the trouble to enjoy it except in the gluttony of the moment.

Ask a Tonkawa where his people came from and he will say either "dunno" or "Texas," according to his mood. If he is feeling good he would almost as lief say "Texas" as "dunno," Texas being a short word and as easily spoken as "dunno." If it were a long word it would not have a chance with "dunno."

Ancestors Were Mexican Sun Worshipers

Back of Texas is void. If the Tonkawa remembers any tradition of Mexico, where the tribe is said to have worshiped the sun and not unlikely made human sacrifices, as the ceremonial prelude to their cannibalistic feasts, he will not admit it.

They do not cherish their dead. The dead belong to the past and all that the past is good for is to be forgotten. Burial is in a square grave of ample proportions, much larger in fact than the departed needs, but after interment every care is taken to obliterate every surface trace that might hinder forgetfulness of the survivors.

If forgetting is difficult, there are remedies which may be obtained at the white man's drug store. Even before prohibition the noble Tonkawa was deprived of the solace of strong drink, but as a rule there was nothing between him and patent medicine except the seldom-troublesome conscience of the druggist. Wherefore it often happened that Lo the Poor Tonkawa was before the Judge, who, like as not, cared nothing for the tribal teaching of forgetfulness and did not feel called upon to mix any of it with his justice.

When R. C. Whinery, editor of the Tonkawa News, was Mayor and 'Squire it was different. Whinery had a notion that, as between the Tonkawa who bought patent medicine and the druggist who sold it to him, the druggist was a shade worse than the Tonkawa, so when the red brother was brought before him he was bidden to go hence in peace. That was one thing that the Tonkawas did not forget and to this day they honor Whinery as their white chief and make welcome with the "How" of hospitality the stranger who comes, with Whinery for guide and counselor, to the doors of their homes.

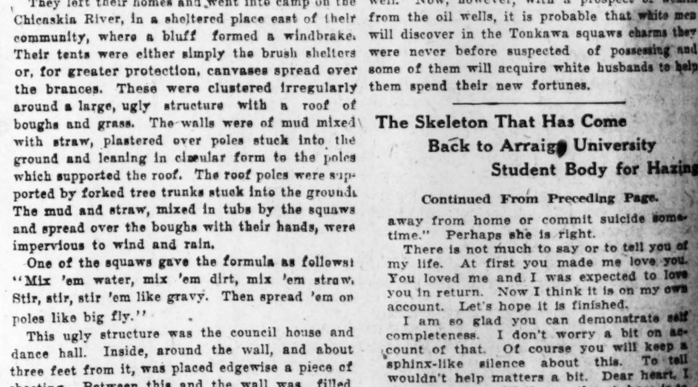
No Visions of Wealth for Them

It was that way with Jack Rush when an automobile, slithering through the slush, stopped at his sagging gate, and he counted it no hardship to come out and stand in the rain and discuss the topics of the day as fluently as is possible between a red man with little knowledge of English and a white man with less knowledge of Tonkawa. Whinery, coaxing Jack's attention with small talk while a photograph was taken of him, under double difficulties of weather, felt called upon to inquire as to the health of his white wife. "Me quit him," said Jack, with an allowable indication of distaste which discouraged further prying into his family affairs.

It is on Frank Mason's land that the borers are working, but the circumstance has no discoverable significance for Mason. He stands at his door, surrounded by his children and his dogs, and views the proceedings, at the far side of his field, with unstimulated ennui. He is the interpreter for the members of the tribe whenever they clash with the white man's law and is sometimes called Chief, but it has been a good while since there was a semblance of tribal organization and certain of the tribesmen, bitten by envy, perhaps, have been heard to scoff at his pretensions, so his hold upon the dubious honor is rather uncertain. He has all

GEORGE MILES,

Last of the blanket Tonkawas, who is quite happy in that role, though he admits that he can no longer boss his squaw as the blanket Indians were wont to do. "Mebbe you got wife, too?" he said to the Post-Dispatch man, by way of explaining the futility of striving further to make his wife pose for her photograph after she had emphatically declared, "No pitch!"



The children of the Tonkawas show signs of succumbing to the lure of civilized clothes and present a much more attractive appearance than their elders. This photograph of a boy and a girl shows them in their Sunday clothes. There are always plenty of dogs around an Indian hut.

A typical Tonkawa "summer residence." The elder Tonkawas are happiest when they can move to a brush wigwam of this type and live just like they and their ancestors used to do. The privacy that one has in a "bungalow" of this type isn't much to speak of, but it is enough for a Tonkawa.

The Last of the Blanket Tonkawas

Miles is a living example of what too much eating and too little working will do for a man. He is so fat that the exertion of carrying on a casual conversation with a couple of callers makes him wheeze and grunt. The "blanket" to which he clings is more properly speaking a skirt or apron. In the old days, before trousers came into fashion among the Tonkawa males, they wore these apron "blankets" about their waists, discreetly draped below the knees in front and somewhat precariously disposed in the other three directions.

With the coming of the trousers of civilization, depriving the "blanket" of its utilitarian sanction, the bucks gradually dispensed with it, but it irks George Miles to change styles, or anything else, so he has retained the "blanket," earning thereby the distinction of being the last of his kind.

Miles has another distinction. They say around here that he was named after Gen. Nelson Miles, a chieftain's disdain, however, as he dismisses the subject of oil with one of his best gutterals and goes within.

The demesne of George Miles, last of the "blanket" Tonkawas, is on the far side of a ridge just high enough to preserve his outlook from the unsightly obtrusion of oil rigs, for which boon his esthetic soul pours out its praises, and it is doubtful whether he has ever waddled to the crest of the undulation to view the devastation of the domain beyond.

The historicity of this may be doubted. Belikes the tradition had impromptu origin in frivolous discourse. But Miles believes it and preens over it. He wants to be a credit to the General and he has doubts whether it would be becoming for the namesake of that great man to be photographed. A dollar dissolves his doubts, and he emerges with a decrepit old firearm, to give the occasion a military tone, only to discover his great toe protruding from his moccasin. It ought to be worth another dollar to photograph his great toe, he suggests. This is plain extortion to which an adamant front is presented and he waives the point on the promise of another dollar for a photograph of Mrs. Miles.

If George had known his wife better he would have held out for a dollar a toe. For Mrs. Miles firmly refused to commercialize her charms.

"No pitch," she fulminated, showing both her teeth. Flourishing a dollar in front of her face did no good. She shook her heavy shoulders with disdain and repeated: "No pitch."

Her lord and master expostulated in Tonkawa. She sputtered back at him and wound up with "No pitch." Miles hated like everything to let that other dollar get out of the family, but he threw up his hands.

"Mebbe you got wife," he said by way of explaining, as man to man, the helplessness of his position.

The Last Word in Open-Air Living

The Tonkawas have so far surrendered to the customs of effete civilization that they live in houses, but it is an accomplishment in which they take no pride. They regard the brush shelters of their nomadic past as possessing points of superiority over the frame dwellings to the use of which they have descended, and by way of challenging comparison they have summer residences of poles and branches in their front yards. It must be admitted that they are better ventilated than the frame houses, and after visiting the latter one cannot help feeling a certain preference for the former.

In the summer time the brush house is the family sun parlor and there the visitors are entertained, the bucks talking politics, perhaps, and the ladies chatting about fashions or whatever it is that Tonkawa ladies chat about when they meet, and the children and dogs playing about.

It is a source of sorrow to the older survivors of the tribe that, with dwindling numbers, the feasts and ceremonies of the past are no more. No longer do they go apart and live in tents for their festival of penance in the full moon of November. Editor Whinery was their guest the last time they assembled as a tribe and went through their weird ceremonies.

They left their homes and went into camp on the Chicaskia River, in a sheltered place east of their community, where a bluff formed a windbrake. Their tents were either simply the brush shelters or, for greater protection, canvases spread over the brances. These were clustered irregularly around a large, ugly structure with a roof of boughs and grass. The walls were of mud mixed with straw, plastered over poles stuck into the ground and leaning in circular form to the poles which supported the roof. The roof poles were supported by forked tree trunks stuck into the ground. The mud and straw, mixed in tubs by the squaws and spread over the boughs with their hands, were impervious to wind and rain.

One of the squaws gave the formula as follows: "Mix 'em water, mix 'em dirt, mix 'em straw. Stir, stir, stir 'em like gravy. Then spread 'em on poles like big fly."

This ugly structure was the council house and dance hall. Inside, around the wall, and about three feet from it, was placed edgewise a piece of sheeting. Between this and the wall was filled with straw, upon which the Indians were seated cross-legged. This description of the dance is given by Whinery:

A Regular Tonkawa Marathon Dance

"They formed a circle, shoulder to shoulder, facing the center, then slowly stepped sideways, round and round the arena, to the beating of a large drum, placed with one head to the ground. The drum-beaters, usually three, sat cross-legged around the drum and beat it with sticks on which were wrapped knobs of flannel. The beating was accompanied by a chant and occasionally an Indian would let forth an ear-splitting yell. The men and squaws mixed indiscriminately in the dance. They danced all night long. White persons were permitted to join provided they would don blankets."

The occasion for that last revival of the tribal custom was that there had been a number of deaths and the medicine men told them it was because the Great Spirit was angry with them for departing from the ways of their fathers. The temporary renunciation of the ways of the white man, to live again as Indians should, was a sacrifice to appease the Great Spirit. The sacrifice ended with the third full moon, on the first of March.

The Tonkawas, in their natural state, were a nomadic tribe, comprising a distinct linguistic stock. They formerly roamed the plains of Texas, whose their cannibalistic practices brought them into disrepute with other tribes and they came to be treated as outlaws.

Early in the Nineteenth Century they were reported to number between 2000 and 3000, but in 1857, when they were settled on a reservation on the Upper Brazos River in Texas, their number was officially estimated at fewer than 1000. In January, 1862, they refused to join the Comanches, Delawares and others in an insurrection against the whites, and the other Indians attacked a party of 200 Tonkawas, killing all of them.

In 1884 they were placed on a reservation in Oklahoma. For a while they made their home with the Iowas and other tribes. In 1888 they were placed on the agency east of Tonkawa, formerly occupied by the Nez Perce Indians, who had been taken back to their native haunts in Idaho.

The Tonkawas came on foot to the reservation. They were almost destitute and had only a few ponies. But they liked the reservation so well that they had a tribal dance that lasted two months.

There came a time when the Government could not see any advantage in continuing the reservation and the lands were allotted to them as individuals and they were left to shift for themselves, with a minimum of Government oversight.

Until late years they would not marry members of other tribes, but latterly there have been some marriages with the Apaches of Fort Sill. And, too, there have been occasional marriages with whites, but as a rule these have not turned out well. Now, however, with a prospect of wealth from the oil wells, it is probable that white men will discover in the Tonkawa squaws charms they were never before suspected of possessing and some of them will acquire white husbands to help them spend their new fortunes.

There is not much to say or to tell you of my life. At first you made me love you. You loved me and I was expected to love you in return. Now I think it is on my own account. Let's hope it is finished.

I am so glad you can demonstrate self completeness. I don't worry a bit on account of that. Of course you will keep a sphinx-like silence about this. To tell wouldn't help matters a bit. Dear heart, I must be going. Well, sweetheart, here is to a wonderful, wonderful time when we emerge from the dreaming to love each other (and everybody else) 100 per cent in divine love. You know all that I mean by this, and all that is in my heart.

Good-by, love, and may you secure a great understanding before your heart stops beating.

I cannot sign my name; somehow it is hard.

There has been some effort on the part of Mount's family to discredit this note because it had no signature, but Dorris Fuchs says only he could have written it to her.

It was the next morning that Doris received the note. At the same time the report was circulated on the campus that young Mount had failed to return to his home after the big scrap.

Went to Fight With Reluctance

He had seemed to go to the rush with some reluctance. Mrs. Mount afterwards recalled that when one of the boys had jumped on the running boards of her car while she and Leighton were driving near the university and asked if Leighton was to take part in the rush, he had seemed undecided.

"But I urged him to go," said Mrs. Mount afterward. "I told him to make the most of his college life, to enter into athletics and social affairs of the university."

So Leighton put on some old clothes, some tennis shoes and took up a position assigned to him near the gymnasium.

It was a wild night. Dark, shadowy groups of men slipped like Indian bands between the trunks of the great elms which distinguish the campus. Weird yells, clashes, flying feet, more shrieks, ropes and one group would carry away the other trussed to boards or bound and helpless.

Startled residents peeked cautiously from behind drawn blinds as the forays suddenly burst into action through the stillness of the night. Watchmen and police guards on the lake shore looked on with mild interest while hapless victims were tossed into the water.

Greatest Woman Criminal Hunt Near Its End

CLARA PHILLIPS, AFTER ELUDING DETECTIVES IN 5000-MILE CHASE THREE MONTHS, AWAITS EXTRADITION IN HONDURAS

Notorious "Hammer Murderess," Who Escaped in Mysterious Way From Los Angeles Jail on Night of Dec. 5 and Was Carried to Mexico by Airplane, Has at Last Been Found in Central American Republic—Treated as Guest Rather Than a Prisoner by Tegucigalpa Chief of Police, She Refuses to Admit Identity, but Watches Anxiously the Trail for the California Officers Who Are on Their Way to Take Her Back to Los Angeles to Begin Her Prison Term for Slaying Mrs. Alberta Meadows.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras.

THE heat of tropical summer time comes early in Honduras and the sunshine that shimmers across the sands stretching away from the little city of Tegucigalpa has already taken on the blaze that blisters the skin and bakes harder the walls of the town's adobe houses. As one looks over the plain toward the blue where the mountains begin, one sometimes seems to descry horsemen galloping along a trail lined with cactus and mesquite. Again the vision seems to be that of a stage coach and sometimes it seems to be neither stage coach nor horsemen, but green trees and lakes instead; then it vanishes altogether and one sees only the waves of heat radiating from the sand.

Sitting in a big, ill-kept room on the second floor of the adobe building which Tegucigalpa citizens know as police headquarters an American woman, a prisoner, rocks back and forth day in and day out, in a creaky chair, and watches these apparitions of the sand wastes. Always she looks in the same direction—toward the mountains, through which leads the trail from La Libertad, San Salvador, by the sea—and sometimes, when the figures appear to be drawing nearer, she stops rocking and sits up in wide-eyed alarm. Then when the specters are caught up and whisked away in the dust of a desert whirlwind she lolls back in her chair and resumes her vigil, half awake, like the lazy guard in policeman's uniform who leans on his rifle by her door or paces leisurely to and fro in the street in front of the building.

Tegucigalpa just now is expecting visitors. Already word has come that several days ago Under Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz, his wife and Deputy Sheriff Walter J. Hunter of Los Angeles had departed for Honduras and that their arrival overland from La Libertad might be looked for at any time.

Since the purpose of their long journey by sea and their rigorous trip on horseback through more than a hundred miles of Honduran mountains and deserts is simply to get a look at this woman prisoner, it is not unusual that she should exhibit interest in their coming. Possibly, too, there is a good reason for her disquietude when the figures of a mirage loom uncommonly near, for these expected visitors are to tell the world whether or not she is Mrs. Clara Phillips, California's "hammer murderess," who since her escape from the Los Angeles Jail on Dec. 5 has been the object of the greatest woman hunt in criminal history. If this woman is Clara Phillips—and the evidence that she is seems overwhelming—the arrival of the California officers probably will mean she has reached the end of her trail, for her extradition to the United States will then be only a matter of a few days and when the natives watch the departing figures disappear in the blue of the mountains there will be one more in the group. Clara Phillips will be on her way back to California, where she will go at last to San Quentin Penitentiary to take up her term of "from 10 years to life."

All Convinced of Her Identity

So now, pending the arrival of the officers, somnolent Tegucigalpa is buzzing with speculation, and even among its most indifferent inhabitants argument waxes warm at times over the question of whether this handsome woman is really the long-sought murderess. The woman herself stoutly declares she is not, and there are many who accept her word for the matter and denounce the Honduran officials who are holding her. The wave of public sympathy for her has given rise to some attempts to release her, and some 15 students have been arrested following the finding of a ladder against her prison wall.

But the trend of other circumstances appears to establish beyond doubt the fact that the long chase of Clara Phillips—the longest woman hunt in history—has come to a close.

John Ewing, former United States Minister to Honduras, who has interviewed her in jail, is positive that there can be no mistake as to her identity. Even Jesse Carson, the man who posed as her husband when the pair and another woman, giving the name of Mrs. R. M. Young, were arrested three weeks ago, has broken down under rigorous cross-examination and admitted that the prisoner is the fugitive "Tiger Woman." The chivalrous little Chief of Police who arrested the three upon the demand of Franklin Morales, the present American Minister, is also convinced that she is Clara Phillips, although frankly he "hopes that she is not."

That official, however, recognizing the popularity which his fair prisoner has gained since her incarceration here, is proceeding cautiously and is giving her the benefit of whatever doubt remains.

"I fear there is no question as to the woman's identity," he says, "but until the California officers arrive and it is positively established I shall not humiliate her by imprisoning her in the penitentiary. She will remain in her room at headquarters, where we shall try to make her as comfortable as possible."

It seems that this show of gallantry did not obtain in the cases of the man and the other woman, for both have been denied the comforts of police headquarters bedrooms and have been lodged in the penitentiary instead. Mrs. Young shows no signs of fear, but remains silent, steadfastly refusing to discuss the charges that she figured in the escape of Clara Phillips from jail and exhibiting marked indifference toward the trend of the proceedings. Carson, however, has shown less fortitude than either of the women and has expressed a willingness to return to California without extradition papers to face a charge of arson.

The description of Clara Phillips sent by the Honduras Consul at Los Angeles fits "Mrs. Carson" in every detail. She looks like newspaper photographs of the "hammer murderess" from all aspects of comparison. Her face is rather square and somewhat masculine, just like the face of Mrs. Phillips. Her eyebrows are shaved and her eyes look directly and boldly into the eyes of anyone to whom she has occasion to talk, whether it is a social caller or a grim official trying to extract a statement from her. She smiles easily and often, revealing white, pearly teeth. Her usual genial attitude may account in large degree for the turn of sentiment in her favor, but whatever the cause, her popularity is apparent. Not infrequently she is visited in her prison room by members of the town's most fashionable set, who have taken a keen interest in her case, and they are loath to believe she really is the fugitive slayer who, on Sept. 12, 1922, beat Alberta Meadows to death with a hammer and left her body on the lonely Montecito drive, near Los Angeles.

Wields Her Fists on Photographer

But there is a side of her nature other than geniality. The show of belligerence which won for Clara Phillips the sobriquet of the "Tiger Woman" has been disclosed to a marked degree in this woman's temperament, whether she is Clara Phillips herself or only Mrs. Jesse Carson, and it is having its own effect upon opinion regarding her identity.

This belligerence came to light with vigor a few days ago, when the visit of a newspaper reporter and a photographer to police headquarters to get the woman's picture ended in a fist fight that was somewhat one-sided.

"Mrs. Carson" refused to pose for a photograph. The camera man insisted and the prisoner refused again. The photographer resorted to other methods. When he thought the woman was off guard he tried to snap her picture. But he had only thought she was off guard. She wasn't. She flew into a rage and into the camera man at the same time. Before he could retreat she had pummeled him savagely and dashed the camera to the floor. As she was about to leap upon it she was caught and overpowered by the guards.

When her rage had subsided and she had regained her customary easy manner the reporter sought to question her.

"I will not say that I am Clara Phillips," she answered, "nor will I say that I am not Clara Phillips. As a matter of fact I will say nothing at all. I am told that officers are coming from Los Angeles and I prefer to wait for them to say whether or not I am Clara Phillips. It would not do any good for me to answer your questions. Don't ask me any more." Then she refused to waive extradition proceedings and the Governor of California immediately began steps to have her brought back to Los Angeles.

Now that Carson has added his admission to the weight of other evidence against her, there appears to be little doubt that the pursuit which has led through all the labyrinths of the underworld, over thousands of miles of territory and through half a dozen countries, is ended. The final identification by the California officers will be only a formality incident to taking the woman back to begin serving her sentence.

A map of what the Los Angeles authorities say is the probable course of Clara Phillips' flight to Honduras. By arrow this course measures about 3800 miles, but by the way she had to go, she must have traveled 5000 miles since she left Los Angeles on the night of Dec. 5, supposedly in an airplane that took her to Mexicali, on the Mexican side of the international boundary line.

MRS MADELYNNE OBENCHAIN.

The District Attorney at Los Angeles would like to know what took place when Mrs. Obenchain made her last visit to her cell in the jail to get some personal effects she had left behind. She saw Clara Phillips—they had been quite chummy during their stay in jail—and it was then that Mrs. Phillips is supposed to have given her the articles that are said now to be in Mrs. Obenchain's possession. The authorities would like to know if Mrs. Obenchain gave Mrs. Phillips any messages, articles or money.

Story of Her Daring Escape From Los Angeles Jail

IT was on Nov. 15, after a trial lasting nearly a month, that a jury in a Los Angeles court reached a compromise verdict, finding Clara Phillips guilty of murder in the second degree for the killing of Mrs. Alberta Meadows in a fit of jealous rage.

In the course of the trial, which attracted nation-wide attention, it was revealed how Mrs. Phillips had learned that Mrs. Meadows had been intimate with Armour L. Phillips, her husband; how, with Peggy Chaffee, a former chorus girl, Mrs. Phillips went to a 10-cent store and purchased a hammer and how on the next afternoon she invited Mrs. Meadows to go riding with her and the Chaffee woman in an automobile.

On the lonely Montecito drive, near Los Angeles, Mrs. Phillips stopped the car, and, according to the testimony of Peggy Chaffee, star witness for the prosecution, invited Mrs. Meadows to get out.

"Now we are going to have it out," she is reported to have said—and the fight began.

"I saw Clara strike her with the hammer," Miss Chaffee testified. "She knocked her down and then struck her repeatedly on the head and left her lying on the ground, covered with blood. I tried to run away, but Clara caught me with her car, and she told me to get in. Then she threatened to kill me, too, if I ever told of what I had seen.

On Nov. 27 Mrs. Phillips was sentenced to the San Quentin Penitentiary and was confined in the Los Angeles Jail to await removal to the State prison.

Then on Dec. 5 came one of the most sensational escapes in criminal records. It was the third sensation of a remarkable case. The murder itself had stirred widespread interest; the conviction gave it even wider publicity and then the escape crowned all its other interesting phases.

Now, four months later, the final chapter is about to be written in scorching, sun-baked Honduras, where Clara Phillips has reached the end of the road.

How She Escaped Still a Mystery

Just how her escape was effected early on the morning of Dec. 5, nobody has yet determined and probably nobody will do so until she makes it clear herself. All that is actually known of her flight was told by the three cell bars which had been sawed out of her window and which were found under her cot after her absence had been discovered.

To reach the ground from her cell window she must have climbed to the roof of an adjoining building, where her barefoot tracks were found, and fled down the stairs, but how she reached that roof from the jail window is a mystery. The only explanation was that she first climbed up the side of the wall to the jail roof and from there crossed to the other building.

Neither fellow prisoners nor guards saw her leave or heard any noise connected with her flight. It appeared certain, however, that she had aid from the outside. Somebody must have smuggled the saw to her and somebody may have even climbed to her window to help her open her way out. The matter is still conjecture.

But the moment after her flight was discovered at 7 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 5 the celebrated chase began.

All available evidence tended to indicate that Mexico or Central America was the fugitive's objective and pursuit turned in that direction first.

The border was combed by Deputy Sheriffs and other officers obtained permission to search various resorts in Tia Juana and Mexicali, border towns of Mexico which are known to be frequented by criminals and denizens of the underworld.

Customs officials and immigration authorities were ordered to keep a sharp lookout and airplanes were chartered to patrol the deserts and mountains on each side of the border. By

Mighty Healing Power of Peterson's Ointment

"I wish I could publish all the grateful letters I get every week," says Peterson. "I don't believe anyone on this earth has such a happy time at work as I have. All I do is make Peterson's Ointment and read letters like these that come right from the heart:

"I had an ulcer on my ankle—had it 30 years and could not get it healed. For the last six years I had several doctors. I got one box of your ointment and it almost healed it, and it was entirely healed before I had used the second one. I don't think there is a better remedy on earth." Mrs. J. C. Henderson, 520 Sprague Street, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Peterson's Ointment is just as good for piles as it is for old sores. It stops itching of eczema almost instantly. There isn't anything in the way of pimples or face blemishes that it won't chase away, and for sore feet, chafing, sunburn, scalds, cuts and bruises there is nothing so sure or speedy. 35 cents.

BERLIN AMUSEMENT PLACES ARE DOING RUSHING BUSINESS

Drink and Be Merry for Tomorrow We May Be Bankrupt," New Version of Old Toast.

By Wireless to the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News.

BERLIN, May 19.—Amusement is running amuck in Berlin. "Let us drink and be merry for tomorrow we may be bankrupt," a slightly changed version of the time-honored toast, is the new battle cry of the Berliners. Never before have the German capital's drinking, dining and dancing palaces done such a rushing business as in the last two weeks.

Every place of this kind is overcrowded long before the dinner hour. Fist fights for tables take place every night. The police ban on French champagnes, on lobsters, oysters and caviar is ignored, and the closing hour regulations are disregarded. Bills running into millions of marks are paid as if commonplace. Scores of cafes and dance halls run all night, the customers paying $10 or more a bottle for poor German fizz. The cocaine and morphine dens are packed day and night despite frequent police raids.

The German mark two weeks ago again crashed from 20,000 to 47,000 to the dollar, and people have no faith left in German money or securities and a new law prevents them from investing it in foreign securities. That is why they are sinking their earnings in "memoirs and hangovers" rather than marks.

VOLUME OF BRITISH EXPORTS APPROACHING PRE-WAR LEVEL

Coal Shipments Particularly High, Due to Demands of Germany.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 19.—Grounds for optimism concerning the trade position are again furnished by the latest returns. The volume of exports here is now rapidly approaching the pre-war level. In some exports these records have been already reached and passed. A glance at the figures of some of the country's most vital industries will show the grounds that exist for optimism. Coal exports are very high, due largely to the demands of Germany arising out of the French occupation of the Ruhr. The figures are as follows:

March, 1922 .....5,200,000 tons
January, 1923.....5,600,000 ton
February, 1923.....5,900,000 tons
March, 1923.....7,100,000 tons

The figures for last month show an increase of 38 per cent over March, 1922, but that is not all. They are actually a million tons in excess of the average exports for 1913. It is the same with iron and steel, which are rapidly regaining their positions in the world's markets.

Last month's exports reached a figure that is slightly in excess of the close of 1913. There has been an improvement to the extent of 50,000 of 70,000 tons over March, 1923, when the export amounted to 290,000 tons.

The increase in exports of jute piece goods last month was no less than 65 per cent over the corresponding month last year.

Woolen and worsted yarns exported last month were 69 per cent up on the previous month, and identical with the average volume of exports in 1913.

Pontifical High Mass Today.

There will be a pontifical high mass at St. Francis Zavier's (College) Church at 11 a. m. today, as part of the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the coming of the Jesuits to St. Louis. The celebrant will be the Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Lillis, Bishop of Kansas City, and the sermon will be preached by Archbishop Glennon. Special music will be sung by the Scholastic Choir from the divinity department of St. Louis University.

Itching Scalp Healed by SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even itching eczema of the scalp, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin and scalp irritation and soothes and heals the eczema right up. The first application stops the itching and makes the skin cool and comfortable.

Sufferers from skin trouble, blemishes, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist. Be sure it is genuine. Look for the name Rowles.

Combing Won't Rid Hair of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and it never fails to do the work.

THE SKELETON THAT HAS COME BACK TO HAUNT UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

the hours passed the hazards were increased, until the police were obliged to take an active hand.

Placed Face Down in the Waves.

Arthur Persinger, a freshman of the Sigma Nu fraternity, suddenly found himself surrounded by an overwhelming foe. Helpless to resist, he was bound to a board and, according to the police record made at the time, but afterward changed, he was carried out to the end of a pier, placed face down where the undulating waves submerged him again and again. It was stated that he was rescued after he had been deserted while in imminent peril of his life.

He returned to the fraternity house, thoroughly drenched.

In this house were "Chuck" Palmer, William MacElwain and J. Allen Mills, the latter a "pledge." These three occupied the same room.

Mills admits that he was a leader of the freshmen in the rush. Persinger was a sophomore. MacElwain states that he had retired when Mills came in with his trousers wet.

"I asked Mills: 'Did they duck you?'

"'No,' he answered, 'we ducked them.' He changed his clothes and went out again.

"I went to sleep," continued MacElwain, "and did not see Mills again until the next day."

"Did you see Mills that night you returned to the 'frat' house after you were ducked?" Persinger was asked.

"I have answered that question to the proper authorities and will not repeat it to anyone else," Persinger answered.

Shortly afterward Mills disappeared, but not until he had become involved considerably with the disappearance of young Mount. He was dropped from the fraternity—voted out, it was afterward stated.

Frantic Search for Mount.

Witnesses were brought forward who declared they had seen him armed with a revolver the night of the rush and the following day. He seemed to be haunted with the task of finding Mount. His companions said he walked up and down the lake shore looking for him, that he accused various persons, including certain newspaper reporters, of kidnaping the missing youth to create a sensation.

The mother of the young man was broken-hearted. His father hired detectives, who investigated and searched for months. Throughout this period of search criticism was expressed at the attitude of the university faculty. It was intimated that they were endeavoring to block inquiry in order to deflect an unpleasant odium attached to the circumstances of the disappearance.

Weeks and months passed by and finally the talk subsided. Occasionally rumors rippled the surface of Evanston gossip that young Mount had been seen in one locality or another. Members of the faculty appeared to take a great interest in such rumors and continually expressed the belief that he still was alive.

Only within the last few weeks the latest rumor stated that he had been seen in a department store in Milwaukee. It was inferred that he had run away because of his unfortunate love affair.

Then came the momentous discovery of the whitened bones beneath the pier by the small adventurer.

How could it be possible that the body had reposed there all these months without discovery?

Hole Not There Last Summer.

An examination of the hole was made. Life guards who had patrolled the pier for months subsequent to the disappearance of the young man made affidavit that the hole did not exist there last summer.

Where was Mills? Queries were dispatched in all directions. It was heard he had been in a scrape in California over a bad check, but afterward released. Then he was declared to have worked in Chicago as a taxi chauffeur. He had been seen in Evanston with his taxi only recently. Correspondence relating to some unfortunate affair that had blasted his university career was found in a trunk he had left in the West.

Other information came to light and the effort to locate Mills as a witness was redoubled. Finally he was discovered working in a rubber factory in Akron, O. He was brought to Chicago and questioned by a grand jury summoned to make inquiry into the death. He said in part:

"In reference to Mount, I want to say I never met him, under any circumstances, in my life.

"I was one of the leaders of the freshman class of 1921 and on the night of Sept. 21 took part in ducking several of the sophomores. I headed a group of about 250 freshmen. We first went to the Star Theater and there made plans for the rush.

"After the plans were completed we started for Patten gymnasium. Our group was intact with the exception of possibly 10 or 15 of the freshmen who drifted away.

Helped Duck Three Sophomores.

"The rush started about 1 a. m. and I took part in ducking about three sophomores. The men were bound in such a manner that they could easily free themselves.

"After that I went to the Sigma Nu fraternity house, to which I was pledged as a member, and went up to bed.

"About what time was that?"

"It was about 2:30 or 3 o'clock."

"When did you hear of Mount's disappearance?"

"The next morning, around the campus. I learned of the disappearance. Three of us leaders in our classes formed a committee and went to call on President Scott. We urged him to make an investigation. Alfred Steele, acting president of the Student Council; Roland Feltman, president of the sophomore class, and I, composed the committee. Later President Scott called me in and said he wanted further investigation discontinued."

Thus instead of helping to clarify the mystery, the evidence of Mills only made it more obtuse.

It was at first reported stones weighing 500 pounds were found piled on the skeleton beneath the pier.

"If Mount had committed suicide, as his letter might infer, how could he have covered himself with the stones?" everybody asked.

This, it was learned, was not true—that, while large rocks were piled about, none was on the skeleton.

If his body had remained under the pier during all of the time since Sept. 21, 1921, how could it have remained undiscovered since the pier had been patrolled daily subsequent to that time?

Moreover, guards maintain that the hole was not in the pier during the past summer. If so, who cut the hole and when and who put the body in the pier?

If some one did cut the hole and place the body there, why should he take the trouble to do so unless he held a guilty knowledge of his death?

Mother Thinks He Was Murdered.

The mother thinks the boy was murdered.

Doris Fuchs thinks he committed suicide under cover of the class rush, that he may have taken poison and students, fearing they had caused his death, hid the body.

"But students would not do that," maintained Roland Feltman, summoned to recite his version of the rush. He was president of the sophomore class at the time.

"I believe," he declared, "if a man fainted or even appeared to be dead among a group of students they would seek a doctor at once. That would be the only intelligent thing to do.

"If Mount had wanted to commit suicide or make out a pretended suicide the finding of the bones could have been a prepared find."

"How would you account for the teeth fillings as identified by the dentist?" Feltman was asked.

"A man friendly with some of the dental students could probably work that out and would do so to make a

From all corners of the earth occasionally would come reports that the woman had been seen, but when investigators took up a new angle of the search, they found only hearsay evidence and cold trails. The Los Angeles authorities believe it has been fairly well established that Clara Phillips escaped from the jurisdiction of the United States in an airplane which was waiting to speed her away immediately after the jail break. Department of Justice agents, in the course of their investigation along the border, chanced to hear that a commercial aviator had bragged of landing a woman near Mexicali on a record-breaking trip from Los Angeles.

Acting on this tip, they discovered where a plane had landed about 12 miles from the border immigration officials' depot. The tracks were still there in the sand. Their next discovery was that a lone woman, whose description tallied with that of Clara Phillips, had been seen about a lonely cabin near the spot.

Traced to New Orleans.

From that point the mysterious woman was traced to New Orleans by way of the Mexican Railroad and from there to Vera Cruz by steamer, and finally to Mexico City. There the belief that she was Clara Phillips was confirmed when it was found that she had received money at the Bank of Montreal. Later reports had her figuring in the night life galeties

Now that her capture seems to have been accomplished at last, the story of the search that finally proved successful is being brought out bit by bit.

The Los Angeles authorities believe it has been fairly well established that Clara Phillips escaped from the jurisdiction of the United States in an airplane which was waiting to speed her away immediately after the jail break. Department of Justice agents, in the course of their investigation along the border, chanced to hear that a commercial aviator had bragged of landing a woman near Mexicali on a record-breaking trip from Los Angeles.

Acting on this tip, they discovered where a plane had landed about 12 miles from the border immigration officials' depot. The tracks were still there in the sand. Their next discovery was that a lone woman, whose description tallied with that of Clara Phillips, had been seen about a lonely cabin near the spot.

Traced to New Orleans.

From that point the mysterious woman was traced to New Orleans by way of the Mexican Railroad and from there to Vera Cruz by steamer, and finally to Mexico City. There the belief that she was Clara Phillips was confirmed when it was found that she had received money at the Bank of Montreal. Later reports had her figuring in the night life galeties of the Mexican capital, but still she evaded capture.

In Mexico City the trail was taken up by Valento Quintana, chief of the Mexican Secret Service, and her capture in Honduras has come largely as a result of his efforts. He learned that Clara Phillips and a male companion had registered at the Hotel St. Francis in Mexico City on Jan. 23 as Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Carson of New Orleans and latter had bought a ticket for Suchiati, on the border of Guatemala. From there the trail led to the city of Acajutla and thence to San Salvador.

In San Salvador, while traveling under the name of Mrs. R. M. Young and still in company with Carson and another woman who gave her name there as Mrs. Carson, she was recognized as the fugitive.

Turned Up Next in Honduras.

Just as officers were closing in on the party, however, all three disappeared as mysteriously as Clara had vanished from the jail. Next they turned up in Honduras. They arrived from Laucen, San Salvador, on April 19, in a gasoline launch and made their way over the mountains and deserts 80 miles to Tegucigalpa in a motor truck, carrying with them three trunks and three suit cases.

They went first to a hotel, but remained there only two days and moved to a rooming house. At first Carson settled all the bills, paying in gold, but soon their funds evidently began to run low.

The following telegram was dispatched:

"Jackson, Opera House, Tampico, Mexico: Wire when you are coming. Mrs. R. M. Young."

The reply that came back was this:

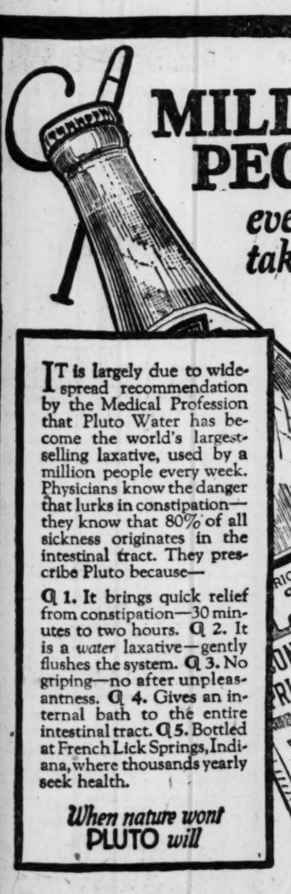
"Coming, await letters. Sending jack. Ben Norton."

The word "jack" is believed to have referred to money, but several days passed and no money came. Carson then, apparently in desperation, sent a radiogram to "Adams, Galveston, Tex," asking for $500, but it seems that this possible source of revenue also proved unavailing. Clara and her companions were stranded. The order for their arrest came from Minister Morales and the chase of Clara Phillips was ended.

Mrs. Obenchain Involved.

Since the capture a new angle of the case has developed involving Mrs. Madelynne Obenchain, who was acquitted a few months ago of a charge of murdering her former sweetheart, J. Belton Kennedy. The District Attorney at Los Angeles is looking for Mrs. Obenchain in the belief that she may be able to throw some light on Clara Phillips' escape, for recently it was discovered that when Mrs. Obenchain was released from the jail on Dec. 4, the day before Clara disappeared, she took with her many of the latter's belongings. These articles have been turned over to the Sheriff's office and the District Attorney thinks Mrs. Obenchain has an interesting story to tell about how she came to have them and what she intended to do with them. So far, however, no recent trace of Mrs. Obenchain has been found.

It is recalled that after Mrs. Obenchain first left the jail she found it necessary to return to her cell for some personal effects. She saw Clara Phillips on her last visit, but what occurred at their meeting is not known, as little attention was paid to it at the time by the matron.



MILLION PEOPLE
every week take PLUTO

IT is largely due to widespread recommendation by the Medical Profession that Pluto Water has become the world's largest-selling laxative, used by a million people every week. Physicians know the danger that lurks in constipation—they know that 80% of all sickness originates in the intestinal tract. They prescribe Pluto because—

Q 1. It brings quick relief from constipation—30 minutes to two hours. Q 2. It is a water laxative—gently flushes the system. Q 3. No griping—no after unpleasantness. Q 4. Gives an internal bath to the entire intestinal tract. Q 5. Bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana, where thousands yearly seek health.

The Whole House Comfortable and Clean

When the wise home-owner buys a furnace he realizes that he is paying for results. He doesn't care as much about the mechanical equipment to be put in his basement as about having his entire house kept comfortable and clean.

It is Results that the Holland Furnace Company guarantees. And the guarantee is a Heating Bond given directly to the home-owners from the World's Largest Installers of Furnaces.

There is no division of responsibility. No dealer or side-line man to enter into the transaction in any way. This Company manufactures the furnace, designs the installation, and actually installs the complete Warm Air Ciculating System with its own salaried men.

That is why the Guarantee Bond can mean precisely what it says—only one place for you to put responsibility.

Every address in the big alphabetical list below is that of a permanent, local Branch of this Company. Besides having all of the local interests at heart, the same as any other local business people have, the Holland men in the Branches are an integral part of the great Organization from which they receive their weekly salaries.

Heating Systems Not Installed by Machine

Since heating Systems cannot be installed by machinery, but must be planned by human brains for each home separately, and installed by human hands, The Holland Furnace Company proved many years ago that it was not only necessary to have good dependable men, but a constant contact with those men—an absolute control over them—to insure standard heating service.

Holland Service Is Standard

In All Branches Listed Below

For the Holland User who lives in one of the cities listed below, and who has relatives and friends in some of the other cities, it is a matter of keen satisfaction to know that he can recommend the Holland Furnace knowing that the installation will be as well done as for himself, no matter how far away the folks live.

And when a person has accustomed himself to the warmth and cleanliness and economy of the Holland in Cleveland or Buffalo, it is gratifying to know that when moving into a new home in Minneapolis or Chicago or Kansas City, or any of the smaller cities, that the same superior heating service can be had by simply calling up the Holland man.

Is it any wonder that Holland-heated houses are selling quicker every day, and that they are attracting the special favor of all the high-grade Real Estate Men? The realtor's advertisements tell the story, for they mention the Holland every chance they get. When you buy your Holland Furnace, no matter from which of the Branches in the list, the World's Largest Installers of Furnaces will be directly and solely responsible. You'll enjoy the healthfulness of circulated air, and your whole house will be Comfortable and Clean.

Free Book

"The Whole House Comfortable and Clean" is an attractive new book—a guide you should have in furnace buying.

Send the coupon to us or get in touch with the nearest Holland Branch today. No matter how many furnaces we make, their installation depends entirely upon the number of trained men available.

The Holland uses any fuel without damage to interior decorations. And it uses less fuel thna any other complete heating system.

$40,000 PAID FOR N. W. CORNER OF OLIVE AND 23D

Frank Dallavalle Purchaser of Property — Price on Basis of $400 a Foot for Olive Street Frontage.

WIDENING PROJECT CONSIDERED ASSET

Many Transactions Reported Considered in This District on Theory Improvement Will Boost Values.

By Berry Moore.

Another important Olive street corner changed ownership yesterday, the second within a week, with the purchase by Frank Dallavalle of the northwest corner of Olive and Twenty-third street from Robert Dulia, an officer of the American Tobacco Company of New York. The transaction was made by John S. Blake & Bro. Real Estate Co., in connection with the Mercantile Trust Company. The consideration was $40,000.

The site has 100 feet on Olive street by 107 feet 4 inches on Twenty-third street, and is occupied by old buildings. The price paid was on a basis of $400 a foot for the Olive street frontage.

The corner was acquired as a speculative investment and eventually is to be improved with a modern business block, it is understood. Meantime, the buildings will be occupied by shops, for which they will be altered.

The purchase was made upon the supposition that the widening of Olive street, as provided for under the bond issue, would result in the complete rehabilitation of this section of the thoroughfare, which has been in a state of deterioration.

Forecast Higher Prices Soon.

As was told in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the Laclede Trust Company has conducted negotiations for the Garneau Hotel Block, at the northwest corner of Jefferson avenue and Olive street. The site has 75 feet on Olive street by 109 feet on Jefferson avenue, and is owned by the McBride estate. The transaction is being handled by Barngrove & Specht, acting for the Laclede Trust Company, in connection with the Mercantile Trust Company, representing the McBride estate.

While no announcement has been made, it is understood the purchaser contemplates, in the course of time, to replace the present hotel building with a large business structure.

Many speculative propositions are working on the north side of Olive street in this district, on the theory that higher prices soon will prevail for property in view of the proposed conversion of the thoroughfare, which virtually will give it the status of a boulevard.

The thoroughfare is to be widened to 100 feet from the present width. The cost is estimated at $2,000,000 and the city's share, placed at $400,000, will be paid from the $3,650,000 bond issue. The remainder of the cost will be assessed against abutting property and other property deemed benefited.

40 Feet From South Side.

Under the present plan, 40 feet will be taken from the property on the south side of the street, with a few exceptions, where there is a slight bend in the street. This will leave a depth of about 70 feet for building lots from which land is to be taken for the widening, according to city engineers.

The Olive street widening will link up with the proposed widening of Lindell boulevard. Channing to Grand, another bond issue project. It is planned to widen this short section of Lindell boulevard to 100 feet at an estimated cost of $10,000. The city's share, estimated at $10,000, will be paid from the bond issue.

Approximately 250 pieces of property and 70 defendants are involved in the Olive street condemnation proceedings.

The Olive street widening will provide another east-and-west traffic artery and release some of the congestion on Washington avenue, Locust, Pine and Chestnut streets. It will absorb some of the heavy eastbound traffic that is thrown into Locust street through the Lindell cut-off, which crosses Olive street at

A THREE-TIME AD COSTS LESS, PRODUCES MORE. PROMPTLY REPORT FAILURE TO RECEIVE RESULTS.

$40,000 PAID FOR N. W. CORNER OF OLIVE AND 23D

Frank Dallavalle Purchaser of Property — Price on Basis of $400 a Foot for Olive Street Frontage.

WIDENING PROJECT CONSIDERED ASSET

Many Transactions Reported Considered in This District on Theory Improvement Will Boost Values.

By Berry Moore.

Another important Olive street corner changed ownership yesterday, the second within a week, with the purchase by Frank Dallavalle of the northwest corner of Olive and Twenty-third street from Robert Dulla, an officer of the American Tobacco Company of New York. The transaction was made by John S. Hicke & Bro. Real Estate Co., in connection with the Mercantile Trust Company. The consideration was $40,000.

The site has 100 feet on Olive street by 107 feet 4 inches on Twenty-third street, and is occupied by old buildings. The price paid was on a basis of $400 a foot for the Olive street frontage.

The corner was acquired as a speculative investment and eventually is to be improved with a modern business block, it is understood. Meantime, the buildings will be occupied by shops, for which they will be altered.

The purchase was made upon the supposition that the widening of Olive street, as provided for under the bond issue, would result in the complete rehabilitation of this section of the thoroughfare, which has been in a state of deterioration.

Forecast Higher Prices Soon.

As was told in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the Laclede Trust Company has conducted negotiations for the Garneau Hotel Block, at the northwest corner of Jefferson avenue and Olive street. The site has 75 feet on Olive street by 109 feet on Jefferson avenue, and is owned by the McBride estate. The transaction is being handled by Barngrove & Specht, acting for the Laclede Trust Company, in connection with the Mercantile Trust Company, representing the McBride estate.

While no announcement has been made, it is understood the purchaser contemplates, in the course of time, to replace the present hotel building with a large business structure.

Many speculative propositions are working on the north side of Olive street in this district, on the theory that higher prices soon will prevail for property in view of the proposed conversion of the thoroughfare, which virtually will give it the status of a boulevard.

The thoroughfare is to be widened to 100 feet from the present width. The cost is estimated at $2,000,000 and the city's share, placed at $600,000, will be paid from the $8,650,000 bond issue. The remainder of the cost will be assessed against abutting property and other property deemed benefited.

40 Feet From South Side.

Under the present plan, 40 feet will be taken from the property on the south side of the street, with a few exceptions, where there is a slight bend in the street. This will leave a depth of about 70 feet for building lots from which land is to be taken for the widening, according to city engineers.

The Olive street widening will link up with the proposed widening of Lindell boulevard, Channing to Grand, another bond issue project. It is planned to widen this short section of Lindell boulevard to 100 feet at an estimated cost of $80,000. The city's share, estimated at $80,000, will be paid from the bond issue.

Approximately 200 pieces of property and 70 defendants are involved in the Olive street condemnation proceedings.

The Olive street widening will provide another east-and-west traffic artery and release some of the congestion on Washington avenue, Locust, Pine and Chestnut streets. It will absorb some of the heavy eastbound traffic that is thrown into Locust street through the Lindell cut-off, which crosses Olive street at Channing, to connect Locust and Lindell boulevard.

Apparently there is an abundant supply of capital available for apartment building operations, which are attractive from an investment as well as speculative considerations, as shown from reports of the Cornet & Zelbig Trust, the Federer-Arendes Realty Co., the Wagner-Grant-Bell Realty Co., the Dyas-Schelp Realty Co., Edward L. Bakewell, J. I. Epstein, the Franciscus Realty Co. and the Dougherty Real Estate Co.

The Cornet & Zeibig Trust yesterday announced the sale of a 15-suite building at the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Russell avenue for James R. and Mary Ginn to James C. Keough, for around $190,000.

The building has six suites of six rooms, six suites of four rooms and three suites of five rooms each, and occupies a lot 112 by 130 feet. The annual rental of this building is $16,200.

Sale of the Katherine Apartments, 4432 Washington boulevard, by Henry Albermissen to Charles Hertenstein, chairman of the City Efficiency Board, and John Kratz, president of the National Loan and Investment Co., for $300,000, was announced by the Federer-Arendes Realty Co.

The building includes 60 apartments of the efficiency type, and 28 garages are available for tenants. Rentals on the property are $59,000 a year, and it was stated Hertenstein and Kratz purchased the property as an investment. The lot fronts 108 feet on Washington boulevard, with a depth of 243 feet.

The Federer-Arendes company also announced the sale of the Washington Apartments, 4271 Washington boulevard, to a client of the Kempland-Rodemeyer Realty Co., whose name was not disclosed, for $150,000. The building contains 24 furnished apartments, with a total annual rental of $22,000.

The working plans of the new Town Club building are now nearing completion by Mauran, Russell and Crowell, architects, and bids for construction soon will be asked for. The new structure is somewhat Georgian in style of architecture. It will be on the south side of Locust street between Eleventh and Twelfth streets. The Town Club is now in the Century Building, Ninth and Olive streets. The lot on which the club building is to be erected is 45 by 106½ feet and adjoins the premises of the Trorlicht-Duncker Carpet Co. The main floor will contain two stores, the second floor will be given over to three shops, two fronting on Locust street and one in the rear separated from the others by a spacious lobby. The third floor will be taken up with a living room, the fourth with a cafeteria, the fifth with a dining room and the sixth with committee rooms. An assembly hall will be on the seventh floor.

NEW BUSSES ON EXHIBITION AT GRAND-DOVER PARK

Company Which Will Operate Conveyances Here, Arranges for Terminus Site Near This Subdivision.

The Federer-Arendes Realty Co. announces that the United States Transit Corporation, who will operate the new bus service in St. Louis will have on exhibition in Grand-Dover Park subdivision several of the new busses of the new omnibus type, which are to be operated in St. Louis. These busses are similar to the ones operated on Fifth avenue in New York, and in Cleveland, Detroit and other Eastern cities.

The bus company has made arrangements for the purchase of a site close to Grand-Dover Park and which will be the southern terminus of the line. The company will give transfers to the east and west lines to the central part of town.

The Federer-Arendes Realty Co. reports an active week in Grand-Dover Park, sales of lots having exceeded $50,000. Ground has been broken for three bungalows and sewer work will be started within a week.

The company also announces the opening of the property known as Bates-Ulena Heights, adjoining the lots west of Grand-Dover Park No. 2 for home builders.

MOORLANDS PARK IMPROVEMENT RAPIDLY NEARING COMPLETION

Work Likely to Be Finished When Homes Under Construction Are Ready for Occupancy.

Rapid progress has been made in the improvement of Moorlands Park, and it is expected that all the work will be completed by the time the homes now under construction are finished, according to Shaw & Francis, special agents for "The Moorlands," working through the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co.

In a large part of Moorlands Park all improvements already are in. Ninety-five per cent of the sewers are in, and the street paving is progressing rapidly, the paving of Claytonia terrace from Wydown boulevard to Clayton road, one of the principal boulevards through the Moorlands, having been completed last week.

The $35,000 home of Wesley M. Bochman of the firm of Preston J. Bradshaw, architects, is nearing completion. Contracts were let last week to Henry Dilschneider, contractor, for the erection of two homes for H. A. Dailey of the H. A. Dailey Construction Co. The homes will cost $20,000 each. There are now 15 homes under construction in "The Moorlands."

INTEREST BEING DISPLAYED IN GRAVOIS HOMESITES NO. 3

Judging from the number of lots sold in Gravois Homesites No. 3, at 7200 Gravois avenue, during the week, the addition apparently has been well received. The interest displayed indicates that the property will not remain on the market long. The tract has all the improvements, including sewers, gas, water and sidewalks, and is being offered in 50-foot lots on liberal terms. It is in a rapidly developing part of the city. It is being handled by the Julius Haller Realty Co. and is reached by the Cherokee cars.

TITLE GUARANTY CO. ABSORBS HUNSCHE-BUDER COMPANY

An important development of the week was the absorption by the Title Guaranty Trust Co., of the Hunsche-Buder Land and Title Co. The Title Guaranty Trust Co., which is capitalized for $1,000,000 when it was formed 15 or more years ago, took over, with two or three exceptions, all the important title investigating concerns of the city.

Mark Anderson, president of the company, stated that the growth of the company's business was on such a scale as to warrant the additional facilities offered by the Hunsche-Buder company's plant.

The business of the consolidated firm will be conducted at the offices of the Title Guaranty Co. at 810 Chestnut street. The plant of the Hunsche-Buder company, at 12 North Eighth street, will, however, be retained by the Title Guaranty Co.

The Title Guaranty Co. recently purchased the new six-story fireproof building at 810 Chestnut street, which it will occupy in the near future.

WESTMOOR

PRICES ARE LOW

Because

Building Costs Are High

When building costs come down there will be a rush of builders seeking DESIRABLE vacant home sites. Vacant property will therefore increase in price in proportion to the demand. The lower building costs come down, the greater will be the number of new homes erected—the more homes erected the higher up will go the price of vacant home sites.

And All Included in the Modest Price

In the price of Majestic homes there is included the joy and thrill that can come only to the wife who after a lifetime of hope, has at last had her dreams come true in the possession of a perfect home. There is included the pride of the husband whose life aim it has been provide a home that creates envy in his fellows. There is the happiness that was intended to be enjoyed only by those who wisely shape their lives and circumstances so they can make the true American home. There is the delight, day after day, for years and years of rising each morning to find a new pleasure in setting such a home in order. There is the glee of children who can say "Our home" and know what that means. There is the pleasure of the proud daughter in having a place of refinement in which to entertain the suitor and likewise the pleasure of the son who can give his home address to his friends without chagrin. Then, there is the combined satisfaction of the whole family as they entertain relatives and friends down through the years and added to this there is a whole lifetime of substantiality and better citizenship that home ownership is sure to make. And there is the out-of-doors, the all sky area, that does not hide a single star or mix germs and impurities in the air. There is the large lot, over 5000 square feet, wonderful room for play upon which Majestic homes are built, the wide, perfectly improved street just like a boulevard in the park.

Yes, all of the above and more are included in the price of Majestic homes. There is the care and thought and judgment made complete by years of experience in designing and building homes; there is the watchfulness and determination of a well-trained organization to see that everything measures up to the expectations of home lovers; there are the best materials the market affords for building good homes properly erected by conscientious workmen. A Good Time to Start in a Business of Your Own

A great merchant recently said:

"I started selling in the worst business years ever known in this country and I made money, even then.

"I selected a business that handled necessities rather than luxuries—

"Necessities that could be sold cheaply; because that sort of merchandise sells in fair weather or foul. Hard times don't hurt it much."

While other businesses were losing ground in 1921, Variety Stores made money—many of them showing gains over the previous year.

They can sell more for a nickel or a dime than can other stores because of their economy of operation and quick turn-over.

In such a business, however, the matter of location is important.

We know of many excellent locations in different parts of the country where Variety Stores can be started on a reasonably small capital and operated successfully from the very start.

Being the originators of the Variety business; we have helped thousands of men and women to a successful start in selling variety goods at retail.

And in helping others we have gained a vast fund of information which we are glad to pass on to those who wish to enter this great and fertile field.

If you have $2500 to $6000, and the ambition to establish a successful business of your own, we shall be glad to outline our complete plan whereby we help you attain this ambition.

A visit to our nearest house or an inquiry by letter, telling about yourself, will be treated in strict confidence and will place you under no obligation whatever.

X. Y. Z.—You can compel the landlord downstairs to let you take your furniture out the same way he or you bring it in, that is, through his front door, or, under these circumstances, you could take it out through the window.

JOLTED—As you signed the contract you are under legal duty to promptly compel you to pay the full amount. However, if they refuse to compromise and sue you for the full amount, consult the Free Legal Aid Breau, Municipal Courts Building.

F. T. H—The wife would be entitled to the custody of the children, if she has not been at fault herself, as he has mistreated her and not supporting either of the two children with the exception of what he sues, she should consult a lawyer.

H. W. W—A minority stockholder would not be entitled to demand a list of customers and their addresses or a copy of monthly statements of the accounts, unless the circumstances were unusual or unless he was being defrauded by the management of the company.

H. H.—In our opinion the notice which you served upon him was not legal, even though he refused to accept it. If you have to sue him you will, of course, have to prove that you gave him effective notice and that he refused to accept it, and that you could not get access to his home to serve him or his wife personally.

F. M.—For about a year past the blind pensions have not been paid. We understand that the payment will be resumed probably in June or July. The 1923 legislature passed a blind pension law imposing new tests for blindness which in general are more strict than were the tests under the old law. You can obtain full information at the office of the Missouri Association for the Blind, in the Metropolitan Building, Grand and Olive.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

B. J.—There are perhaps physicians in the city who are using the method you mention, but we do not know who they are.

MRS. M.—We do not publish in this column the names of dealers. See the classified list of dealers in the telephone book or city directory under "Medical Books."

CURIOUS.—We believe the electrolytic method is the only dependable method of removing hair permanently. This work is done by most dermatologists, and also in many of the beauty parlors.

MRS. P. B. C.—Any functional disturbance may cause dreams. We believe that the Barnes Hospital sanitorium, clinic, and Scott and Euclid, would be the best place for you to apply.

A. W.—There is no vaccine or serum for bronchial asthma, but there might be some complications which suggest such vaccine or serum. Unless all the details of the case are known, we could not give an opinion as to the treatment.

POST-DISPATCH READER.—Change of life occurs in some women with no disturbance, in some, with mild disturbance, and in others with violent disturbance. Generally speaking, women are nervous. If no disturbance occurs, no treatment is necessary.

JENNIE I.—1. Styes are miniature boils, and are caused by pus infection. 2. You should be examined as to the discharge mentioned. It is not normal. For treatment for the condition of the feet you describe, bathe the feet in water as hot as it can be borne. Keep the water hot by the addition of hot water in which a cake of common laundry soap is placed. Bathe the feet for 20 minutes to half an hour; dry them, and powder with talcum powder. Keep the inside of the shoes dusted with talcum powder.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and express our appreciation to our relatives, friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown us during our sad hour of bereavement in the loss of our beloved son and brother, Carl G. Haeussermann. We wish to especially thank the Rev. Paul Press for his words of consolation and condolence, the Friedens Quartet and organist and the North St. Louis Bundeschor for the splendid song service rendered; the pallbearers for the kind service rendered; Math. Hermann & Sons, funeral directors, for their prompt, efficient and courteous attention, and for the many remembrances expressed through the beautiful floral offerings.

WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In memory of our darling mother, Mrs. Delia Kincir, who departed this life May 16, 1922.

She bade no one a last farewell.
She said goodby to none.
Her loving heart has ceased to beat.
And before we knew it she was gone.
And when we called mother,
We lost our dearest pal.
And now we miss you.
And forever shall.

Sadly missed by her children and all who loved her.

In loving memory of our dear husband, son and brother, Alphonse L. Vogel, who died one year ago, May 20, 1922.

You are gone but not forgotten.
Nor shall you ever be.
As long as life and memory last
We shall remember thee.
If we had seen you at the last
And held your dying hand
And heard the last sigh from your heart
We would not feel so sad.
We did not know the pain you had;
We did not see you die.
We only know you went away
And never said goodby.

Sadly missed by

YOUR WIFE, URSULA, MOTHER, BROTHERS AND SISTERS AND ALL WHO KNEW YOU.

FRANKLIN

Why Re-Conditioned Franklins Offer You More Value for Your Money

Many Franklin owners drive their cars five, six and even ten years.

Some others trade in their Franklins every year or two.

The cars which are traded in after one, two or three years use, possess the same performance qualities and durability as the ones which remain in the hands of original owners for long periods. They have all the unusual characteristics which have made the Franklin famous — air-cooling, which eliminates all radiator trouble, comfort in riding, ease of handling and roadability which is unequaled. They are capable of rendering TO SOMEONE a most satisfactory service for years to come.

They possess the economy in operation for which Franklin cars are noted—big mileage on gasoline and tires.

The used Franklins which we trade in are put in first-class condition in our shops. The purchaser of a used Franklin receives the same attention and courtesy and service from us that is accorded the buyer of a new car.

We have for sale tthese models just out of our shop:

3	SEDANS 1921 Sedans. Reconditioned, repainted. guaranteed. Real bargains.	4	BROUGHAMS Broughams, 4-passengers. Repainted and reconditioned. Guaranteed. Looks like new.
3	TOURINGS 1921 Tourings. Wonderful road cars. First class in all details.	1	ROADSTER 1920 4-pass Roadster. Repainted. Engine completely overhauled.
1	SEDAN 1920 Sedan. Repainted. rebuilt. Looks like new.	1	TOURING 1921 Touring. Has California top. Used very little. Priced right.

JUDGE DYER URGES RUM CASES IN STATE COURTS

Replying to Critics, He Declares More Severe Penalties Are Required.

Chafing under criticism of Gus O. Nations and George Bausewine, Federal prohibition enforcement agents in charge of squads here, that his light fines for liquor offenders are making it easier to get drinks in St. Louis saloons, Federal Judge Dyer set forth from the bench yesterday the measures he thinks necessary to enforce prohibition.

He said an enforcement law should be passed imposing severe penalties, without the alternative of a fine, and that trial of violators should be passed to state courts.

Judge Dyer, who is 85 years old, has been sitting for Judge Faris since last Monday and has adopted a policy of assessing light fines for pleas of guilty—a measure he has defended as necessary to clear up the court docket.

"The State Legislature has passed a liquor law, effective in June, which is even more drastic than the Federal law," Judge Dyer said. "The State should take jurisdiction in these cases. There are no better Judges anywhere than in St. Louis County. In McElhinney and Wurdeman, the county has honest, able and efficient Judges, yet all the liquor cases from St. Louis County come to this court.

"You will never break up this whisky business until penalties are provided by law and inflicted. You will never break it up by leaving to the discretion of a Judge to impose a fine.

"There were 500 cases on this docket. If imprisonment was staring each of these defendants in the face, how many do you think would plead guilty? None. Yet there are a lot of wiseacres and boys who part their hair in the middle who have taken it upon themselves to criticise this court's attempt to clear up this docket. I make this statement knowing exactly what I am saying. Every man has the right to demand a trial. If all these defendants in liquor cases should do so, this court could not try them in five years and the condition is steadily growing worse. There is no reason why the State court should not have the burden of prosecutions.

"This whole thing is in an unsettled state. Here we have the New York Legislature repealing the liquor law of the State. The Governor has not yet signed or vetoed the repeal. He is undecided. There are others undecided about this matter. That is the condition confronting us."

Opposes Masquerading Agents.

Resuming the docket, the Judge fined 24 men who pleaded guilty $100 each, six $200, one $250, one $300, one $350, one $500 and one $700. He fined a widow $200.

It was pleaded in her behalf that she was the mother of eight children. The Judge brushed that away, declaring she should set her children a better example in law obedience.

One of the men fined was trapped by Federal agents disguised as coal wagon drivers. The Judge remarked in this connection:

"I do not approve of fraud in any form, shape or fashion, either by the Government or an individual. The most despicable man on earth in my judgment is the deliberate liar. These men were cast in that role. However, this man has pleaded guilty and it is my duty to impose a penalty. I fine him $200."

SCHOOL FIRE ORPHANS ARE TO BE EDUCATED

South Carolina Community Raising Funds to Provide for All the Destitute.

By the Associated Press.

CAMDEN, S. C., May 19.—Still dazed by the tragedy of Thursday night in which 75 persons lost their lives in the fire at Cleveland graded school, eight miles from here, the Cleveland school and Camden communities and Kershaw County are preparing, with acute realization of the extent of the tragedy, to care in every way for those left dependent by the fire.

This afternoon the funerals of the last of the dead were held at the Beulah Church and at Antioch, and this evening the relief fund being collected by the Chamber of Commerce of Camden, and by Karshaw County, had mounted to more than $5000 with committees appointed to supervise further collection disbursements.

A plan for a fund to insure the education of the children left motherless and fatherless is being worked out. Work on farms where the head of the family perished will be supervised and aided by men designated or employed, out of the fund by the Chamber of Commerce.

The ruins of the litle frame schoolhouse were combed thoroughly today in search of possible additional bodies, but none was found. The total of 75 dead is authentic, according to undertakers, clergymen and relatives who assisted in identifying the bodies as far as possible and in checking up on all who were reported to have attended the commencement exercises.

"SKY WRITING" AIRPLANE DOES STUNT ABOVE CITY

Two Words Advertising a Cigarette Done in Smoke Through Patented Formula.

An airplane, piloted by Derek Shepperson, said to be a former Captain in the British Air Service, gave a demonstration of "sky writing" over the city yesterday afternoon, beginning at 4:50 o'clock.

A special lubricating mixture caused smoke to be shot in a steady stream from the exhaust, and Shepperson, by evolutions of the plane, caused the smoke to form the words "Lucky Strike," an advertisement for a brand of cigarettes. It is said that the preparation in the mixture which causes the letters to remain in form for several minutes is a patented formula.

Shepperson's airplane was scarcely visible to the eye and was traceable at times only by the smoke. It appeared that he started to write the two words west of Grand avenue and that he did not complete them until he had crossed the river.

It was said that, usually, the pilot is at an altitude of from 10,000 to 12,000 feet when he writes and that the letters are nearly a mile high and the two words stretch out for approximately five miles.

Sheppjerson flew from Chicago earlier in the day, pausing over Peoria and Springfield to do his writing stunt.

BROCKMAN SUED FOR $200,000 BY WOMAN

Former Employe of Auto Company Charges She Was Arrested Without Cause.

A suit for $200,000 damages was filed yesterday in the Circuit Court by Mrs. Maybelle Marshall of Jackson, Tenn., growing out of her arrest last October on a charge of drawing a check for $28.05 with intent to defraud Philip Brockman, president of the Board of Police Commissioners. The charge against her was dropped.

Besides Brockman other defendants named in the suit are the De Luxe Automobile Co., of which he is president; the Oldsmobile Distributing Co., and its Memphis, Tenn., manager, Noble S. Bruce; Otto F. Karbe, who is Brockman's lawyer, and "John Doe" and "Richard Roe," unknown alleged fellow conspirators with other defendants in unlawfully causing the arrest of Mrs. Marshall.

Relates Experience.

The petition recites that Mrs. Marshall is poor, but defendants are worth in the aggregate of $1,000,000, "which is distributed in substantially equal portions among all of the defendants other than Doe and Roe." Brockman is alleged to own securities valued at $250,000 which he keeps in a safe deposit box at the American Trust Co. So that the plaintiff may not be deprived of the fruits of any judgment she may recover she asks that he be enjoined from withdrawing the securities from the trust company or from concealing or secreting them.

Mrs. Marshall alleges she was arrested at Omaha, Neb., Oct. 20 and "thrown into a dark, desolate and dreary cavern of steel, where every instinct of her femininity was outraged and tortured by the unutterable obscenity of the vilest and most degraded caricatures of humanity." She was brought to St. Louis Oct. 25 and at the Central District Police Station, at Brockman's direction, it is alleged, was placed in the line-up of prisoners for inspection by police, being made to walk fast before them and to take down her hair; further, she was photographed for the rogues' gallery and her finger prints were taken, and she was subjected to so-called third degree methods by the police, who plied her with numerous questions.

Thereafter Brockman, it is alleged, caused her to be locked up and confined until Nov. 1.

She avers that her experience caused her to be humiliated and disgraced among her friends and she thereby lost her employment and became unable to obtain other employment; also she was caused to suffer mental and bodily injuries consisting of severe headaches, insomnia, nervousness, and impairment of her digestive organs, whereby her health and mental and bodily activity are permanently injured.

Was Former Employee.

Both the defendant companies are sales agencies of the Oldsmobile motor car. It appears from the suit that Mrs. Marshall was employed last August to sell Oldsmobile cars in Tennessee. The company, she alleges, breached its agreement with her and she discontinued her employment on Oct. 1. She says the alleged conspiracy against her arose from a notice she published in newspapers giving her reason for quitting the company. She gave defendants a chance to carry out the plan, she says, when she in good faith got Brockman to cash two drafts on a bank at Jackson, which would have been honored, she avers, if the Oldsmobile Distributing Corporation had sent to her bank money which it had promised to send there but which it failed to do.

Attorney Felix Cornitus, who is associated with Otto Karbe, one of the defendants, speaking for Brockman yesterday, denies the existence of any conspiracy to injure Mrs. Marshall. He said she issued the checks for a total of $70 in payment for repairs on her automobile and that the checks were returned on account of insufficient funds. Out of pity he did not continue the prosecution of her, he said. Brockman characterized as ridiculous an allegation in the woman's suit that he used his office as President of the Police Board to prosecute her.

Business Maxims Of America's Greatest Merchant

John Wanamaker, creator of the modern department store, had a keen insight into the practical philosophy of life—Used snappy proverbs in his advertising and circulated them among his employes—Was a great believer in the capabilities and intuition of women in business—As a self-made man he saw life's possibilities for ambitious boys of humble origin :: :: :: :: ::

JOHN WANAMAKER, who probably did more than any one man to make the department store an American institution, found time in his long and busy life, which ended Dec. 12, last, to write and promulgate many business maxims, some of which he used in advertisements, though the greater number was circulated among his employes for their enlightenment and uplift.

The best of these have been gathered into a book by Russell H. Conwell, his lifelong friend, and published by Harper & Brothers. Here are some selections from them:

VERY few pleasures are let on long leases.

Any man that is afraid of being supplanted ought to be supplanted.

Taking care of a small sum, saved week by week, has been in thousands of cases the foundation of a large fortune.

Moderate profits will not make money quickly, but long experience proves that it is much the best way to make money surely.

To think hard and quickly, see the core of a subject, seize it and base action upon it, is the secret of successfulness.

If brains constitute qualification for a business man, why not equally so for a woman, who often surpasses a man in her intuitions and efforts?

It is not the leap at the start, but the steady going on, that gets there.

Just to drive ahead, not knowing where we will come out, is a species of senility, no matter how old or how young we are.

Almost every man, unless he mistakes his abilities and choice of a calling, has enough sap in his young manhood to give him a good start.

Money is only metal, if mentality is not back of it.

Many of the men who thought themselves sharper than other men, and able to take a short cut to success, were oftener deceived than otherwise, and came back with chalk on their backs instead of cheese in their tubs.

No honest person is down so far that he needs to stay there, unless satisfied and content with his condition.

As a general thing it is the quiet people who do the most thinking and perform the most good work.

Hurry is the child of unpunctuality, procrastination and irritability.

Most people who fail only work half-time, take too many holidays and are quitters.

There are two freedoms—the first is where a man is free to do what he likes; the other where a man is free to do what he ought.

Having an old horseshoe for luck is not equal to lifetime savings for your daughter's dowry.

Responsibility gravitates toward persons who know most.

Time is money with a big IS.

Long study of men and women and wide observation justify the statement that the majority of people are not fully awake. We live superficially, half-heartedly. Many of us fail to rub the eyes of our souls open to get thoroughly awakened.

Many persons have an idea that one cannot be in business and lead an upright life, whereas the truth is that no one succeeds in business to any great extent who misleads or misrepresents.

Work seldom kills a man, but worry does it. Worry is the rust that spoils the knife-blade.

There are no locks on the door of wisdom, knowledge, honest enterprise and opportunity.

Wealth can no more be created safely and permanently held, by the mere shuffling of securities than character can be created by shuffling cards.

Life has no rehearsal days in it. Each day must be filled up with its appointed work.

A little more effort on the part of everybody to make times better, and better times will surely come along.

It is good to have a systematic way of doing things, but it is more important to be sure that you do them.

If the past 100 years has done nothing to ameliorate war, it has done much to civilize commerce.

A man often lives best in his sons that follow him and do better than he has done.

A misplaced light on the shore has led to many a shipwreck. It is equally fatal to a storekeeper if his advertising chief handles a light that misleads.

Nobody ever works well whose salary is reduced.

It is better to wear patched shoes and pay as you go than to be in debt, wearing patent leathers and silken gowns.

Lincoln refused to play politics, but now it is politics to play Lincoln.

It is a tremendous thing to live. Dying is next to nothing.

Tell your story and quit!

Ever Hear How Man Got His Shoes?

By Dr. Edwin E. Slosson.

ACCORDING to the Oriental tale, all men went barefoot in the old days, for they knew nothing of shoes. The soles of the people were hardened to walk upon the ground, but the King's feet were tender, for wherever he walked carpets were spread before him. This arrangement was considered mutually satisfactory, or, rather, was not considered at all, being regarded as natural and therefore inevitable. But one day a new bride was brought to the King, the loveliest lady in all the land, and a long string of carpet was laid from the palace steps to the highway, so that the King could go forth to meet her. As evidence of the truth of the tale you may still see such a carpet laid in front of a building where there is a wedding.

As the bridal cortege approached, the King marched majestically down the carpeted pathway to the end where he was to await his prospective bride. But when he caught sight of her riding on her palfrey he found her more beautiful than his courtiers had said she was (this is the only incredible thing in the story) and, carried away by passion, rushed forward to greet her.

But just as soon as the tenderfoot King stepped on the ground his soft sole was cut by a sharp-edged flint, so when the Princess first saw her royal bridegroom he was holding one foot in the hand and howling.

The King, feeling doubly sore from the wound and the humiliation, at once called together the wise men and the soothsayers and astrologers and ordered them, under pain of beheading, to devise means of carpeting the whole earth, so that wherever he trod no such accident should ever happen again. The official board of experts flunked this intelligence test, as usual. I mean, as usual in Oriental tales. They first scratched their heads and then shook them and were likely in the end to lose them. They figured out that there was not enough material of any sort to cover the whole earth and reported to the King that his demand was mathematically impossible.

But the King was inexorable and gave them 24 hours to solve the problem. At the twenty-third hour the situation was saved by a poor maker of leather aprons, who appeared before the King and, kneeling at his feet, put on them two queer-looking contraptions. Then he asked the King to walk out upon the highway and the fields and see if the earth was not carpeted wherever he walked.

The King tried it and found that it was as he had been told. Overjoyed at this happy solution of the difficulty he offered the poor leather worker half of his kingdom and his daughter in marriage. But the leather worker declined both with thanks and asked instead that he be allowed to extend the benefits of his new invention to all the people. The King generously granted his request and issued an edict that everybody should be shod with the new pedal protectors.

I understand that the inventor made a fortune out of it, since he had a monopoly of the business. But that does not matter now, for he died some years later, leaving all his money behind him, and the people got their shoes and have been wearing them ever since.

So we see that governmental interference, however arbitrary, and individual initiative, however mercenary, may sometimes work together for the good of all. If shoes did not get their start this way, various other things did, and at any rate it illustrates the way allied science softens the asperities of the earth and protects humanity from injury. Man is a featherless, furless, hoofless biped, exposed to all weathers and wounds. Yet he has managed to make himself fairly comfortable in all climates and feared by the most formidable of beasts. Climate is forever beyond his control, yet the cave-man of the Mediterranean was, by the invention of fire, enabled to follow the edge of the ice sheet as it retreated at the end of the Glacial epoch and inhabit the northern region. Man makes a local climate in his home or factory, as warm or cool, as dry or humid, as he likes, wherever he may live.

The alteration of night and day are unalterable, yet man has rearranged the periods of light and dark to suit his activities or accommodate his pleasures. From the beginning man had the power to make it night whenever he wished by simply shutting his eyes, but he has only recently acquired the art of making it day when he wants to by simply pressing a white button.

Born devoid of protective integument, man has made for himself artificial skins which he can change with fashion and

NEW COMMANDMENTS FOR HUSBANDS AND WIVES

Thousands of reports on causes of domestic trouble have been made basis of an official set of rules devised to make all homes divorce proof—Co-operation is the keynote and the game of married life is regarded as a jackpot—Interesting discussion of these latest rules by noted woman novelist and playwright—Jealousy and its remedy

"Do not interfere with your wife's domestic arrangements."

MRS. LEWIS B. WOODRUFF.

IS THE marriage millennium at hand?

Visions of a time when all the divorce lawyers will shut up shop and Reno will lose its chief attraction are called up by the latest effort to make the gentle art of being married an exact science.

The Legal Aid Society of New York has just issued a volume of great moment entitled "A Decalogue for the Married." If it doesn't settle all domestic troubles it may at least pave the way to their settlement. The society has had many years of broad and deep experience and has gathered thousands of reports on the causes of domestic difficulties. It has analyzed these and cogitated over them and now it has set to work to bring something constructive out of its melting pot of experience. There are two sets of 10 commandments, one for husbands and the other for wives.

Mrs. Lewis B. Woodruff of New York discussed the Decalogues the other day, over the teacups. If anybody has a right to do so, it ought to be Mrs. Woodruff. She is a novelist, a playwright and a successful wife of a good many years' standing. She has both experience and observation as a basis of criticism. Incidentally (she would consider it incidental) she is ranked by many artists as one of the most beautiful women in America—perhaps the most beautiful of her particular type. She has been called "a Dresden china doll with an intellect."

She read the first commandments, which concern the ever-delicate topic of filthy lucre. To the man: "Be generous according to your means. A woman rightly expects liberal support from her husband. She is duly considerate of sincere effort and tolerant of misfortune, but she differentiates sharply between ill fortune and inertia."

And to the woman:

"Do not be extravagant. Upon the proper and careful expenditure of your husband's income depends his willingness to exert himself for the maintenance of your home. Nothing appeals more strongly to a man than the prospect of acquiring that independence of which a bank account is the guarantee."

Mrs. Woodruff sighed and nibbled a cake meditatively. "Dear me! That's only the beginning of what might be said about that old bogie, Money, isn't it? I suppose those rules are good as far as they go, but somehow they don't seem to me to get at the partnership idea, which is the one sound basis. That phrase 'be generous' suggests the attitude of giver and recipient. I believe that, in matters of money, every married couple should share to the full. No matter how the money comes to them—usually it is by his earnings, but it may be by hers, or it may be the inheritance of either—but without regard to the source, it should all be theirs.

"It should be a jackpot. And I see no reason why the woman shouldn't work to earn, if she enjoys doing so and there are no children to be neglected. Share in production; share in consumption. When a man sits at home and looks highbrow, while his wife runs a gift shop to support the two of them, there's a failure to share in the former; and when he goes all winter in his spring overcoat because she must have a new gown for bridge, there's a failure to share in the latter. Of course, if she is occupied with motherhood, the father will be the one to earn; but that needn't alter the sense of partnership."

Next comes the house. To the man: "Do not interfere with a woman in the management of purely domestic affairs. The average wife is far better qualified than her husband to plan for home comfort and to handle economically that portion of his income set aside for household expenses."

And to the woman: "Keep your home clean. Nothing is more refreshing to the eyes of the tired, nerve-racked worker than the sight of a well-tidied home."

"The latter is obviously true, but I'd like to add a footnote to the former," Mrs. Woodruff observed.

"All the money should be put into a jackpot."

Mrs. Woodruff Says:

CONCERNING JEALOUSY: Suspicion begets its own cause.

CONCERNING MARRIED LOVE-MAKING: Pals are better than sweethearts.

CONCERNING PERSONAL APPEARANCE: Why should a wife attend to her husband's wardrobe if he won't attend to hers?

CONCERNING THE HOUSE: If a man dislikes a blue living room as much as his wife dislikes a red, he has a right to say so.

CONCERNING THE INDEPENDENT HOME: Among the birds you don't find two mating couples in one tree. Let a young couple get away from "helpful" neighbors and parents.

CONCERNING CHILDREN: If a father has to punish his children when he gets home, it may be because the mother had indulged and mollycoddled them all day.

CONCERNING MONEY: There should be no giver and recipient in marriage. No matter what the source, husband and wife should share in full partnership all that they both possess.

CONCERNING MOODS: The man who lets his wife become a domestic slave need not blame her when she is irritable and depressed. But the woman who shows more interest in bridge than in her husband can thank herself when he loses interest in her.

"Be cheerful, though it tax you to the utmost."

Return of the Illinois Farmer Who Died

Private Thomas J. Hazelwood of the American expedition to Siberia knows how it feels to be "executed" by Bolshevists—Captured six days after he reached Russia, he spent 18 months in prison, for 15 months under sentence of death and expecting every day to be taken out and shot—Once they did shoot him, he says, but it was only a "low-down trick"—Incidentally he heard Alexander Berkman and Emma Goldman tell what they thought of America

"I stood there and heard the man behind me cock his revolver. Click-click!"

TOM HAZELWOOD got back home the other day. Home is a farm near Roodhouse, Ill., where he was born and reared. He worked there, living the simple life, until he enlisted at Jefferson Barracks in the regular army of the United States, in July, 1917. Since then Private Thomas J. Hazelwood has had experiences complex enough to satisfy the imaginings of the wildest romanticist. There is a belief, held by some persons, that such stories don't happen save in fiction. The story of Tom Hazelwood of Roodhouse is a part of the official records of three Governments—the republic of the United States, the British Empire and the regime of bolshevist Russia.

Many years ago Hamlin Garland wrote a story entitled "The Return of the Private." It had to do with the homecoming of a Union soldier at the close of the Civil War. There was poignant pathos in the tale. In the present-day story of the return of Private Hazelwood there are both pathos and tragedy.

Tom Hazelwood is young, only 29, yet it may be said of him that, though he may not have lived a thousand lives, he has died a thousand deaths. To be shot down in the fierce rush of battle is to die one death. To die like that is simple and easy and merciful in comparison with the potential deaths suffered by Tom Hazelwood.

To be stood up in a prison basement, facing a blood-spattered wall, immediately after having heard read to one an order for one's execution; to hear the report of a firearm and to feel the sharp impact of a hot pellet against the back, and yet to survive—that is at least very near to being a death of another sort. To be put on trial for life every day for three months, then to hear a heartless Judge pronounce sentence of death; to be hustled back to prison, tossed into a cell infested with rats and mice and vermin, given only enough food, and that of a most loathsome vileness, to hold soul and body together; to lie upon a dirty rag on a stone floor night after night, expecting every time the guard's heavy tramp is heard in the corridor that the executioners are coming to carry out the death sentence; to be transferred from prison to prison, not knowing at each transfer but that the firing squad is waiting around the corner; to undergo experiences such as those for more than 15 months—well, if that isn't dying a thousand deaths, then what would you?

Tom Hazelwood underwent all those agonies, and more. Yet he came through alive, though by no means well; and he came home smiling and hopeful, to greet the wife he had not seen for nearly four years, to renew acquaintance with the 6-year-old son who was but 2 when daddy went away; and to see for the first time the baby daughter born after he left home, whose given name he did not know until he asked Mrs. Hazelwood who's who in the family.

As to Mrs. Hazelwood and the other kin around Roodhouse, for more than 15 months they never expected to see Tom again. He had been reported "missing," and as a member of the American expeditionary force in Siberia that meant that his chances of being alive were about one in 10,000. Very few of the soldiers in that expedition reported missing have turned up alive.

Private Hazelwood was taken prisoner by the bolsheviks Jan. 23, 1920. On May 29, 1921, the Post-Dispatch carried an Associated Press dispatch from Riga stating that "Corporal Hazelwood, formerly of the Siberian expedition, is imprisoned in Moscow and seriously affected mentally." That was all that was published about Hazelwood at the time, and the first news his family had had as to his fate. On Aug. 5 in that year he was released, thanks to Herbert Hoover, who demanded release of all American prisoners in Russia before releasing American supplies for the relief of famine sufferers in Russia.

"They raised my rank a notch in that dispatch," said Tom Hazelwood, when he was passing through St. Louis on his way home. "I was simply Private Hazelwood, Company C, Twenty-seventh Infantry."

The returned private gave no indication of mental derangement, though it is not to be disputed that his terrible experiences were calculated to upset his mind. He appeared bright and snappy. Physically he is a small man. Roughly and almost raggedly clad, he showed plainly the horrible maltreatment he had undergone. Not many weeks out of a British hospital, where he lay for a year and a half, slowly fighting back toward health, the young Illinois farmer said he weighed 145 pounds when he enlisted, and he thought he might weigh 125 now. This is his story, in part, as he told it to a writer for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine:

"I came down to Jefferson Barracks in July, 1917, and enlisted for the regular army, in the sixteenth company of recruits. I was assigned to service in the Twenty-seventh Division and sent to France late that year. Gen. John J. O'Ryan of New York was my division commander. I took part in the fighting at Chateau-Thierry and in other engagements toward the end of the World War. I returned to America and was mustered out; went home and saw my folks for a while, and then, Nov. 27, 1919, at Dallas, Tex., I re-enlisted.

"They had called for discharged soldiers to reenlist, as you know, for the expendition to Siberia. That was why I got back into the army. Company A, Siberian replacement, was my first designation. Then I became a member of Company C, Twenty-seventh Infantry. After a brief experience at Camp Travis I was sent to San Francisco, from which place I sailed for Vladivostok on the transport Sheridan, arriving there Jan. 17, 1920. Gen. William S. Graves was commander of the Siberian expedition.

"We were supposed to be in Siberia for the protection of American rights there, or the rights of Americans there. I didn't get to stay in active service long enough to find out what we really were sent over for. From Vladivostok my company went to Nikolaivsk, five hours' journey on the Transsiberian Railway. Jan. 23, just six days after I landed at Vladivostok, I was taken prisoner. That night I was on outpost duty. There were 24 men in the squad. Another 24 were sent out to relieve us, and just as they arrived we saw a lot of men coming our way. We supposed them to be friendly Russians, soldiers opposing the bolsheviks, as no forces of the Red army were supposed to be anywhere in the vicinity. So we let them approach. They surrounded us, raised a red flag and demanded that we surrender.

"We surrendered, being taken quite by surprise. Of the 48 of us, the bolshevist soldiers shot down all but six, after our surrender. Why they didn't kill the rest of us I never was able to find out. There were many times, later, when I wished they had. Those poor fellows who dropped there in the snow and stayed dead were a whole lot luckier than the six of us they didn't shoot.

"At first we were taken to Omsk, where we were chucked into a prison and kept for three weeks. Our cell was about 7 by 10 feet, intended for half a dozen men, but they crowded 15 into it. We slept on the floor. A few men had 'cots' made of three or four narrow planks nailed together, with a raised plank at one end for a pillow.

"Then we were transferred to Moscow for trial. I was put into prison there, along with a number of others. Next day I was told to strip off my clothes. I stripped down to my athletic underwear. They took me down to the basement of the big prison—a horrible place, lighted by one electric bulb. I saw, by its gleam, a sight that made me sick. Human blood was spattered on the walls. It appeared that the basement was the place where they killed the condemned prisoners.

"All of a sudden a priest appeared from behind a partition. He told me to prepare for death; that I was going to be executed at once.

" 'I'm not ashamed of anything I've done, father,' I said to the priest. 'I'm only a common American soldier, and haven't done anything but my duty as a soldier.'

" 'Confess!' said the priest; 'prepare to meet your God. Your last hour has come.'

"Then he sprinkled something—supposed to be holy water, I guess—over my head. In the meantime, another man, a red-guard soldier, had appeared from another point. He had a gun in one hand and a paper in another, a document. He held up the sheet and began reading. It was what they call over there a charge sheet. He read a long list of charges against me. According to that paper I had been convicted of being a spy, of giving information of the bolshevist army to the American army and to the Russians fighting against the bolsheviks.

a Thousand Deaths in Russian Prisons

"Shivering from the cold, I stood there nearly naked and heard what I thought, of course, was my doom. The guard took another paper from his pocket.

"'Here,' he said, roughly, 'sign this paper, and it will save your life.'

"'Read it to me,' I said. The paper, being in Russian, I could not read.

"'Sign your name here, or die!' cried the big guard.

"'What do you take me for?' I cried. 'Do you expect me to sign a paper when I don't know a word it contains? I'm not such a fool as that.'

"'Then die!' shouted the guard.

"'Turn your face to the wall,' the priest instructed.

"I did so. What was the use to resist? I was absolutely in their power. Fully expecting to be shot dead at once, I stood there and heard the man behind me cock his revolver. Click-click! It was all over with Tommy except the shooting, and that came right away, though it seemed to me an age before the fellow fired. I know now that he waited a while, possibly half a minute or so, just to give me a little longer thrill.

"When he fired, something hit me kerplop on my naked back. I had expected to be shot in the head. I had expected also that I'd be so dead I wouldn't know what hit me, but I wasn't. To my great surprise, I was very much alive.

"My back stung like the devil. I found out later that the pistol had been loaded with a cartridge containing a small charge of powder and two or three beans—just enough to give me a good scare. I got the good scare, all right—or, rather, a pretty bad scare. After I had time to think it all over, I concluded that those bolsheviks had played me a mighty low-down, dirty trick. They seemed to enjoy it, but I'm telling you I didn't.

"Well, after this unpleasant experience I was taken back up to my cell, put on my clothes, and a little later was hustled out to the soviet court for trial. I couldn't see where I had done anything to be tried for, but those fellows seemed to think I had. They must have thought I, Tom Hazelwood, private in the ranks, had come over to Siberia to upset the whole bolshevik business, which I didn't know a thing about. But I learned a lot about it, from then on, and I'm here to say that it's just about the vilest proposition ever.

"Every day for three months they marched me to court. The Judge plied me with questions. He couldn't talk English and I couldn't talk Russian, but they had an interpreter."

"What was the interpreter's name?" Hazelwood was asked.

"His name was Alexander Berkman," said the returned private, "and he said he was an American who had been deported for being an undesirable citizen."

THOMAS J. HAZELWOOD.

"Do you know who Berkman was?" the writer asked Hazelwood.

"I'd never heard of him," replied the Roodhouse farmer, "but I heard a lot of his talk and saw a lot of him while I was in prison. He tried to hit me that first day in court, when I didn't talk the way he wanted me to. Then the Judge called me 'an American swine,' reached down and hit me a clip here on my temple. You see, the scar's still there."

The scar was visible. Hazelwood then was told that Alexander Berkman was an anarchist who, about 30 years ago, shot and seriously wounded Henry C. Frick, Pittsburg capitalist, and served about 20 years in prison for the crime.

"Berkman was deported shortly before you met him," said the writer. "He and another notorious anarchist, Emma Goldman, were packed off to Russia together."

Here Tom Hazelwood's face lighted up. "Why," he said, "the Goldman woman was with him there. She had some business about the court and the prison. I saw her often. She could talk a blue streak, too."

"What did she talk about?"

"Chiefly about the glorious soviet government, and how America was to be sovietized. She said she liked America well enough, and was 'treated pretty fair,' but she didn't like America's cotton-headed Government. When at last I was released, she advised me to keep my mouth shut when I got back to the United States.

"'If you don't,' she told me, 'you'll regret it. We have agents all over the United States, and they'll do enough to you if you talk against the bolsheviks.' She said they had two special agents, named Foster and Ruthenberg, who were going to put over the new Russian idea and make the United States a bolshevist country soon. 'Then we'll all return to America,' said Miss Goldman."

Hazelwood then was informed that Charles E. Ruthenberg, a few days ago, had been convicted of syndicalism in Michigan and was facing 10 years in prison, while William Z. Foster, his associate, had been tried on the same charge and acquitted after the jury considered his case for 35 hours. Private Hazelwood was more than mildly interested. He had not read about the Michigan syndicalist cases; he had been too busy trying to get back home.

"Alexander Berkman," he went on to say, "told me, when at last the soviet Judge pronounced me guilty of being a spy and of doing various other things I'd never dreamed of, that he was sorry he could do nothing for me. I said to Berkman: 'You've lived in the United States, and you certainly know that a common private soldier like me has nothing to do with Government affairs and wouldn't come over to Russia to try to upset the Government here. This court has tried every day to get me to tell all about my Government and its intentions in Russia, and you ought to know that I know nothing about such things. You know the United States is a good country—they treated you well there, didn't they?'

"'Like hell they did!' Berkman retorted. 'They kept me in prison for 20 years, and then deported me.' Miss Goldman had a hard time to keep from laughing when Berkman said that."

Hazelwood said he was led back to prison after the death sentence was pronounced. He was not told when the sentence was to be carried out. For months and months he was in constant expectation of being shot any day.

"My cell," he said, "had a little round hole in the door, through which the guard peeped every now and then. Below this was a small square trap door through which, when it was opened and let down, they poked my food and water. They never entered the cell itself, and I don't blame them. They gave me no soap at all. All the cleaning that was done I had to do from the inside. Rats and mice scampered about, both night and day, and vermin crawled over me."

"What did they give you to eat?"

"For breakfast, two teaspoons of ground coffee, two teaspoons of sugar. This was my supply for 24 hours, and I had to economize with it. They gave me hot water and I put the ground coffee into it. Because of so much typhus and cholera, they never let us drink water until they had boiled it.

"For dinner I had two dippers of soup—some kind of soup, I don't know what—and a piece of meat, about the size of two fingers; don't know what kind of meat it was, but it certainly wasn't beef. For supper I had a quarter of a pound of sour black bread and two dippers of Russian kassah, a sort of oatmeal or grits. This was the unvaried fare in the Moscow prison. It turned my stomach, made me sick. After a few weeks I went batty, more or less, and got so sick that they removed me to the prison hospital. You had to be actually sick, all right, before you got sent to the hospital.

"In the hospital I was put to bed in a big ward, hundreds of men there, it seemed to me. The beds were but a few inches apart. A fellow in a bed next to mine was terribly sick one night and I gave him a little of my coffee. Next morning I reached over and shook him, but he was dead. Another man, a few beds away, also died that day. They died all around me."

Private Hazelwood said that when he got well enough he was taken to another prison camp, with other prisoners, was put to work outside, building sewers and streets. The work, he thinks, kept

Country Club Days

"Cross Country" is a perfect walking suit in brown kasha with touches of orange and a gay parrot cane of bright green.

"Tokio" is a light wrap which may be worn over a variety of costumes. It's of light gray crepe, criss-crossed in jade green.

"Ashes of Roses" tells the color of this crepe. The black wooden beads which finish the neckline vie in smartness with the pleats which make the frock.

"A Bit of Romance" is of chiffon in a delicious combination of cream and old blue.

By MME. FRANCES.

THE mention of country club days brings a vision of cloudless skies and emerald green grass, and if you bring the feminine slant to this vision, you'll probably picture yourself trailing across the grass in an alluring summery frock.

You see them all about you—summery frocks, I mean. In the cardroom, on the veranda and dotting the distant golf links.

But the delightful part is, their beauty isn't restricted to a distant view. The nearer you come, the more pleased you are. The silhouette was so lovely at a distance you were almost afraid to risk a close-up. But as you approach the figure zestfully swinging a club on the third tee you find that the detail of her costume is quite as lovely as was the general effect. And this, you know, is the acid test!

For frocks this year are simple without being plain. They follow the straight line, but there is always the detail that counts. It may be a slim panel, or a jabot frill, or a bit of embroidery, or the attractive printed pattern of the material itself.

And there is truly every kind of print imaginable. You need not choose the skyline of New York or an historical or mythological story told in pictures. These are effective, especially for gay young things, but if your tastes are quieter there are just as many other prints that are equally delightful and infinitely less startling.

There are quaint little flower patterns that remind one of the chintzes of long ago. There are smaller patterns which blend numerous bright colors, just a fleck of each, and there are ducky polka-dotted materials.

The Eton-jacketed suit, with white collars and cuffs, reminiscent of Eton and Harrow, the pleated skirt and the polka-dotted tie combine in a style that is boyish and becoming.

The suit I'm showing here, "Cross Country," is of brown kasha and is what I consider a perfect country walking suit. Its straps and bindings are of brown suede, it is lined in orange crepe, and embroidered at neck and belt in orange, brown and black.

The hat completes the brilliant color scheme, for it's of orange crepe faced in brown and adorned with a bow of ribbon striped in the same two colors.

Cross-country costumes are smartest this season when they are brilliant with color. Not wholly satisfied with brown and orange, "Cross Country" adds to its gay ensemble by means of a very bright green walking stick. The parrot head introduces red and blue and green.

You may have noticed that the setting for the particular country club costumes shown here is distinctly Japanese. Look again and you'll see that the frocks themselves give a hint or more of Japanese inspiration.

"Tokio," the printed silk crepe wrap, gives decidedly more than a hint. First of all, its background is pale gray, widely criss-crossed in wiggly printed lines of jade green.

The wrap, you see, is really made from a big circle of the material slit four times; twice to let the belt slide through and twice for the hands. The brown grosgrain silk sash has a green silk obi cord tied over it.

Such a wrap can be worn over practically anything, from the daintiest chiffon to the more serviceable sports dress, or you can throw it lightly over your bathing suit when wandering from the pool to the clubhouse.

The little turban worn with it is a cunning affair of pale gray crepe, with tiny gray violets sewed flat over its surface.

"A Bit of Romance" may be described as one of those delicious chiffon things in which any woman comes as near resembling peaches and cream as she ever will. It's cream chiffon with old-blue Japanese scrolls printed here and there, and where the old-blue velvet girdle fastens there are three moss roses. The slip beneath is green.

The hat is of rose chiffon, faced in blue velvet and ornamented with a buckle of gathered chiffon.

When you want a frock of not quite so much the fragile garden-party variety you will do well to consider "Ashes of Roses." Its crepe is more durable than chiffon and its pleats have passed the test of becomingness. They are used everywhere.

The frock is the color that its name implies, with girdle and cuffs of black velvet. It shows a very new note in the neckline, finished with large black wooden beads. This is newer than the shortened necklaces which fit just around the base of the throat.

When The Jesuits Came To St. Louis, 100 Years Ago

St. Louis College, which developed into St. Louis University, as it appeared in 1820. It was on Second street, between Walnut and Market streets. Left to right the buildings are: the pastoral residence, the college and the cathedral. From contemporary sketches and descriptions.

ONE HUNDRED years ago, a little band of 12 men stepped from the ferry to the wharf at the foot of Market street, and today in St. Francis Xavier's (College) Church, at Grand and Lindell boulevards, high dignitaries of the Catholic Church will celebrate the centenary of that event—the first arrival in St. Louis of the Jesuits.

Educators and missionaries, the little company of two priests, seven scholastics and three coadjutor brothers were sent as the result of negotiations between the Most Rev. Louis William Du Bourg, Bishop of Louisiana, with residence in St. Louis, President Monroe and his Secretary of War, John C. Calhoun, who had decided that the acute Indian problem then bedevilling the Federal Government might be solved through the education of the children of the red men.

This work the Jesuits began in a little log hut at Florissant, in St. Louis County, and this work they continue after a century at three Indian missions, two in South Dakota and one in Wyoming.

As a "by-product" of the original intention, if such it can be called, they have something more to show for their century of endeavor, in the form of six universities, eight colleges and 16 high schools, with a total of students in excess of 15,000.

In addition, there are two universities and two colleges on the Pacific Coast that were founded by members of the Missouri Province, since transferred to the newer Province of California. Such, briefly, is the educational development that has resulted from that pioneering trip 100 years ago, and this is what is being celebrated in St. Louis today.

When Bishop Du Bourg visited Washington to consult with President Monroe and Secretary Calhoun, the latter, who always has been credited with unusual foresight, suggested that the Jesuits at Georgetown College, then already long established at Washington, be approached with a view toward their undertaking the education of the young redskins of the great West. The result of the negotiations was a pilgrimage from Whitemarsh, Md., which began on April 11, 1823, and ended in St. Louis on May 21.

In the band, which was headed by the Rev. Charles Van Quickenbourne, until then prefect of studies at Whitemarsh, were the Rev. Peter J. Timmermans and seven scholastics, among them Peter John de Smet, afterwards to become famous as an Indian missionary; Peter John Verhagen, who was to be the first president of St. Louis University after its charter as a university had been granted, and others who were to make names for themselves in the history of the great West.

To educate the children of the Indians was their original object here, and a school was established in small log building at Florissant—Then they took over a little college on Second street, which grew into St. Louis University—As late as 1835 French was still the language of the Old Cathedral, and there were no Catholic churches using either English or German :: :: ::

The story of the trip from Whitemarsh may be termed a "cut-back" in American history. To Baltimore and then over the rough trail to Wheeling, Va., in wagons; the purchase of two flatboats for the long float down the Ohio River to Louisville, and then to Shawneetown, from whence the 140-mile journey to the river bank opposite St. Louis was completed in seven days, mostly on foot. So after six weeks of toilsome journey the men stood and looked across the waters that had been explored by their brother Jesuit, Marquette, 150 years before.

In anticipation of the coming of the Jesuits, Bishop Du Bourg had arranged to transfer to them a grant of land in Florissant, in St. Louis County, and there the little band journeyed to occupy the rude log cabins which had been provided.

The first activity of the colony at Florissant was the establishment of a school for Indians under the title of St. Francis Regis Indian Seminary. It might as well be stated frankly that the school was not the success its founders had hoped, as the Indian young hopeful was hard to get into the school, and not much of a pupil after he got there. So it probably was a happy day when the Jesuits were asked by Bishop Du Bourg to take over his little St. Louis College, on Second street, between Walnut and Market.

It was with this little tool that they really began to build their future in the great West, and this institution alone has grown into St. Louis University. Its local registration today is 3260 students and the university since actual organization has been the "house," or headquarters, of the Province of Missouri. Other schools established from this headquarters were:

St. Charles College, Grand Coteau, La., 1838; St. Xavier's College, Cincinnati, O., 1841; St Joseph's College, Bardstown, Ky., abandoned during the Civil War; St. Mary's College, St. Mary's, Kan.; mission 1848, college 1869; St. Ignatius College (Loyola University), Chicago, 1872; Creighton University, Omaha, 1879; Detroit University, 1880; Marquette University, Milwaukee, 1881; St. John's College, Belize, British Honduras, 1894; Rockhurst College, Kansas City, Mo., 1919.

During the years these educational institutions were being established, various members of the order were becoming famous as missionaries. The story of Father de Smet is too well known to need repeating here. Another who became equally famous throughout the Kansas territory was Father Paul Mary Ponziglione, a cousin of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy.

Yet of them all, the one most closely associated with the work of the church in St. Louis and Missouri was another man of noble birth, Father Helias d' Huddeg-

How the Rev. P. F. Jernegan of Connecticut, whose wife got a divorce in St. Louis several years later, organized the Electrolytic Marine Salts Co., which was to extract vast quantities of gold from the ocean.—The story of the floorwalker who had two professions.—The mysterious stranger at the beach on a cold February night.—Why the "gold accumulators" refused to accumulate gold after a man "went away to get married." -:- -:- -:-

THIS is the first of a series of true stories to be published in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine illustrating the truth of the old saying that "a fool and his money are soon parted." These narratives are mixtures of pathos and humor, tragedy and comedy. The tragedy lies in the success of the swindling schemes whereby thousands of persons, many or most of whom can ill afford financial loss, are taken in by the smooth tales of clever crooks. Yet it is by no means the poor and ignorant alone who bite greedily at the bait dangled by swindlers. Many persons who really ought to know better have been victims. The comic aspect of the matter has rise from the fact that, always after and sometimes "before taking," such schemes for the easy getting of hard-earned money look perfectly transparent to a person of common sense.

OCEANS of gold! Yes, literally, oceans of it! Atlantic, Pacific, and all the rest of the seven seas more or less full of gold! Gold—gold—gold. Get busy and go get it!

"But the problem is," said the Rev. Prescott Ford Jernegan, strictly to himself, "how to get the gold—how to get it out of the ocean, or—or"——

It was back in the summer of 1896, when Mr. Bryan was making his first run for the presidency. He had made his cross-of-gold speech at Chicago, the gold-standard campaign was on, and the Rev. Mr. Jernegan was beginning to unfold for the first time a golden dream. It seemed to be a good year for golden ideas.

Jernegan was living in Connecticut then, at Middletown. One of his neighbors and close friends was Charles E. Fisher. Both the men had come recently from Florida, where Jernegan had been pastor of a church and Fisher had followed a certain profession which for the present is to be kept secret. There is a lot of secrecy in this true tale, by the way. But for the secrecy maintained, the astonishing events here to be related never could have taken place.

Fisher, it is enough to say for the present, had been a floorwalker in a Brooklyn store, alternating that with his other and more interesting profession. Jernegan, before he became a preacher in Florida, had been a lawyer in New Jersey. That also helped along toward the success of Jernegan in turning his golden dream to material profit.

Just to add to the preliminary mystification of the matter and augment the secrecy of it, let it be interpolated here that Fisher was two kinds of a floorwalker.

Down in Florida a year or two earlier the Rev. Mr. Jernegan had been perusing the encyclopedia. His eye happened upon the highly interesting item that sea water contains a small quantity of gold in solution. Not much, just a tiny bit to the ton, about one grain. But then, as everybody knows, there is a vast quantity of sea water. The Pacific Ocean, composed altogether of sea water, is something like 10,000 miles across. Even the little Atlantic is 3000 miles wide in places. Both are very deep in spots. Besides, there are other oceans. Think of the innumerable tons of sea water and the innumerable grains of gold. Little drops of water, little grains of gold!

Now if only there might be found some method of extracting the gold, what fortune awaits the finder! Jernegan began day-dreaming about it. Then, as he told his friends in Connecticut, that golden summer of 1896, he slept and dreamed out the solution of the problem. How to precipitate the gold, gather it in receptacles, collect it in quantity to be melted into ingots—that was the golden idea realized through the Jernegan dream. The dream told him how to make a mechanical contrivance that would do the work.

Jernegan revealed his great secret to one man only, his friend Fisher. It being necessary to have a certain kind of floorwalker in putting the gold-getter to a test, Jernegan felt himself fortunate in knowing Fisher. The two alone, of all the millions of men in the world, knew how to get the gold. But they were willing to let the general public have a run for some of the money. Nothing small—in a certain sense—about Jernegan and Fisher.

Middletown is a conservative college community. Also it is a rather churchy place. Jernegan, being a clergyman, stood well with the citizens. They had confidence in him. So he unfolded his dream, telling a select group of local moneyed men all about it excepting the scientific secret of the mechanism for precipitating the gold. That, he insisted, was not to be made public, for it was so simple that anybody could use it in collecting vast fortunes from Father Neptune. So he enjoined secrecy as to the whole project upon the few men he took into his confidence that summer. He talked the plan over with them from day to day, and every time the matter was discussed the selected Middletown citizens became more enthusiastic.

It was not until a cold night in February, 1897, that all was ready for the test which was to prove the Jernegan dream-mechanism a practical success. The apparatus was a simple cylindrical box, with a pipe through which the water entered, some chemicals at the bottom, and an electric wire which, according to Jernegan, precipitated the gold. The clergyman knew of a secluded spot on the shore of Narragansett Bay where the test could be made and secrecy maintained. With half a dozen Middletowners and Floorwalker Fisher, Jernegan journeyed to the selected spot.

There was an old wharf running out over the sea water. Near at hand was a small hut, in which the land end of the wire was connected with a supply of electricity.

The cylindrical box was let down to the bottom of the bay near the end of the wharf. All night long the Middletown party held forth on the wharf, in the hut, or hopping about the beach to keep from freezing. It was highly uncomfortable in that climate and season, but then the occasion was momentous. Every little while "Brother" Jernegan cheered the men with a song or a jolly story. They got through the cold night and gathered on the wharf to see the gold-getter box drawn out of the deep as dawn broke over the Rhode Island coast.

The men's teeth were chattering, but when the box was opened and one of the enthusiasts lifted out the container, at Jernegan's request, the sight of what it contained warmed them to the marrow.

"There, brothers!" cried the clergyman, triumphantly. "Look! See for yourself! Gold!"

And it was gold. They saw the gleam of it. But they were not expected to take Jernegan's word for it and let it go at that. He had insisted that they bring along an assayer. The assayer assayed the contents of the container.

"Gold, and silver too," was his verdict.

Silver having been turned down at the election the preceding November, its presence did not elate those gold-standard men from Middletown. The gold elated them. They were jubilant. They believed implicity in the Jernegan gold-getting contrivance. They talked of floating a monster company to exploit it. Jernegan enjoined as much secrecy as might be possible, so the company was formed quietly in Boston. They called it the Electrolytic Marine Salts Co. It was empowered to sell capital stock to the extent of $10,000,000 at $1 a share. One of the solid Middletown men was made president, Jernegan vice president and general manager, Fisher assistant general manager. Two other Middletown men were chosen as the underwriting agents.

There had been present for a brief time that dark night on the shore of Narragansett Bay a mysterious stranger, though only Messrs. Jernegan and Fisher knew of his presence. He was, strange to say, a private detective by profession. Also, quite strange to the others, Floorwalker Fisher had practiced another profession for a quarter of an hour, that otherwise having to do with floorwalking in a way.

Land was purchased at North Lubec, another secluded spot, on the coast of Maine, and there the company established its plant. No one was likely to stumble upon the secret in that lonely place. When it soon went around that the plant had yielded its first ingot, weighing 92 ounces. Assayed at New York it was found to contain one-third pure gold and the rest silver. Hundreds of persons flocked to the company's offices in State street, Boston, to buy stock. Thousands sent in their money, by mail or otherwise. Why not? Were not the seven seas to be robbed of their wave-washed wealth, that was making nobody any good where it was and would make all the shareholders opulent beyond the well-known dreams of avarice?

Within a few weeks $1,000,000 had been subscribed by the gold-hungry public. Rich men, poor men, widows, orphans, people of all sorts and conditions who could control a few or many dollars bought the stock. Even a few dollars thus invested was sure to make the investor rich, there were so many oceans, and such big ones, to draw gold from indefinitely. The directors made it known that the accumulators were busy at North Lubec collecting the gold. "Accumulator" was the name conferred upon the Jernegan dream-box.

Under the terms of the compact, Jernegan got 10 per cent of the money paid in, for having supplied the great secret. The two underwriters divided 10 per cent for their services. Fisher got well paid, though the amount of his "divvy" was not made known. The rest was to be spent in operations. The plant was to be extended, the directors told the public.

Why stop at 240 accumulators, when thousands of miles of sea-water coast were available? Why, in the name of common sense, set any limit to the accumulations, save to see to it that the aggregate gold extracted did not become so great as to upset the new-cinched gold standard by making the precious metal as common as Rhode Island spuds or Connecticut stone-fence material? The matter of gold supply, of course, could be regulated, so long as the process was kept a dead secret.

The directors, after the paid-in shares reached $1,000,000, announced that for the time being no more stock was to be sold. The plant must be extended first. Later, a Boston newspaper stated that millions could have been taken in for the asking. The stock, which had opened at $1 a share, now sold at $1.50, and some of the investors who needed ready money sold out at 50 per cent profit. Most of them, however, held on for the big dividends.

The big dividends never showed up. In July, 1898, just after Admirals Sampson and Schley had smashed the fleet of Admiral Cervera at Santiago, and everybody's attention was diverted to the famous victory over Spain, General Manager Jernegan went to New York, ostensibly to buy machinery for the plant. About the same time Assistant General Manager Fisher, the dual floorwalker, disappeared from the "parent" plant at North Lubec. A week passed, and neither had returned to his headquarters.

"But everything is all right," the directors in State street assured those who were beginning to get anxious. "Mr. Jernegan is in New York now about machinery, and Mr. Fisher has left to be married."

Nobody, of course, had the heart to disturb the honeymoon. Then, a little later, the rumor was spread that Jernegan had not tried to buy any machinery in New York. Instead, he had bought United States Government bonds to the extent of $150,000 and, on July 23, with wife and child, had sailed for France on the steamship Navarre.

"But it's all right," again said the directors of the Electrolytic Marine Salts Co. "To keep the process secret, Mr. Jernegan assured us that he thought of going to Europe to buy the machinery needed for extensions."

Some of the shareholders refused to believe the explanation. They lacked the faith of the Middletown conservatives. Moreover, news from the plant was not reassuring. Since the departure of Mr. Fisher on his honeymoon, or whatever it was, the accumulators had refused to accumulate gold. They accumulated only sea water, which was quite pentiful to be of value outside its natural place of circulation.

Suddenly the Electrolytic Marine Salts stock dropped to 10 cents a share, with few takers. Nevertheless, the president of the company would not have it that his faith had been misplaced. Had he not seen, with his own eyes, the machine "make gold" on the shore of Narragansett Bay?

"Have Jernegan arrested under an extradition warrant," demanded some shareholders.

"Call a meeting of the board and let us know what's what," demanded others.

But it turned out that the Rev. Mr. Jernegan, late New Jersey lawyer, had fixed things so that he controlled 7,500,000 of the unissued 9,000,000 shares, so that there could be no legal quorum at a meeting without his presence, and the only person who could order Mr. Jernegan's arrest in due form was Mr. Jernegan himself. In fact, Mr. Jernegan was almost the whole thing.

A dismal crowd besieged the offices in State street. A number of shareholders held a conference. They instituted a suit to prevent further money being spent on operations, the president of the company having stated that he intended to go on experimenting.

It appears that Jernegan had sailed in such a hurry that he had neglected to take along $100,000 which he might have taken. This was attached and added to the company assets. Some time later a letter was received from Jernegan, who was in Brussels. He was pining, he said, to return to his native land, and just to make sure that there was no ill will toward him he donated $75,000 to the shareholders.

The plant at North Lubec was sold to a sardine canning concern. The investors in the great gold-getting scheme got back 36 per cent of their money, writing off the remaining 64 per cent to profit and loss.

But, for all that, it was real gold that was taken from the accumulator that cold February morning in 1897. The confirmation came out after the smash. Mr. Fisher had once been a deep-sea diver, a sort of ocean floorwalker, so to describe it. That dark night, when the chilled Middletowners were romping on the beach to restore their circulation, Fisher had donned a diving suit and slid off a rock near the end of the wharf. One William Phelan of New York stayed on the rock and held the line for the diver, who remained under water for about 15 minutes.

In that brief period Mr. Fisher performed his greatest floor-walking stunt. He walked along the shore of the bay until he reached the cylindrical box containing the chemicals to precipitate the gold. He sprinkled the gold and silver into the box from a supply he took along with him. A nugget worn by "Brother" Jernegan as a watch charm is said to have been one source of the gold supply.

Phelan declared that he was not in on the plot himself, that he undertook this service merely in the line of his work as a private detective, that he was to get $500 for the night's job, and that he had a mighty hard time getting the cash out of the Rev. Mr. Jernegan.

Possibly the name of the Marine Salts Co. was suggested by the "salting" of the imaginary gold mine that memorable night. But that's immaterial. The material fact is that a portion of the too-credulous public lost more than half a million dollars and that Jernegan got away with something like a quarter of a million.

Whether Fisher got married and lived happily ever afterward is no part of the record. He seems to have dived completely out of sight. Jernegan, however, was heard from nearly eight years after his disappearance, when he was sued for divorce in the St. Louis Circuit Court. Mrs. Betsey Evelyn Jernegan alleged desertion. Her husband, she stated, had taken her to Europe after the episodes mentioned above. They remained there about a year. Mrs. Jernegan returned to the home of her parents in Massachusetts, where her husband visited her a year or two later and remained a few hours one night. She next saw him some months later in Montreal, where they spent 10 days together.

Jernegan then told his wife, according to her petition for divorce, that he was going to the Far West and could not take her along. When she filed her suit in January, 1906, she said she had not seen her husband since the Montreal occasion, but she understood that he was teaching school in the Philippines. The divorce was granted Dec. 5, 1906.

The Cuneiform Inscription

by Melville Davisson Post

IT WAS the signal that I had so long awaited. I had just come in when the porter brought me the telegram. I was wet, my riding boots were covered with mud, and I was tired. I had been all day in the saddle at a distant meet of the Devon and Somerset staghounds. We had killed in a great wooded gorge beyond Porlock; the rain had fallen constantly; and the vast moors, covered with heather and gorse, swept by the gusts of rain, were like a sponge. A call to a 90-mile run in a motor on this evening in early September was a thing to shudder at. But I received it with a great upward sweep of the heart! The thing which I knew would eventually happen had arrived, and it was bringing my golden hour with its wreckage.

I sat in the long hall of the Hotel Metropole; a rain-drenched, mud-splashed figure with a sun-filled face. I must have seemed a strange creature to the hunting folk who passed and the servants who came to take my directions. I was a strange creature; one is always a strange creature when the event on which his life is turning begins to come up in the skyline!

I ordered the best in the kitchen and the cellar, and went up to my room for a hot bath and clothes for the road. I kept the telegram twisted in my fingers.

Her house was falling in about her, and she had sent for me! At last the thing I had to offer would have a value. That which was nothing to her when she thought her fortune was inexhaustible would now mean the things she could not give up; the stud of hunters in the Dukes country; the string of polo ponies here in Somerset; the gowns, the jewels, all the extravaganza of gilded life!

Two hours later I was on the road north. The big American roadster moved under my hands like a live thing.—My driver was in the box behind. I wished some outlet for the inexhaustible vigor that possessed me. The day in the saddle had been nothing; this night in the rain and dark was nothing. I had the strength of 10, like the Galahad of legend—but not for his noble reason. The love of a woman moved me. Would she take, now, what I had vainly offered for three months in England?

For what else could her cryptic telegram say—come?

I knew something from the daily press. Her man of business had hanged himself in London and she was bankrupt; the very house over her head would go. The thing had fallen like an arrow out of the sky; in a moment, as at a witch word; as at the striking of a clock, she had only a pumpkin coach, mice and the rags of an evening dress—and I raced to her with the fairy lamp that would restore them!

It was a devil's night; a cold chill on the fields, rain, no breath of wind, a vague darkness that seemed to make the visible objects only more indistinct. But it was a night in character with the event. The evil spirit of that hanged man of business would have some favor of the elements—some luck yet.

He had surprised every solicitor in London.

His father and his father's father had handled the business of this family for a century with care, with that extreme caution that one can find only in a dingy English office, up two flights of stairs. The hanged man had, in particular, an exclusive control of this estate. The girl's uncle, that eccentric old antiquarian, Sir Hector Bartlett, would not be bothered with a business matter. His signature was all the concern Sir Hector granted, and that went over finally to the man of business in a power of attorney to sign. Sir Hector was usually in the East, engrossed with the lost languages of Asia.

He was the greatest authority in the world on these lost languages; he was the one authority. When one mentioned Sir Hector the learned societies about the world, so to speak, uncovered. But they had a notion, these learned societies, that toward the end he was mad—perhaps it was out of his bitter contempt for a slower wit; perhaps it was the puzzle he left them for an inheritance, after he had deciphered the great inscription of Darius on the rocks at Behistun and got what it concealed. The learned men said the inscription Sir Hector left for them was an absurdity; but Sir Hector, dying, said it would fit their wits, and the one that could decipher it would get what he had dug up in Asia.

At any rate, unfortunately, the power to sign given by Sir Hector had been extended by his niece, and the man of business had flung the fortune into every wild thing that the intelligence of crooks could bring in to him—as though caution in his race, pressed too far, had gone awfully drunken. The thing had the completeness of a curse—as though the gods of the ancient races, violated in their sanctuaries by Sir Hector, had taken their vengeance on his heir.

I smiled in the darkness. If such powers were the authors of this disaster they would not stand aside while I came in to the rescue; they would ditch the car. And the next moment the car very nearly was ditched. A human figure appeared suddenly in the road before me, and to avoid it I skirted the coping of an open bridge. The car skidded and stopped, with a rear wheel within an inch of the edge.

I said it was the puzzle Sir Hector Bartlett had left to his contemporaries.

The figure came forward into the light and hailed me. Would I take him up? I could not see the man's face distinctly, but there was something in the voice that was familiar; somewhere, in some distant memory, I had known that voice. It was the voice of a gentleman by some vague quality remaining in it. And so, uncertain whom I had before me, I took him up. But when he had climbed beside me into the seat I was disillusioned. His drenched clothes had about them the odors of a dirty ship, and the man was drunk. His voice was thick, and he had the abominable familiarity of rum-soaked creatures.

He talked: he was going a long way; he had landed in England on this afternoon; he was going to see his god-child. I would be surprised, I would be amazed to know who his god-child was! How far did I go on the road? I hoped to get rid of him, and so told the truth. I would turn at the next crossing for Red House, 60 miles to the north.

The creature tittered. "That's luck," he stuttered in the laugh. "There's where I'm going."

I stopped the car and turned a flash on him. What mysterious creature had I taken up?

At first I was unable to attach a memory; a foul, sodden face appeared under a dirty cap; red-lidded eyes, blue, sagging jowls; a nose swollen with liquor, and a slack mouth. It was the face of the worst human derelict I ever saw, and yet its abominations were laid down over something that was well bred in the beast. The creature had one time been a gentleman, but a gentleman gone with every loathsome bestiality to the pit.

"Do you know me, eh, what?" The sodden voice was in a sort of friendly whine.

And all at once I did know him.

"Good heaven!" I said, "it's Backmartin!"

"Righto!" The whine went up into a little triumphant note. "Lord Backmartin of the Downs in the old day." He buttoned his rain-soaked [illegible] a coat, and drew his flabby body together in the seat.

"The best back in England, if I do say it. . . . Did you see me in the match with the Americans in '90? Great polo, believe me. . . . They win now, these Americans, but we rode them off in '90. Did you see me pick out the ball in the last chukker and carry it through to their goal with every devil's son of them after me? . . . Did you see that game, eh, what? Were you there?" I was there, and I did see it!

The goals were coming up slowly, and one-all was the score up to within three minutes of the last bell. Hudson of the Americans was carrying the ball toward the English end. Victory was in their hand, when Lord Rose cut the ball out by a sort of accident and shouted to Backmartin to take it. And he did take it like a god; the ball went like an arrow; nearside and offside were alike to him. He had the fastest pony in England; no one of the Americans could reach him; the ball, like a bullet, crossed the goal before the bell rang.

Backmartin was the hero of England on that day.

The Downs joined Red House, where a daughter was newly born to the sporting squire who was brother to Sir Hector Bartlett, and so Backmartin had stood—at the next week-end—in the little chapel at Red House, as godfather to her.

And here he was!

I fumbled about the levers and got the car ahead.

What should I do with him?

He was unspeakable. His reputation for seven years in England had been beyond words; and for seven more years his name had not been mentioned. He had been in China, in the Malay Peninsula, in the South Seas.

The creature was unspeakable.

And here he was riding with me on a journey to his god-daughter. I was twisted in Satan's fingers.

A Story of Love and Mystery, and a Derelict's Nobility

~by MELVILLE DAVISSON POST

If I put him down I should have no line on the plan that he came with. And how could I take him on? I considered the thing as we raced north, and while the creature driveled.

There was a fortune in rum-running just now northwest of the Barbados if he could fit a ship. His god-daughter would no doubt be glad to help him—he mentioned a pensioner in her house as the alternative.

So that was what the beast was after. And I carried him forward on that purpose; to force a levy for his rum-running by the threat of sitting in her parlor!

I could have killed the creature and thrown his rotten carcass into a ditch. My fingers itched for a clutch on him. But when I thought the matter calmly out, there seemed, after all, only one thing to do. I must hold him under my eye until I could get him out of England—when one fought the devil one needed to keep him in the light.

I took him on!

There is a long, flag-paved terrace on the garden side of Red House, with casement doors entering the library and the drawing room. It was very near midnight, and the strange events that I set out to write down here were on their way. The night had cleared; the air was warm and sweet as from distant hayfields; the stars were out.

And I waited on this terrace for the woman denied me!

She had gone a moment to make sure that Backmartin had every comfort the house could give. He had already levied upon it for every use; and now, dined and bathed and shaven and in the old squire's evening clothes, he sat in a great leather chair smoking a Havana, with a bottle of Burgundy opened beside him. I could see the smug creature through the glass doors to the library.

It raised the bristles on me. The transformation in this derelict seemed only to make him more perfidious. He blew the smoke thinly out at the corners of his slack mouth, lying back in the chair, his half-closed, red-lidded eyes on the little long-smoked frame above the mantel shelf containing the cuneiform inscription that Sir Hector had left, as a jest, for his contemporaries.

It was painted in India ink on a strip of vellum.

Two things had reduced me from the starry spaces: that Backmartin should be welcomed as a royal guest, and that I should be called here to be thanked for all my courtesies, and dismissed out of her life. My suit was now impossible. She would go up to London on tomorrow to seek some way to live and keep her self-respect. She wished to see me while a day of the old life remained. It was a whim I must forgive her. It had put me to some discomfort and a heavy journey; but she wished to say goodby while she remained an equal.

I offered my fairy lamp in vain to her.

I had far more than she imagined. I was, in fact, absurdly rich. What would be needed to clear off every debt I could advance out of an idle income. But she only shook her heavenly head at me. It would be a bribe now! And on that, as on an iron pike, I was impaled. If the thing had been possible before, did I not see that it was now out of the question? When she had a fortune, too, it was myself I offered, and she could consider that, but I offered a bribe now, and she could not take a bribe!

Did I not see how the bribe would taint her? When my blood had cooled, something would whisper to me, "And so it was these baubles that she wanted." She could not face a life against that whisper. And the abominable thing about it was that I was permitted to see how very nearly I had won her. All along she had been extremely fond of me; my admiration of her had not gone unnoticed. She had been attracted to me. We had tastes in common. She might have come in time to consider what I offered. That I was older by some 20 years had been no matter. Women wished experience of life in men and a tough fiber; one could not trust one's self to a callow boy. Youth was selfish, and it was, in particular, this unselfishness of men that a woman longed for.

I walked the great length of the terrace with my fingers locked behind me.

In my abstraction I struck my foot against the square of tiles laid down on the terrace as a sort of step before the library door and caught the latch to keep my balance. The noise brought Backmartin up in his chair, and he called to me.

"Oh, I say, come in."

And I had to go in. I could not have the beast feel that I was spying on him. I pretended to be seeking a match for my cigarette. I got one from his candlestick on the table and turned to go out, but he stopped me.

I do not know whether it was a word or a gesture that arrested my attention. I thought the beast, at his ease and with his cocky air, was now more loathsome. One could bear with him, perhaps, in his misery and in his habiliments of squalor, but cleaned and fed and comfortable and turned out fo a gentleman, he was beyond the patience of the saints. And yet I had to treat him with the courtesies of a guest—a distinguished guest in this country house; a godfather of this girl welcomed back to England.

He made a little gesture toward the framed strip of vellum on the mantelpiece.

"Is that the old cock's secret cipher?"

I said it was the puzzle Sir Hector Bartlett had left to his contemporaries: two crowned Assyrian figures preceded by two wedgesigns; followed by a cuneiform inscription, all painted in India ink on a strip of vellum.

"Tell me about it," he said.

I loathed the creature, but I could not fail in what my hostess would expect of me with a guest. And I told him what was well known about the thing.

Sir Hector Bartlett had been the ablest Assyriologist in Europe. Under his hands the ancient writing in Asia had taken the completeness and the uniformity of a national language; before him, these languages had been mere fragments puzzled out; and with a large conception he had welded these fragments together and shown this to have been the learned written speech of a great vanished age in Asia. This big conception had lifted the whole thing onto an elevated plane; it had laid forever the claims of Halvey that this wedge writing was a mere cabalistic script of the Sumerian priests. He had shown it to be the speech of a people.

But the little skepticisms of his contemporaries had enraged Sir Hector. He said they were pretentious persons fit to work out puzzles, and so he had left a puzzle for them in his will. Let them work it out and they would find the treasure that he had found by deciphering the great inscription of Darius on the rocks of Behistun.

"Did he find a treasure?"

Backmartin cut in, shooting out his head with a sort of reptilian eagerness.

I explained that such was the common rumor at the time. He was known to have got some concession from the Crown to confirm his right in what he might discover, and a report was current that the Louvre offered him 70,000 pounds for what he had shown the director of fine arts in Paris on his way home.

"What did he show him?"

The reptilian gesture was even, if possible, more eager in its appeal.

One did not know, I went on; there was every conjecture. Backmartin's big, loose face worked like soft rubber.

"And he said that thing up there," he indicated the mantel with his hand, "would tell where he hid it, if anybody could understand what it meant?"

"Yes."

"And what did the other learned Johnnies say about it?"

They said it was nonsense, I continued. They said it was an absurdity on its face. No inscription ever had two royal figures drawn in: the wedge was never inclined to the left, it was always pointed toward the right, or downward or aslant to the right, or two combined at their heads to form an angle. They said no word or syllable of gunu-sign of either the Persian, Susian or Babylonian language was indicated; they said the thing was a hoax.

"But the old cock said they were only fit for puzzles, didn't he—an' he would make one to fit their wits—eh, what?"

It was what Sir Hector had uttered about it, I told him. He held these learned men in a bitter contempt. Their knowledge of deciphering inscriptions, he said, was confined to the Black Cabinets of Berlin and Vienna, and their knowledge of Assyriology to the sacred books of the Jews—he would leave them an inscription within the zone of their intelligence.

I heard the casement door of the drawing room to the terrace open, and I went out. Backmartin followed me with a sharp look. He had grasped the situation. He knew that things had gone to pieces and why I came; some of it by inquiry, no doubt, and the remainder by a sort of instinct. He was slack and despicable—boggy in the chair—and the glance seemed to emerge from a trace, in the beast, of something firmer.

I found Marjorie on the terrace; and I advanced toward her as toward something heavenly and denied. She was lovely beyond any descriptive words that I can write here. To catalogue her would be to give no adequate impression. Dark hair, and great deep eyes, and the alluring figure of a Nereid are not descriptive phrases, but they are fragments of fancy that another man—to know the thing I mean—must fit his own beloved woman into.

I loved her, and, to me, she possessed the charm of dreams.

There is this quality, strange and bitter, in a loss, that it doubles the value of the thing removed; when it is gone once, wholly, one sees with an uncanny clearness how incomparable it was. Tonight this terrace was some delicate, vague kingdom of illusion. It would presently vanish. There would be only an hour of it with her. And it seemed to me, as I walked slowly beside her the length of the flag-paved terrace, that this hour was priceless. Into it the mysterious purpose of every day that I had lived, of every day that I would live, seemed to converge, and to escape with the sound of my footsteps moving on the flags. I must convince her!

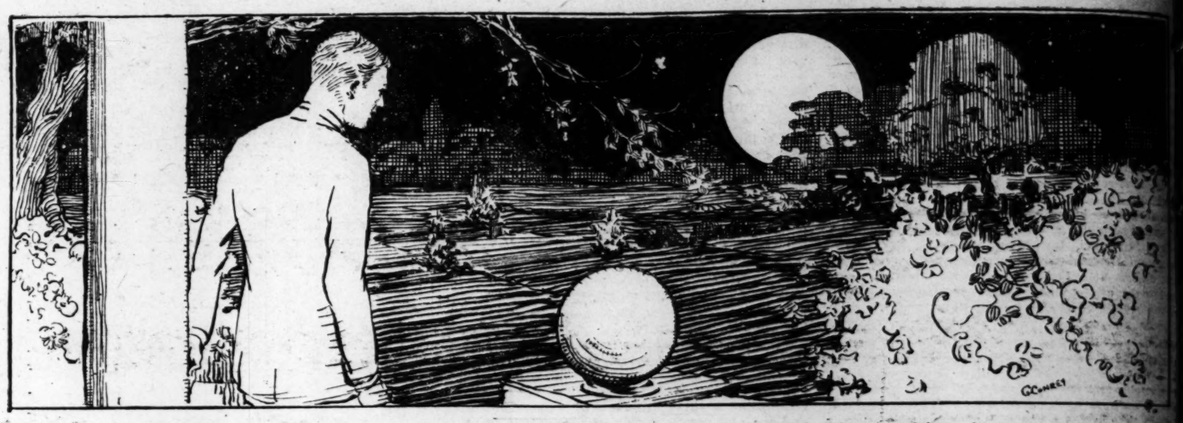
THE CUNEIFORM INSCRIPTION (CONTINUED)



I stood outside, with my head uncovered until the roar of the car racing south was a faint echo.

And I labored to that end with every argument, with every insistence. And in the vague light I noted every detail of her: the long lashes, the exquisite mouth, the slender body. But it was not these visible things, however potent, that so wholly overcame me. It was a thing for which we have no word, of which there is no material evidence, that moved subtly from this girl into every fiber of me. The perennial charm of romance attended her. She came forth from haze, from shadow; there clung about her the freshness, the mystery of those fairy women that the soul of a man eternally longs for.

And unless I could persuade her, she was lost to me!

I cannot remember what I said: it must have been to offer what I had, to replace the things this disaster had swept out. My insistence must have revolved about this fixed idea; for she would only shake her heavenly head. I must not bribe her, she could not take a bribe.

I looked up, finally, like a man sinking in the pit, and I saw, beyond her, across the terrace, a face pressed against the glass door of the library. For a moment the face seemed unfamiliar — or was I unhinged by my emotion? — there was something fine in it; something having a momentary control something that had no proper being in the sodden features; something long submerged, trodden down, filth-covered, in a sort of awful effort to get on its feet.

Then the face relaxed into its vacuous abominations, and Backmartin opened the door.

"Oh! I say," he called to us, "if I might have a Bible I would read a chapter before I turn in—it's a sort of habit, y' know."

I had to turn, sharp, to conceal the disgust in me. But Marjorie went in to him with some courteous word—found a big old family Bible on a shelf among the dictionaries, and put it on his table. He was stooping over it when she came out to me.

She made no comment.

And I returned to my labor of a cursed Sisyphus. But I changed the tenor of it. If we must be equal before she would listen to me, then I would make us equal. If she would not be as well off as I was, then I would be as poor as she was. I would abandon what I had, and we would go empty-handed into some new land. I was as good a man as that first one in Asia. I would till the earth and build a home and face the wilderness for her. And I would do it like one who finds a kingdom! We would go this very night out into the world, leaving forever the rubbish of these great possessions!

She looked at me with a high face.

She stood with her arms hanging, her lips parted, her slender face gleaming like a flower; her hair spun darkness—her great eyes on me as though she saw a man there that she had never seen before.

Then a voice startled us from another world.

Backmartin was standing before the library, with his hand on the latch of the closed door behind him. He was speaking to us, he was making some interrogation. Whether he had come out at that moment, or been there a long time, I do not know.

My forbearance with the beast very nearly went to pieces; but something in the voice, something strange, peculiar, unlike the creature restrained me.

"Is any place about this house paved with stones?"

There was an unstable quality in Backmartin's voice, as though it issued from one holding himself together with an immense effort. And there was sincerity in it. I could not see the man's face.

"This terrace," I said, "is paved."

He came running out, at that, and over the whole length of the terrace. Then he came back to the library door and stood with his hand pressed against his mouth as in some reflection.

"But upon it!" he said. "There is nothing upon it."

Then he flung the door open.

"Come in here," he said.

We went in behind him.

I was astonished at the man when the light uncovered him. He was the Backmartin of the old day; a ruin of that man, surely, and yet the man returned as by some sorcery into a brief, unstable control of this debauched, abandoned creature. That this control was unstable, at the virtue of breaking effort, and uncertain of continuance, the aspect of him and the quavering voice evidenced. But while it held the ruin of the man together it gave that ruin a certain authority of life and a certain dignity of manner.

"And put it upon a pavement of stones!" he repeated; "that's the direction, 'upon a pavement of stones.'"

"What direction?" I said. "What are you talking about?"

He indicated the vellum with its cuneiform inscription above the mantel.

"The direction in that cipher," he replied. "It says 'upon a pavement of stones.'"

"You have deciphered that inscription?" I was incredulous. "After all the learned men in Europe failed on it?"

A faint smile struggled into his tense, hard-held face.

"Did not Sir Hector say that their knowledge of Assyriology was confined to the sacred books of the Jews, and that they were only fit to work out puzzles? Well, that's what it is, a puzzle, connected with the sacred book of the Jews!" He went over to the mantel and took up the framed inscription. He put his finger on the two royal Assyrian figures.

"That's a 'King,'" he said; "there are two of them, that would be 'Kings,' and there are two wedges before them, that would be 'two Kings.' And the remainder of it is made up of cuneiform characters put together to form the reference in Roman numerals: sixteen, seventeen, five. That is to say: 'Two Kings, 16, 17, 5.' That would be Second Kings, chapter 16, verse 17, line 5."

He turned about and put his finger on a line of the Bible open on the table before him.

"And that line says: 'And put it upon a pavement of stones.'" He turned about to us. "Somewhere on a pavement of stones Sir Hector has concealed whatever it was that he brought out of Asia."

We looked at him in a sort of wonder. The girl's fingers were on my arm; she was tense now in a consuming interest.

Backmartin went on: "The terrace out there is paved with stones, and if this verse said under a pavement of stones I would know where to look. But it doesn't say under; it says upon . . . now, how could it be upon that terrace? There's nothing upon it."

Marjorie suddenly cried out as with an inspiration. "But there is something 'upon it;' there is a square of tiles laid down before this door; they would be 'upon it.'"

Backmartin stood up at that; he looked a moment at the mosaic making a wide step before the door. Then he turned to me.

"Your car is standing out there; get a chisel and a hammer from the toolbox."

I got the implements and we raised the tiles. Under them, upon the tiled pavement, was a thin, square copper box. We took it into the library and put it on the table. No one spoke.

Backmartin carried the box, and we followed after him. He put it on the him alive. When in prison he had nothing to do but think; no reading matter was allowed, no amusement. He told of one prison where the fare was chiefly of some sort of fish, cooked with bodies, heads and entrails intact. It was nauseating.

"Nevertheless," said Hazelwood, "if we were eating our fish when outside in the working gang, famished children would pick up the scales we threw down, and swallow them. Everywhere as we were taken about on trains the children came to the stations, their cheek bones almost sticking through the flesh, and begged for a bite of black bread.

"At Tombouloff, east of Moscow, where I was put to work with other prisoners digging a sewer, I saw about 250 men, women and children lined up and shot down by the bolshevists. It seemed that two or three of their commissars had been killed in that town, and they took out their spite on the whole population.

"After some months of this sort of thing I got so that I didn't worry about being called out to be shot. For months I never had gone to sleep without the thought that I might be awakened before dawn and taken out and shot. But I don't believe now that they ever intended to execute the sentence of death on me; they were too much afraid of Uncle Sam. However, Uncle Sam didn't know I was there until after the armistice between Poland and Russia."

"And how did Uncle Sam find it out then?" Hazelwood was asked.

"There was a Polish soldier in my prison. When the exchange of Russian and Polish prisoners was made, a priest took a knife and ripped open the lapel of the Polander's coat. He then wrote my name and regiment and company number on a bit of paper and sewed it up in the lapel. When the released prisoner got to Prague he went to the American Ambassador there and turned over the paper, and the Ambassador communicated with Secretary of State Hughes. Mr. Hughes was unable to get me and the other, civil and military prisoners, released until Mr. Hoover told the bolshevists that all American famine relief would be held up until every American confined in Russian prisons was released. That brought them around all right.

"I was released Aug. 5, 1921, being delivered to the American army of occupation at Coblenz, Germany. As I was too sick to be sent home I was taken to London, where I entered the Free Royal Hospital. They treated me splendidly there, where I remained until last February. One day King George and Princess Mary visited the hospital and circulated among the patients. The King came up and spoke to me, shook hands with me, asked me how I was feeling. He's a fine man, the King of England, and acts just like any ordinary citizen—no frills at all.

"After my discharge from the hospital I came across the Atlantic and was mustered out at Governor's Island late in March. The American Legion helped me some, and so here I am, on the last lap for Roodhouse, to see the wife and kiddies. They are with my grandmother, Mrs. Mary Young, who lives on the farm at Barrow Station, three miles from Roodhouse."

Hazelwood gave the writer a list of the Americans who were in prison with him in Moscow. One was Capt. Emmet Kilpatrick of the American Red Cross, whose home is at Unionville, Ala. Another is Mrs. Marguerite Harrison of Baltimore, Md., a newspaper correspondent.

"Mrs. Harrison," remarked Private Hazelwood, "is a very foolish woman. She has gone back to Russia, where, I understand, she's got into prison again. It is the decree of the soviet government that no person who has been held in their prisons can ever return to Russia. Mrs. Harrison is lucky that she didn't get shot when she went back."

Other civil prisoners mentioned by Hazelwood as having been confined with him are John Michael Flick of Brooklyn, N. Y., a moving picture cameraman for the Pathe concern; Dr. Henry J. La Marc of San Francisco; X. B. Kalmatiano of East Alton, Ill., who was in Russian prisons for three years, and John W. Reed of Detroit. American soldiers on Hazelwood's prison list were Sergt. Charles Brown, Quincy, Ill.; Corp. William Westhouse, Topeka, Kan.; Private Alfred Johnson, Joplin, Mo., and Private Alfred W. Wilson, Granite City, Ill. All these were released along with Hazelwood and were well enough to come home promptly.

And now Tom Hazelwood, probably the last missing man of the unfortunate Siberian expedition to turn up alive, is back home at last.

He got home a little too late to help break ground for corn, but he hopes to "make a hand" again in cultivating the crop. He is by no means as strong as he was when he left the farm six years ago to undertake the great adventure; but he hopes that a few months of home life, with good, old-fashioned country food and outdoor exercise, will restore his health and strength.

"After what I've gone through in Russia," said the smiling homecomer, "I consider myself lucky to be alive at all."

table. And then he did an inexplicable thing. He went on through the library door into the hall. I thought he went to seek a tool to cut the copper, and I followed. I found him in the hall putting on my greatcoat. In the light his contorted face was covered with sweat.

"Awaken your driver," he said, "and get me to the coast."

I hesitated in my profound astonishment.

And he turned suddenly on me, the sweat trickling in the lines of his hard-pressed, dreadful face.

"Hurry, man!" He very nearly spat on me in his extremity.

I stood outside, with my head uncovered, until the roar of the car racing south was a faint echo. Then I went in. Marjorie was standing by the table. She had got the lid of the box unfastened, and within were row upon row of emeralds, big, gleaming, priceless.

But I was not happy. I felt a little man beside the big one who was gone—the mortal struggle of this creature, the dreadful thing he had considered and been held back from by the thin line of something noble that never wholly dies in us.

I spoke to the girl, looking strangely at me, from her place beyond the box of jewels.

"You will never love me?"

"Never!" she said. . . . "Never, but for what has happened on this night."

"The finding of the emeralds?"

She made a gesture as of one who tosses away a bauble.

"The finding of a man . . . out there on the terrace . . . when I was poor."

And I looked upon her in a sort of wonder. She stood transfigured there beside the table, her great eyes on me, her face softened with the light that I had so long hoped to see there. At last she loved me! I could not bribe her with great possessions, nor win her to my arms with argument, but the renunciation that would cast the world away for her had broken down the doorway to her heart. She loved me!

I took a step toward her, and she came with a little cry into my arms.

New York Girl Discovers the Secret of Keeping up with Fifth Avenue Styles -on a Limited Income

Brilliant idea solves this most perplexing problem and enables every girl—every woman—to have more dresses for less money.

IF LAST JANUARY, you had occupied a seat in a certain New York theater, you would have observed a young lady directing the attention of her companion to a slender, girlish, well-dressed figure among a gay box party.

"THAT'S DOLLY GRAY," you would have overheard, spoken with interest, enthusiasm. "She has a wonderful assortment of dresses. And they say they cost her so little.

"I met her at a house party some months ago. She wasn't quite so gay then. She is pretty, charming and interesting. But it seems she was still wearing a flimsy summer frock—and this was in October. She knew that everybody noticed it.

"Why, I wouldn't have recognized her this evening if I hadn't heard, only yesterday, of the remarkable things she has been doing.

"You see, Dolly was having a hard time making both ends meet. Taking care of her mother and younger brother didn't leave much money for clothes. Plainly, Dolly was missing many little social events simply because she couldn't keep up with other girls. The old question of 'nothing to wear.'

"But Dolly can think. That's the point I'm coming to.

"She had looked, with longing eyes, at a dress in the window of one of the high-rent dress shops. The price tag read $40.00. And she wondered just what she could have that dress for if the shop didn't have to pay rent at all.

"They say that necessity is the mother of invention. In Dolly's case, it certainly is true. She started to figure out a method for owning a frock as good and stylish as that $40.00 dress, without helping to pay the rent of that shop. She soon hit upon a new wonderful idea.

"She knew how hard it is for a girl to make her own clothes without dressmaking experience. Knitting and embroidering were easy, pleasant occupations for her, as they are for most girls. Many an evening had passed quickly with the embroidery needle. But fussing with patterns was something she had never been quite able to master.

"As I said, Dolly hit upon a new idea. It was so simple that she wondered why she or somebody else hadn't thought of it before. In less than a day and without any previous dressmaking experience and without any patterns, she went marching proudly down Fifth Avenue showing off an exact duplicate of the $40.00 dress she had yearned for—and it cost her only $7.00."

Dolly's Secret Can Now Be Yours

There must be thousands of Dolly Grays throughout the country who would like to know Dolly's secret—and they can. So can you. A company has been formed to tell those anxious to dress well about this remarkable discovery.

No matter where you live, you can enjoy the happiness and popularity of Dolly Gray. Just fill in the coupon at corner of this page and mail it today. You will receive full particulars by return mail without any cost or obligation.

At Last, Science Measures the Great Star, Betelgeuse

THE astronomers have finally taken the measure and determined the distance of Betelgeuse, the giant red star in the constellation of Orion. At a meeting of the National Academy of Sciences in Washington last month, Dr. S. A. Mitchell, director of the Leander McCormick Observatory at the University of Virginia, announced that the distance of this mighty sun from the earth had been calculated to be 175 light years.

With the measurements of the apparent diameter of Betelgeuse made about two years ago by Prof. A. A. Michelson of the University of Chicago this makes possible the determination of the actual diameter of the star, which is found to be 242,000,000 miles.

A light year is the distance which light, traveling at a velocity of 186,000 miles in a second, traverses in a year. Light takes about eight minutes to come from the sun. The distance of Betelgeuse is so vast a number of miles that it is best understood by reducing the scale of measurement. If the distance of the sun from the earth be taken as one inch, making the diameter of our solar system across the orbit of Neptune, the outermost planet, some five feet and a half, then the great star Orion would be 175 miles away.

On the same scale the sun would be a mere grain of dust one-hundredth of an inch in diameter, while Betelgeuse would be somewhere between the sizes of a golf ball and a tennis ball.

The announcement of the distance of Betelgeuse as measured at the University of Virginia was part of an announcement by Dr. Mitchell of determinations of the distances of some 600 stars. The distance of the giant in Orion corresponds exactly with the average of observations previously made at the Mount Wilson Observatory in California and at other noted observatories.

Measurement of the distances of the stars is made on exactly the same principle as is used by a surveyor to measure the distance across a river he cannot cross, or by a range-finder to determine the distance of an enemy vessel at sea. Everybody knows that the same thing looked at from varying positions of view has a varying background. If a line be measured and the distant object viewed from the two ends of it and the angles which it makes with that "base line" accurately measured, the distance may easily be calculated by trigonometry.

That is the way the astronomers measure the distances of the stars. The only difficulty is getting a long enough base line. The biggest base line obtainable is the diameter of the earth's orbit, some 186,000,000 miles, but as against the vast distances of stellar space this is almost too minute to use as a measuring rod. The variation in the position of Betelgeuse at the extremes of this distance amounts to about as much as that of 21 inches seen at a distance of 4000 miles. In the case of a star this angle is called the "parallax." These determinations are taken six months apart for each star, since the earth is then at opposite sides of its orbit.

The work of the Leander McCormick Observatory, under Dr. Mitchell's direction, in measuring the distances of 600 stars is considered of great importance, as until about 10 years ago the distances of not more than 100 were known with approximate accuracy. Distance measurements are essential to all determinations of a star's real diameter and motion through space, and are of great value in determining the velocity and direction of the motion of our own sun, carrying with it the earth and its brother planets through the pathless abysses of space.

A new method for the measurement of distance, depending upon the velocity of light, has been predicated as a possibility by Prof. Michelson. It would, he said, make possible the measurement of the distances of inaccessible points without the use of a tape line at any stage of the process.

The new method is hoped to be a sequel of a most accurate redetermination of the velocity of light which Prof. Michelson hopes to carry out this summer at the Mount Wilson Observatory in California. The velocity is known to be approximately 186,500 miles a second, but this is not accurate enough for Prof. Michelson, who said that he hoped to get the velocity accurately to within a mile.

This would be to within one part in 186,500. If, then, the velocity of light were known so exactly it would be possible, by using such apparatus, to measure the time light took to go to earth from the distant point to be measured and so determine its distance with an error of not more than three-tenths of an inch in a mile, which is as accurate as all except the most painstaking surveys.

Dr. Michelson showed a model of his new "interferometer," constructed to measure the size of many stars more distant than the famous Betelgeuse.

The interferometer is an instrument based on a simple principle, which makes use of a property of light waves similar to one of sound waves. If two tuning forks vibrating at different tones are heard together the waves "interfere" and at times an increase of sound and at other times silence results. Similarly, if light waves can be made to interfere, a series of bands, or "interference fringes" of alternate light and darkness is produced.

These are observed if a star is viewed through a telescope the main lens of which is covered except for two small holes on either side. Where the image of the star would ordinarily be there is then seen a band of these fringes. Now the key to all this is that there is a mathematical relation between the distance apart of these two holes in the shutter of the lens, the size and distance apart of the "fringes," and the apparent diameter of the distant star. If that and its distance are known, its diameter may be easily calculated.

hem, the founder of St. Joseph's Church, at Eleventh and Biddle streets, the first edifice in America devoted to a German-speaking congregation.

Not only did Father Helias, as he always was known to his brother members of the Jesuit order, build this cornerstone of the German Catholic Church in St. Louis, but he labored for years among the scattered settlers of the north and south banks of the Missouri River, establishing between 1838 and 1846 the first churches in Jefferson City and Cole County, churches in Moniteau County, and three in Osage County.

Only a few weeks ago there was brought to St. Louis University by Monsignor Tannrath, rector of the Cathedral, the early records of the church at Taos, Mo., where Father Helias met a dramatic end. Upon one of these records the old Belgian priest had drawn a crude map, showing the churches built by him and the order in which they were established.

This map, to the student of early Missouri history, is interesting not only for the pioneering record it contains, but also because of linguistic divisions of the settlements which dotted the wilderness, as it then was, and in which Father Helias built his places of worship. There were the French at Cote sans Dessein, largely of Canadian extraction; the Westphalian Germans of Osage County, whom he gathered into a settlement he named New Westphalia; the Irish at Hibernia; the Bavarians and Belgians at other points and the English-speaking at Jefferson City.

In all, the mission field assigned to Father Helias covered in the beginning 600 miles, with 18 stations, located in 11 counties, Franklin, Gasconade, Osage, Cole, Moniteau and Cooper, being those on the south of the river. Callaway, Boone, Howard, Warren and Montgomery counties on the north were also due for annual visits, and the mission field gradually extended until it was 800 miles of primitive journeying to reach the 23 missions to which Father Helias expanded his work.

Those readers of this article who are surprised at the linguistic difficulties which confronted Father Helias in his mission work in the interior of Missouri probably will be more astonished to know that St. Joseph's Church was founded because of the fact that when Father Helias arrived at St. Louis University on Aug. 25, 1835, there was no place in the city of St. Louis, or anywhere else in America, for that matter, where a German Catholic could hear his native language spoken in the services.

The English-speaking Catholics of the city were no better off, for French was the language of the old Cathedral, the only Catholic church in St. Louis at that time, and it was not until in the early '40's that the College Church, intended for English-speaking Catholics, was begun by the university authorities on Ninth street, near Washington avenue.

Father Helias had been in St. Louis but a few days when he was struck by the discrepancy between the amount of German conversation heard on the streets, the German emigration tide to this point already having begun, and the number of Germans he saw attending services at the Cathedral. Investigation showed that the German Catholics of St. Louis were even at that time a goodly flock, but without a shepherd.

Speaking their language perfectly, Father Helias had no trouble in gathering many of them together, and organizing a congregation. Fitting up a chapel in the university building then at Tenth street and Washington avenue, afterwards used as the law school, he opened, in 1837, the second Catholic house of worship in the metropolis of Missouri. It also was the first national church in America, by this meaning a church in whose services the tongue of some foreign nation was used, practically coincident with the abandonment of French in the church service at the old Cathedral.

The precedent there established has been followed extensively until now we have in St. Louis services in Spanish, Italian, German, Polish, Bohemian and other tongues, but the German church organized by Father Helias, now grown into St. Joseph's, at Eleventh and Biddle, where Father Moeller recently celebrated his golden jubilee, was the forerunner of them all, and preceded by several years the English-speaking church connected with St. Louis University.

The work done by Father Helias after his organization of St. Joseph's has been preserved to the world in a book entitled "The Founder of the Missions of Central Missouri," by Auguste Lebrocquy, S. J. It tells of the last days of the Belgian missionary, spent alone at Taos, in the little stone hut near the stone church that had been built through the generosity of his aristocratic mother.

Father Helias refused the offers of an assistant, nor would he have a servant. Three times a day he himself rang the bells of his little church, from time to time warning his people:

"If you do not hear the Angelus, then know that something has happened to the old man."

Came then the morning when the Angelus failed to sound!

The residents gathered in frightened groups, and tried to console themselves that the good father had been called away to visit the sick. Finally, however, they summoned up courage to approach the church.

Lying prone between the house and the bell tower they found him, one hand outstretched as though in benediction.

Naturally, a man had better not 'interfere,' if by that is meant ill-tempered criticism. But it's a pity for a wife to regard his little suggestions as interference. I think she is decidedly overstepping her boundaries in the partnership if she assumes an attitude of dictating in affairs of the house. Let them talk over home management together; he may be able to make suggestions that will help. And why not indulge some of his personal tastes?

Perhaps he is as much opposed to blue in the living room as she is to red; hasn't he a right to say so? Why not talk it over, and try to meet on a color that both enjoy? And to every young wife I say: Do let the man have his own smoking room, or den, which he can furnish in execrable taste if he wants to—but let him have it just as he likes! There's too much said about its being her home; let them make it their home, even to the choosing of the dinner plates!"

In the matter of personal appearance Mrs. Woodruff agreed without question. The Decalogues say:

To the man: "Cultivate neatness and personal cleanliness. No woman can help contrasting a well-dressed and neatly turned-out man acquaintance with a slovenly husband. A wife wishes to look up to her husband, to be proud of him and to admire and respect him."

To the woman: "Do not permit your person to become unattractive. A slovenly wife makes a truant husband."

"Both true, of course. But there's something to be said to each in regard to the other's personal appearance. He must remember that it takes money to keep a wife so dressed that she is attractive; she can do a good deal with her needle if she is clever, but no woman can make a dress without cloth, any more than bricks without straw. And she must remember that he's helpless with the needle, and it takes a bit of effort on her part, in the way of repairing, to keep him looking as trim as she desires. Each must help the other. But there's no reason why she should attend to his wardrobe if he won't attend to hers!"

"Be cheerful," runs the advice to the man, "even though it may sometimes tax you to the utmost. Nothing reacts more surely on the nerves of a tired woman to engender suspicion and ill-temper than the homecoming of a gloomy, taciturn husband.

"Be considerate. The average woman is a bundle of highly strung nerves. If she complains, it is rarely for insufficient reasons. Her efforts to make your home clean, inviting and comfortable merit appreciation and co-operation.

"Do not scold. Sharp words and petty fault-finding eventually react to dampen affection, if not kill it altogether. Also, they will cause misunderstanding and engender a spirit of opposition and retaliation distinctly incompatible with sympathy and co-operation."

Now see the advice given to woman on the subject of moods.

"Smile. Be attentive in little things. The smile is an antidote to the toxic effects of ill-humor. Consideration for your husband's feelings makes him respectful of yours. An indifferent wife is often supplanted by an ardent friend.

"Be tactful. Be feminine. Men, in the last analysis, are but overgrown children. They do not mind coaxing, but they resent coercion. Most men prefer their opposites. Femininity attracts and compels them. By the same token, masculinity in the female repels."

Mrs. Woodruff thought very hard over all this.

"It's such a tremendously big subject—it runs the gamut of the emotions—it concerns all of a human being's temperament—that it can't be covered in a few fixed rules. But, in a general way, the most of this advice could be made to apply to both. Both should be careful, both should smile, both should be tactful and attentive and considerate and avoid scolding.

"I wish," she went on, "that some wives wouldn't let themselves get so preoccupied with their own amusements and activities that they can't think or talk about anything else! A man comes home from the office tired, perhaps harassed by business perplexities, and his great need is for something to brighten his thoughts, to take him completely away, mentally, from the anxieties of his daily grind. If he is received by a woman whose mind is so full of her own teas and bridge that she absent-mindedly greets him, sits almost silent through dinner, pours the coffee while vaguely muttering, 'I've decided to leave the Browns off my list for next month's tea,' as if thinking aloud, and at last rises to say: 'I'm so sorry to leave you this evening, dear, but I've promised to get the prizes and cards ready for the club tomorrow'—what sort of married life is that?

"But there's plenty to be said on the other side! It's quite true that the average home woman is a creature of highly strung nerves, and one reason that they are so ready to display themselves is that they lack the many-sided interests that the man has. If a woman's life is a bondage to her home, then she is bound to be more despondent and irritable than the man who lives an interesting life, full of many agreeable contacts. The home-bound woman is starved. She longs for beauty; but there's no time or money for her to visit picture galleries, to enjoy artistic shops, to hear good music or attend the theater. She may have a fine intellect, but she does not mingle with clever people, she hears no able talk on current topics — politics — international questions—as the man does. His business may be the sort that brings him continually in touch with new themes, such as the newspaper business, or public work; a home-bound wife finds no novelty in life more stimulating than a new form of bread pudding. It's time that the husbands of such wives should realize their crying need for new contacts, instead of blaming them for their disagreeable tempers."

"Do not keep a lodger," says the Decalogue to men. "The constant presence of an outsider in the home not infrequently gives rise to ill-founded and unjust suspicions against the wife. She is only human, so don't expect her to be impervious to the direct or indirect influence which such a person may exert—and to the husband's own undoing."

To the woman it adds: "Do not receive attentions from other men. Husbands often are jealous and some are suspicious without cause. Do not supply the cause. Friendly attentions from other may be received in a spirit of perfect innocence. When reported by the busybody they become distorted, often criminal in character."

"That attacks the problem from the wrong side altogether," declared Mrs. Woodruff, stoutly. "Instead of warning couples against arousing jealousy, they should be warned against allowing themselves to feel jealous—without cause. A woman who is the right sort of a wife and who truly loves the man she has chosen to marry, can safely have other men for her friends."

How Man Got His First Shoes

adjust to the weather, so that he need not pant like a polar bear in the tropics or shiver like a monkey in the arctics.

He can outsoar the eagle on his self-made wings. He can outrun the deer in his automobile. He can dive longer than the whale in his submarine. He can lift an elephant in air with his engines.

But man is only beginning to make himself at home on this planet. He is not yet awake to his power and possibilities. He is lacking in a thousand things as necessary to his comfort as shoes and does not yet know that he lacks them. We are still living in the barefoot age for the most part, hardening our soles by bruises and cuts, which we might avoid if we knew a little more and used what little we do know.

Any hair made naturally curly in 20 minutes with Marvelous new Spanish Liquid

The Spanish Beggar's Treasure

by Charity Winthrop

TOMORROW I would sail for home! Deep happiness filled me as I glanced around the brilliant ballroom, gay with the many-colored uniforms of the Spanish officers and foreign diplomats who had come to my father's farewell party at the Consulate.

Quickly I slipped out of the great room and down shadowy corridors to the little patio or courtyard, where I stood for a moment by the tinkling fountain with my face lifted to the stars.

Home!

Before my eyes passed a glittering vision of the happy reunions, the parties I would have. Imported frocks to wear, the romance of Spain surrounding me . . .

But then I would have to leave off my mantilla!

Cold unhappiness seized me as I remembered. Quickly I tossed off the filmy shawl which covered my head, and leaned forward, peering down into the quiet lower pool of the fountain where my face was reflected, softly lighted by the dim iron lantern that hung in the dancing jet above.

There it was! That straight, stringy hair that had shadowed my life with unhappiness. Since, childhood it had been my crowning misery, the butt of horrid jokes, the subject of remarks that stung me into furious sensitiveness.

All the other girls I knew seemed to have been blessed with glorious, unruly curls or soft, clinging waves that framed their faces—no prettier than mine, I knew—in beauty that was complete.

But, Oh! my stringy, Indian locks!

I closed my eyes before I drew up again the all-concealing mantilla that had proved such a blessing since we had come to Spain.

In deep dejection I strolled through the dark, Moorish archway and out into the little plaza before the house.

Moonlight, slanting down over the red-tiled roofs, filled the tiny square with a misty, silver light. From a window near at hand, floated the sweet tinkling of a mandolin, and a voice crooning a gentle serenade.

Romance! Love and beauty! And not for me—ever.

I raised my hands to my hair while tears streamed down my face.

"Digamelo, senorita," a quiet voice spoke close by my side. "Why is it that you cry?"

Startled, I whirled around, to find old Miguel, the beggar, crouched in the shadow of an archway. Then my fear ebbed away, for Miguel and I were good friends. Every afternoon he would come to sit by the fountain in the courtyard and dabble his fingers in the cool water while he told me beautiful stories of Old Spain. I had treated him kindly and he was grateful.

"Ah, Miguel," I cried impulsively. "If only one of your fairy stories would come true!"

And then I told him why I cried: the homecoming that should make me sublimely happy, the parties that would be given for me, and the misery that would spoil it all when I would have to uncover my straight, ugly hair that the people at home might have forgotten by now.

When I had finished, Miguel was silent for a moment, staring into the shadows. Then: "You have been good to me, senorita," he said at last. "So let me tell you another tale of Old Spain—but this one true, as I live."

"Many years ago," his tale began, "a Castilian prince was wedded to a Moorish beauty. Her hair was black as a raven's wing and straight as an arrow. Like you, this lady wanted los pelos rizos (curly hair). Her husband offered thousands of pesos to the man who would fulfill her wish. The prize fell to Pedro, the droguero. Out of roots and herbs he brewed a potion that converted the princess' straight unruly hair into a glorious mass of ringlet curls.

"Pedro, son of the son of Pedro, has that secret today. Years ago I did him a great service. Here you will find him, go to him and tell your wish. Adios, senorita, vaya con Dios."

Of course I didn't believe him! It was all too weird. But possibly you too have known that despair which will make you grasp at any straw.

In a moment I was off, keeping to the shadows, while, with mantilla over my face, I searched the nearby Calle for the address Miguel had given me.

At last I found it; a quaint old apothecary shop, where Pedro, a bent, white haired Spaniard greeted me courteously. Before I had finished my stammering explanation, Pedro smiled gently and, bowing, vanished into the back of the store. Presently he returned with a dusty, crystal flask which he handed me.

By this time I was terribly excited—I could hardly wait until I reached home. When I finally stood alone in my locked room, I shook down my hair feverishly and applied the liquid sparingly with my comb.

Immediately a radiant transformation began to take place!

Each stroke of the comb seemed to warm my stringy locks into a lustrous sheen which glowed in the gentle waves and ringlets quickly beginning to form around the flushed, excited face that I could see in my mirror! In just twenty minutes, I tossed the comb aside. A miracle had been performed!

Even the long, stormy voyage from Cadiz to New York, when the most naturally curly hair usually becomes bedraggled and straight in the salt spray, could not conquer the fluffy ringlets and waves that I could create at will.

And my "debut" into the old town was a glorious triumph!

I wore again the old mantilla that had been my only refuge in Spain, for, frankly, I wanted revenge on several girls who, I knew, would not have forgotten that once they had been able to laugh at my stringy hair.

Oh! the ecstasy, as we marched down the grand stairway to the ballroom, with everyone smiling a welcome up at me, to lightly throw off my mantilla, releasing the billowing curls and ringlets which I brushed aside with a fine show of impatience!

That was the most glorious night of my life.

The next morning when I awoke, drowsily happy, the thought came to me that I had no right to keep this great secret to myself. There were thousands of women who had suffered just as I had, who would give anything to know my precious secret.

So I took a small sample of the Spanish liquid to Winnifred Ralston who had a cousin who is a chemist in the Century Laboratories. For days he worked, analyzing the liquid. Finally he solved the problem, isolated the two Spanish herbs, the important ingredients.

They experimented on fifty women and the results were simply astounding. Now, he tells me, the Century Chemists are prepared to supply the wonderful Spanish Curling Liquid to women everywhere.

Take advantage of their generous trial offer—

I told Winnifred's cousin I did not want one penny for the information I had given him. I was only too glad to know the formula was to be so easily available. I did make one stipulation, however. I insisted that he introduce the discovery by selling it for a limited time at actual laboratory cost plus postage so that as many women as possible could take advantage of it. This he agreed to do.

That is the opportunity you have now. For, believe me, who was once called [illegible] matter how straight, dull and unmanageable your hair is, this Spanish Liquid Curler will work wonders for you.

A great many women would have more charming figures, if only they knew how to buy them!

prove how wrong this idea is—and prove it in just one fitting!

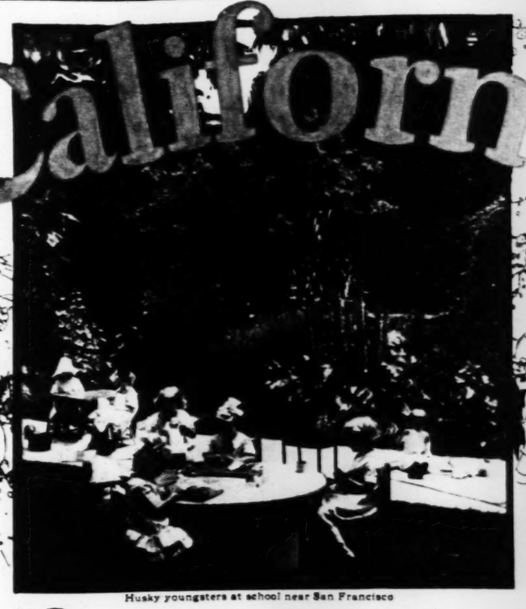
California



Husky youngsters at school near San Francisco

For the next generation-

WHERE WOULD YOUR BABY CHOOSE TO LIVE and grow up, supposing that your baby had a voice in the family councils?

Would it not be California?

In California babies weigh from two to four pounds more at the end of the first year than in other parts of the country, according to Federal statistics, and children of six years and under are taller and heavier than children elsewhere.

Of twelve cities, picked out by the American Child Hygiene Association as having the lowest infant mortality rate in a wide range of population, six are in California. San Francisco, for example, has an infant mortality rate of 51, as against an average for the country of 77.9. Everywhere there is more clear and sunny growing weather for children as well as for the trees and plants.

The Best in Schools

When these children reach school age they are taken into a superb school system. Teaching requirements are higher, salaries are better, and school buildings better designed in California, and much of the teaching is done out of doors. In the rural districts are many "union schools", notably beautiful in architecture, to which the children are brought and returned by motor busses rolling over the magnificent California highways. In their playtime, they hike, they hunt, they fish, they play tennis and golf twelve months in the year; a little later they go to college (the University of California is the second largest university in the world) and contribute to California's astonishing yearly quota of tennis and track champions, and All-American football stars.

And When the Child Becomes a Man—

—here is California, with its great Central Valley—an empire half-built—waiting for his hand.

Will he be a farmer? Each year seven thousand new twenty-acre farms are ready for families, and the average California farm produces a yearly crop twice as valuable as the average for the United States.

Will he be a manufacturer or merchant? Between 1910 and 1920 the output of California's factories increased from $771,291,000 to $2,849,000,000—over 243%, and more than 53% of all manufacturing in the State is concentrated in the district around San Francisco Bay, the greatest land-locked shipping port in the world. A hundred opportunities lie open to him to throw himself into the mounting stream of California's industrial and commercial development.

Let Us Tell You More About California

Why We Tell Our Friends to Come This Summer

By A FORMER EASTERNER

HAVING lived in various sections of the East we have many friends and former neighbors who write us asking about the best time to come to Southern California.

We always say that though we love all seasons here, they should come this summer. And, because many Easterners do not seem to realize it, we always add that summer is cool here.

Just to prove our point we enclose this statement of the temperatures for 44 years—U. S. Government official readings in a great city in this section:

Average mean temperatures, 44 years	Junes	66
Average mean temperatures, 44 years	Julys	70
Average mean temperatures, 44 years	Augusts	71
Average mean temperatures, 44 years	Septembers	69

Ninety nights under blankets during a three months' stay in summer and ninety perfect days for glorious activity or lazy relaxation, we tell them. Summer is the rainless season, too, so you can plan each day's program a week or a month ahead.

Then we recount the things to see and do here—the great desert like Sahara, the rugged mountains and snow-capped peaks, the great forests, the expansive groves, the miles of coast line including rocky shores and sandy beaches, the old Spanish missions, the motion picture studios, and the 4,000 miles of paved boulevards to take you to all the beauties and unique sights of this land.

We tell of the trout in mountain brooks, of the 200 and 300-pound catches in ocean fishing grounds, of picturesque and sporty golf courses, of hikes, of bridle paths leading through verdant meadows or up the sides of mountains, of exhilarating surf bathing.

There are so many things to talk about. All are unusual and interesting to our Eastern friends. In fact, even we who live here never tire of the things to do in Southern California.

Southern California is the new gateway to Hawaii.

And the friends who take our advice are more than pleased with what they find.

They write afterward to tell us what a wonderful trip they had. They are enthusiastic over the benefits they receive in this strange, new summerland.

The complete change, they say, rebuilds, revitalizes—makes them fresh and eager for the following year. They return whenever they can—some come every summer now that they know what is here.

And no matter what their circumstances are they all find a summer that fits their pocketbooks. There are finest hotels or modest boarding places to live in.

The side trips need not be expensive. In fact, Southern California's most beautiful and unique wonders cost nothing to see. And the round-trip fares on all transcontinental railroads during the summer between May and October are only a little more than the usual one-way fare.

These and many other Californians have made it a rule to advise their friends to "come this summer." It's good advice.

And it is our advice to you, who want a new and better summer than any you have ever had. Your local railroad ticket agent can give you the information you need. Or send the coupon for our booklet.

You will find here fine hotels with rates, on the average, less than in most other sections, and in no other place will you find a wider range in accommodations

Restoring health to thousands—this simple fresh food!

The buoyant health and vigor which are every man's birthright—

The sparkle and animation which every woman craves—

Today we realize that they are impossible without one thing: a body kept free from poisons! You must get rid regularly of the poisonous waste that accumulates in the intestines.

Drugs and cathartics are worse than useless, for they have to be taken in larger and larger doses, and at last the weakened intestinal muscles refuse to respond at all. That is why so many physicians and hospitals today are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast.

It is not a medicine, but a fresh corrective food. Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants which help to increase the bulk of our concentrated modern diet, and gently encourage the intestinal muscles to act for themselves.

Regular daily eating of Fleischmann's Yeast is helping thousands of men and women to regain the splendid vigor of normal health. Like any other natural food, it must be eaten regularly to achieve results.

Eat two or three cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water.

Get several cakes at a time—they will keep several days in a cool, dry place. Besure you get Fleischmann's Yeast! All grocers have it.

Back to normal health!

A New York woman was badly run down. "In a serious state of lowered vitality I became afflicted with a series of boils," she writes, "and constipation soon became a contributing factor to my continued ill health. My doctor prescribed Fleischmann's Yeast. In a short time the boils cleared up, and intestinal action was restored to normal."

Oil Shampoos, of Course

But olive oil, say authorities

By V. K. CASSADY, Chief Chemist

Dear Madam:

Every authority on hair beauty recommends and urges the oil shampoo to benefit scalp and hair roots. And to leave hair soft, fine, gleaming.

Hair must not be left dry and brittle by the cleansing wash, these authorities say.

Some time ago, with this in mind, I started to develop a perfect shampoo for you. I talked with hair specialists. I asked 1000 women what they desired most in a shampoo. I made hundreds of careful experiments.

Olive oil found best

I discovered that olive oil was best for a shampoo. Of all oils it does most to soften and beautify your hair, while it cleanses.

And that is what hair experts, and 1000 women told me they wanted. A gentler shampoo—to clean thoroughly, yet leave hair softly gleaming and pliant.

With olive oil I blended palm oil and a quick cleansing element. Results were amazing. An abundant lather—mild but penetrating.

It freshens the scalp skin. Removes all grime and foreign matter. Detaches and removes every scale of dandruff. Hair is beautifully clean—but not dry or brittle. Instead, soft, fine and lustrous as new-woven silk.

I request your judgment

Now favor me by testing this PALMOLIVE SHAMPOO I have perfected for you. One shampoo will demonstrate the difference I have pointed out.

I am sure you will be thankful for this gentler shampoo. It gives the results you have wanted in prettier hair.

THE CORNER GROCERY

(COPYRIGHT.)

By W. E. HILL

Saturday morning in the corner grocery, showing, in the immediate foreground (left), the little housewife who has forgotten her shopping list and (right) the man with the unerring instinct for picking the wrong canteloupes, making a bad guess. In the center of the group, Mrs. Addie Robbins is showing the clerk her very grandest manner over the purchase of a pound of cooking apples.

Bert, the handsome clerk, fresh, maybe, but handsome. Oh, the things he says to one! Only this morning when Mrs. Apthorp's maid, Velma, stepped in politely to do the ordering and asked "Is them eggs fresh?" what do you suppose he answered? "Don't know," he said, "wait till I go ask the hen." Velma hasn't been able to keep her mind on the cleaning all day long. Just laughs and laughs every time she thinks of what Bert said. The rascal.

"Listen, Bert, we got any napthalene? We keep Blank's bread? And she wants six Spanish onions—we don't keep 'em, do we?" The grocer's daughter helping out on a crowded Saturday night.

"Gee, ain't I the dumb, Dora? Can y' imagine? I was thinking you handed me a quarter instead of the ten dollar bill!" Miss Stauch, the cashier, making a lark out of each and every mishap.

"Sure thing, Mrs. Dropling, your order went out two hours ago—be there any moment now." If you look hard, you will see Mrs. Dropling's order peeking out from behind the grocer's manly form

Mrs. Sadden and Mrs. De Spair take boarders. It's so lonely, you know, with all those extra rooms in one's house. Mrs. Sadden has been digging around in berry baskets, hoping to find proof of her grocer's perfidy in the bottom berries. Mrs. De Spair has been to tell her grocer that he is a thief and a liar and that, moreover, he had no business to send her a wilted head of lettuce.

"What have you that's especially nice this morning, Mr. Appelbaum?"

Lawrence, the delivery boy, plowing his way through a batch of customers with a rush order.
